SUMMARY.

The Petrograd newspapers are preparing the public for a new withdrawal, necessitated by the enemy's overwhelming superiority in guns and munitions.

The "Times" correspondent at Warsaw does not believe that there will be any fighting in the vicinity of the city.

When the Duma meets on Sunday the Government will acquaint the country with the military situation.

A Petrograd communique says that the enemy at Rozani unsuccessfully attempted to advance between the Narew and the Brok.

The enemy's continuous attacks at Maydan and north of Grubetszow were repulsed. They lost enormously.

They were, however, driven back on Wednesday across the river in disorder.

A Berlin communique states:—The Russians delivered repeated attacks on our front, south of the Narew. All failed with heavy losses.

The enemy, it is added, fled after desperate hand-to-hand fighting.

Allied airmen raided Zeebrugge and Knocke. The mole and bridge of the Maritime Canal at Zeebrugge were damaged.

On the western front Sir John French reports that active mining operations have been in progress on both sides the last few days.

There have been intermittent artillery engagements, but no infantry attacks.

The Germans have imposed a fine of £200,000 on the city of Brussels, on account of the destruction of a Zeppelin at Evere.

The Italians have made marked progress in the Cordevole Valley. The enemy advanced in force in the Padola Valley, but were repulsed.

They attempted to advance, but were driven back after suffering great losses.

The Turks are reported to have obtained large supplies of heavy ammunition, thus enabling them to keep up a sustained artillery fire.

Anglo-French aeroplanes again attacked Smyrna, and destroyed the gasworks and petrol depot.

The Exchange Telegraph Company's correspondent at the Dardanelles reports that the Allies are achieving wonders by patience and organisation.

Turkish prisoners, he adds, are dejected. If the Allies can now press their advantage final success is assured.

A secret wireless plant, believed to be German, has been discovered at a residence in Lisbon.

Five arrests were made. The prisoners confessed that they had erected three other stations in the capital.

Three thousand miners attended the National Conference of the mining industry in the King's Way Opera House, London.

A resolution was carried emphasising the urgency for owners and workmen to secure the greatest possible output of coal.

The military authorities in London have arrested [illegible] alleged German agents of various nationalities, four of whom have confessed.

All will be tried in camera for attempting to collect information for the enemy regarding the fleet and the army.

Up to 10 o'clock last night the total realised in New South Wales as the result of the Australia Day appeal was £[illegible].

The street collections amounted to £[illegible].

The day was celebrated throughout the State with the utmost enthusiasm.

The route march by the naval and military forces in Sydney was witnessed by many thousands.

The presence of a number of the wounded soldiers was the principal attraction in the procession.

A contingent of the expeditionary forces who are to leave shortly for the front was a prominent feature.

The bands turned out in force, popular programmes being provided at various centres in the city.

Nearly 20 bands gave their services, and helped to enliven the proceedings from morning till night.

Auction sales of produce were conducted outside the Soldiers' Club, and at various Red Cross depots, high prices being realised.

A feature of the celebration at Randwick was the planting of Australian trees in the playground of the Superior Public School.

In Victoria the people gave generously. The weather was fine in Melbourne, and the streets were crowded.

It took the form of an historic review of Australia.

Over 10,000 boys and girls will assemble at the Sydney Cricket Ground to-day to form a living Red Cross on a White Australia.

The platform campaign to stimulate recruiting in New South Wales will open at the Exhibition to-night. The Governor presides.

Meetings will be held simultaneously at Balmain, Leichhardt, Newtown, Paddington, North Sydney, Alexandria, and Parramatta.

Reports from the country associations received by the Premier yesterday showed that a further [illegible] had enlisted.

This brings the total enlistments by the associations up to date to 2225.

The reports also contain the names of 235 additional men who undertake to enlist at an early date.

The response by recruits at Victoria Barracks on Australia Day was disappointing. Only 100 men went up to offer their services.

The main features of the income tax proposals were laid before the Federal Labour caucus yesterday.

The Government proposes to have an exemption of £[illegible] per annum, with an additional £13 per annum for each child.

The tax is to be a progressive one, commencing at 3d in the £, and ranging up to 5s in the £.

There will be a differential rate for incomes from personal exertion and those derived from investments and property.

Mr. J. C. Watson returned to Sydney yesterday by the R.M.S. Makura after a five months' tour of England, America, and Canada.

The main thing which impressed him in England was the large number of men drilling in every town and village he visited.

There was only one feeling in the United States, he said, in regard to the war—that the Allies would be successful.

The Defence Department has decided to duplicate where necessary district headquarters staffs.

The draughts championship of New South Wales has been won by E. W. Smith, of Newtown.

A married woman named Fitzgerald was knocked down by a tram in Elizabeth-street yesterday and killed.

A Chilian sailor was committed for trial yesterday on a charge of the murder of a seaman on the barque [illegible].

The Minister for Defence promised to consider their grievances, and the strikers agreed to return to work.

The proposals for the formation of a coalition Ministry in New Zealand during the war have resulted in failure.

Australia Day quite disorganised trade in the city markets yesterday.

In the hardware markets little was done. Continental cement was quoted as high as 25s a cask.

Oils were steady, and though practically no merchant trade was reported, a good country business was done.

Prices generally were firm, and in a few cases only did the quotations show any change on late rates.

The butter situation showed a slightly easier tendency yesterday. Country reports were more promising.

Forecast.—Unsettled, with rain extending over the State generally, and some thunder; northerly winds and mild temperatures.

The same remarks apply equally to the Pyjamas quoted below, and, furthermore, both articles are

MADE IN AUSTRALIA

from Australian-grown wool, from material manufactured by John Vicars and Co., of Marrickville. These pure All-wool Flannel Shirts are obtainable in a variety of tastefully assorted single or double stripes on light background. STANDARD OIL ENGINES,
MARINE, STATIONARY, HOISTING,
OPERATING ON BENZINE, DISTILLATE, OR KEROSENE.

"Standard" Oil Engines are generally admitted to be the most Reliable Oil Engines on the market. The Engines are built for Hard Work: the construction is most simple, and the Working Parts are easily accessible.

Some four years ago we supplied Mr. A. R. Smithers, of Bermagui, with a 12-h.p. Double-Cylinder "Standard" Marine Engine, and some two years since we fitted this Engine to run on Kerosene. Mr. Smithers, writing to us recently, says:—"I have been using your Hydro-Carbon Gas Producer for a period of about 18 months, and have had the very best satisfaction from same. Our launch has done over 30,000 miles in that time, in all sorts of weather conditions, and both for economy and reliability I consider your Kerosene Attachment cannot be excelled in any respect whatever. I may also state that we have not had the slightest trouble with the Attachment, no matter how rough the conditions were.

Every minute a riot of good fun. Never in the history of Vaudeville has such a combination of wonderfully-trained denizens of the jungle been brought together in one turn.

There are 20 Monkeys, every one of which is perfectly trained. A novel and entirely original turn, scintillating and studded with gem features that baffle description, and will make you sit up and forget war-time worries.

"Not An Act, Merely An Event."

That is how he is billed, but he is a Delightfully Droll and Hilariously Amusing Cuss, who is Recommended by all who see him as the supreme tonic for a Fit of the Blues.

If you are frightened to laugh, and to laugh loud and long, get up when he comes on, and watch the cars in Castlereagh-street until his turn is over.

YOUR SON,
YOUR BROTHER,
YOUR HUSBAND,

Your nephew, your cousin, or your relation, whatever he may be, he is not only a soldier but a man, a man of right, a man of venture, a man of patriotism, a man of all the true instincts of his race, and worthy to be held in remembrance for all time. This we can help you to do in a faithful photograph enlargement, either taken from life or from any photograph you may have of him.

Before he goes to the front get him to come in and have a good photo, enlargement of himself in his uniform, or, if he has already gone to the front, send us his photograph, and get a good enlargement taken from it; then, in years to come, you will have his lifelike picture in uniform as a cure that he did his duty as a man in the great war. Memories are good, but a true portrait is of great aid to memory; it will always give pleasure.

WE GUARANTEE A TRUE LIKENESS.
Get one of our Two Guinea Oil Paintings, absolutely true to life. We allow one-third discount off photos. of soldiers in uniform; that is, only 28s to pay for a life-size (or as large as we can make it from the photo.), a 20 x 16 Oil Painting, in a splendid frame complete. Send us his photo. in uniform, and get a beautiful everlasting picture and a true likeness in Oils for 28s.

IF TAKEN FROM LIFE.

WINTER TYRES.

GOODYEAR

You who seek quality Tyres—sturdy, safe, enduring Tyres—need Goodyear Tyres NOW. No other Tyre offers such inducements. No other Tyre commands such sale, such prestige, such respect.

The All-Weather Tread is an exclusive Goodyear feature. In a dozen ways it is the most efficient anti-skid that's known.

It is double-thick, and made of rubber, toughened by a secret Goodyear process. This means maximum resistance both to wear and puncture.

The grips are deep and sharp. They last for thousands of miles. Their grasp on wet or icy roads is resistless.

They spread out, so strains are not centred as in old-time anti-skids. They are flat and regular, so they don't cause vibration. On all roads, at all seasons, they run as smoothly as plain Treads.

Your troubles are the Troubles which we best have met. Your wants we have best supplied. Hundreds of thousands have proved this already, and you are bound to find it out.

GOODYEAR FORTIFIED TYRES.

FORTIFIED AGAINST
BLOW OUTS—by our "On-Air cure. LOOSE TREADS
—by many rubber rivets. PUNCTURES and SKIDDING
—by our double-thick All-Weather treads.

Goodyear Fortified Tyres represent TYRE ROYALTY. We spend £20,000 yearly on research and experiment to keep it the best Tyre built.

And its sale—exceeding any other—shows that men regard it so.

Get Goodyear for your own sake.

ANY GARGAGE WILL SUPPLY YOU.

THE CAR BUICK. THAT GLIDES.

ORIGINAL OVERHEAD VALVES.

PERMANENT RELIABILITY.—All bearings in Buick Cars, even those used in the Delco system, are 60 per cent. oversize—that is, they are made to do 60 per cent. more work and stand 60 per cent. more strain than they are ever likely to be put to.

SERVICE.—Buying a car from us is not merely getting a Buick Car in exchange for your money. YOU GET SERVICE. We are keener in seeing your getting satisfaction than we are in seeing you owning a Buick. We have (without boasting), a good reputation, and we are going to keep it, and if we could we would improve it. We know your satisfaction means our success.

SPARE PARTS.—No matter what price you pay for a car something may be wanting to be replaced later on. Whilst renewals are very rare in Buicks we are thoroughly catering for the same, and to each owner we supply a Parts Book, which is properly illustrated and numbered.

WORLD'S GREATEST ROAD RECORD MADE BY THE CADILLAC EIGHT.

The car used was the demonstrator of the Los Angeles distributer, the first Cadillac Eight to reach the Pacific Coast, and had a mileage of 17,000 to its credit.

One year ago—the V-type principle as applied to automobile engines was practically unknown in America. To-day it is the dominating influence in motor car development. Announcements already made, and to be made, indicate how profoundly the future course of the industry has been affected by the Cadillac V-type "Eight." In eagerness of demand the "Cadillac" Company has never experienced anything like the existing conditions. More than 12,000 Eight-cylinder Cadillacs have been delivered, and orders are in hand from dealers for practically as many more.

WHAT YOU GET IN AN "OVERLAND."

Part for part you get more in an OVERLAND for the price you pay than in any other Car on the market. That's why the Overland outsells all Cars in its class.

Seventy-five Thousand Overlands will be built in 1915 and we are usually sold out as shipments arrive. The same applies to all other Overland agents in all parts of the world.

The demand is greater than the supply, because the Overland is worth from £50 to £100 more than any other car selling at the Overland price. If you examine and compare the Overland with other Cars you will see the extra value—you MUST see it.

MAXWELL 25

AGAIN TO THE FRONT.

New Haven, Connecticut, May 1st, 1915.

Gentlemen,—I am enclosing report of test of your MAXWELL Automobile recently made in our laboratory. I should like to add the following comments:—

MILEAGE.—The efficiency of the MAXWELL Automobile as indicated by the number of miles (per gallon) is exceptionally high. This mileage record is BETTER THAN THAT of ANY ONE OF 40 AUTOMOBILES tested in our laboratory to date.

MOTOR PERFORMANCE.—The efficiency of the motor and carburetter as indicated by the pounds of gasoline used per hour per horse power at rear tyres is exceedingly good, and indicates very perfect carburetter action over the whole range of speed and load. THIS RECORD, like that on mileage per gallon, IS THE BEST ONE we have had. Yours very truly,

For a deposit of £30 and weekly payments just like rent, you can secure a substantially and artistically built COTTAGE in this ideal suburb.

EVERY COTTAGE
is built of brick on individual lines, and each has its own garden and other special features. All homes are built on stone or concrete foundations, and have slate or tile roofs. Tree-lined streets, good shopping district, gas and electric light, splendid tram service, etc., are all enjoyed by those who are fortunate enough to reside in this garden suburb.

Our rate of interest is very low, being only 5 per cent., and your weekly payments cover both principal and interest.

HABERFIELD is a HEALTHY SUBURB. There your wife and children can enjoy the outdoor life.

Come out yourself and see how desirable these Cottages really are. Our Motor Car is at your service, and our salesman will supply you with all further particulars.

All Titles are TORRENS.

OUR HABERFIELD OFFICE WILL BE OPEN ALL DAY TO-DAY.

If you study economy as well as appearance it will pay you to build with "POILITE." Its first cost is about the same as weatherboard, but as it becomes harder and stronger each year the maintenance cost is NIL. In addition to these advantages "POILITE" is most attractive in appearance and very easily erected. "POILITE" ROOFING TILES make most serviceable and attractive roofs. CONSTRUCT AHEAD OF THE TIMES.

Adopt the American Success.

OSCILLATING PORTAL WALL BED.

TOOK GOLD MEDAL AT PAN-AMERICAN EXHIBITION.

So simple in construction a child can operate it; makes small bedrooms larger; makes your rooms rent readily at a better price, consequently you get better interest on your investment. Many Sydney leading Architects now embracing them in their plans—saves floor space, labour, and money.

Mr. Day, of Wilshire and Day, Architects, writes:—"I might say before I installed the Oscillating Wall Bed I had some misgiving in regard to ventilation. I am now, however, quite satisfied upon this point, and shall have no hesitation in recommending them."

Messrs. John Kirkpatrick and Son, Architects, erected a number of these beds in Sabiel's-chambers, Hunter-street, and Mr. Sabiel writes as follows:—"For some time my rooms remained vacant, but immediately I installed your wall beds my rooms were at once rented."

Mr. S. N. Richards, Architect, writes: "Your beds that I installed for in and out door sleeping at Manly have proved a great success."

If you have time we will be pleased to show you 100 of these beds installed in the T. and G. Residential Flats, cor. Elizabeth and Bathurst streets. An inspection will prove the value of these beds as an improved letting proposition.

Write for Book of Plans of Flats and Bungalows; of interest to all persons contemplating building.

OUR BEDS CAN BE INSTALLED IN OLD BUILDINGS, AS WELL AS IN NEW; but we always recommend them going in the original plans, as it saves money in construction.

SEE DANKS' WALL-BOARD ROOM.

To prove how splendidly Wall-Board lends itself to inexpensive decorative treatment, we have arranged a specimen room in one of our windows. Various pleasing suggestions show attractive schemes that would appeal to discriminating lovers of the home beautiful.

Wall-Board is made of pure wood fibre, and is splendid for partitions. Artistic panelling strikes the newest note in modern interior decoration, and it lends itself admirably to this purpose. Another benefit gained by using Wall-Board is that it takes distemper, kalsomine, or water paint, and thus appreciably lessens the cost of effective treatment.

Architects, builders, and others interested in home building, should make a special point of seeing this interesting display.

No. 7.—ON IMPROVING "THE AULD HOOSE."
Have you ever considered how you can improve your old house, and make it more modern and up-to-date inside? An innovation that is finding favour with all modern builders is the Wunderlich Metal Ceiling in place of the old one, which cracks and scales; Wunderlich Ceilings being of metal are, of course, unable to crack or scale, and can be kept clean and fresh by wiping with a damp cloth now and again. They are easily erected by any tradesman, and the transport charges are low. You would not only be improving the appearance of your home by installing Wunderlich Ceilings, but you would have the satisfaction of knowing that you have an artistic germ-proof and fire-resisting ceiling that will greatly increase the value of your property.
Have you thought of that?
Send for free copy of the Wunderlich Book of Australian Manufactures, which contains full particulars.

VICTORIAN REPRESENTATIVE: Geo. Smith Morison, Collins House, Collins-street, Melbourne.

THE PROBLEM OF REDUCTION OF MAINTENANCE EXPENSES is a difficult one and has occupied the minds of all large power users.

Very probably exhaustive inquiries were made into the merits of the different makes of engines and boilers before making a selection, yet scant attention was paid to the matter of lagging, the plant owner most likely being satisfied with ordinary Asbestos, or some similar out-of-date material.

The proper insulation of a steam plant is a very important item, and should be gone into very thoroughly. By adopting you can rest assured that you have secured the best insulation procurable. The exceptional efficiency of this material secures remarkable results, showing a saving over ordinary asbestos of over 30 per cent. Besides having been adopted exclusively by the British Admiralty, this material is being used by most of the largest power users in England, and has been adopted by the New South Wales and Victorian Governments, etc. May we send you samples?

AND PLASTIC BOILER COVERINGS,

Style Notes on the New Millinery.

A leading fashion journal states that the Small Hats for Spring are very fascinating, and the big ones equally smart and becoming. It is worthy to remark that none of the new hats is to be worn at any sort of excessive angle. The correct way they should be worn is tilted slightly to one side, and with the least tilt towards one eye. "The Veil is of great importance in the new Millinery, and repeats the picturesque note in fashions."

NATURE has endowed your body with sixteen million spots to which an ache or pain can be attached. When each of these spots is filled with a hard, platinum-tipped pain; when your head aches so that you are conscious of all the ruffles and scallops on your brain; when your heart thumps and your stomach wobbles and you feel as if something is wallowing through your inside works; when your sternum feels stove in and your shoulder blades feel as though your wings were beginning to sprout; when you are first alive to the finger tips thinking of the things you should do and then completely exhausted by even the thought of doing them; when your backbone has the sensation of being twisted by a monkey wrench; when you are so dizzy that you can't see, and your ears ring, and your eyes water, and your nose in such a state that it is presumption to lay aside your handkerchief for one short minute; when you cough and sneeze and groan in turn—in fact, when you feel like the very deuce—you can set it down that Influenza's grip has got you. The best thing to do is go to bed, take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in frequent doses and you will soon be right again."

All retailers are authorised to sell Chamberlain's Cough Remedy under a guarantee; if it does not do all that we claim we will refund the price paid.

LIFE IN LONDON AND THEREABOUT.

(CHRONICLED BY SIR HENRY LUCY.)

WESTMINSTER, June 16.

In conversation with a hospital nurse home on brief leave from the front, I heard of an incident that brings into lurid light the almost incredible brutality that underlies boasted German Kultur. Shortly after the outbreak of the war the lady—daughter-in-law of a famous General who took a prominent part during the Boer war in saving South Africa for the Empire—volunteered for service in the hospitals. This she has, at great personal cost of comfort and convenience, performed for many months. Just before leaving the base hospital for a brief but necessary interval of change she had under her charge a badly wounded German officer. For three days and nights, with brief snatches of sleep and food, she watched by the bedside of her intermittently unconscious patient. Largely owing to her tireless care, supplemented by the offices of British surgeons, the officer on the third day displayed marked signs of recovery. With a bright smile and cheery voice the nurse congratulated him. The man—it would be unfair to the majority of dumb animals to call him a brute—recognising her nationality from her speech deliberately and forcibly spat in her face.

This story lightly told, without apparent resentment, the nurse proceeded to dwell with beaming pleasure upon the bearing and conduct of British patients who fell to her care. They were, she said, patient beyond belief, grateful for the slightest attention, cheery at the worst turns of their illness, anxious only to get well again at the earliest possible moment, so that they might rejoin their comrades in the trenches. They rarely alluded to privations suffered in performance of work in the trenches. One incidentally mentioned that night after night in winter time, standing nearly up to his knees in water, when occasion came for him to move about he had to break the ice that imprisoned his legs. They were unanimous upon two points. One was the excellence and abundance of the food supplied. The other the certainty that, as they put it, the Germans would in the end be "utterly smashed." Also, without being able to say why or wherefore, they all believe the end of the war is not far off.

The Canadian contingent hurrying to the help of motherland were exceptionally fortunate, inasmuch as among them was a heaven-born war correspondent. "The Record Officer" he is called, with intent to hide the iniquity of his business from stern eyes at the War Office. Thus it comes to pass that whilst war correspondents are hounded off the precincts of the British forces one is permitted to tell in print the vivid story of Canadian prowess. There it is, and the world has been delighted to find and profit by it. Not since the days when Archibald Forbes thrilled mankind with daily accounts fresh from the battlefield where France and Germany fought, has there been so fine a piece of journalism turned out as was produced by the pen of the anonymous Record Officer, who told how for five days and nights the Canadians fought at Ypres.

But for its publication the spontaneous touching tribute to the gallant dead would not have taken place. Their deeds would have been heard of only in a chill passage in the "Eye-Witness's" mechanical reports of doings at the front, which smack of the severity and reticence of entries in counting-house ledgers. That is not his fault, poor man. Tied and bound by absurd regulations, forbidden to cite the names of places, regiments, officers, or privates, he is confined to the dull region of generalities, illuminated by dashes and asterisks.

That history repeats itself is a commonplace among proverbs. I have just come across a striking illustration of its accuracy. In the "Times" of June 12, 1815, just a hundred years ago, there appeared the following despatch from Liege:—"The irritation against the Prussians is at its height. Two officers of that nation had the audacity to say before a great number of persons in the market-place, 'When war breaks out we will burn Liege; it is a villainous place. We will shut the gates, and roast the inhabitants along with it.' All Liege knows of these expressions, and the indignation which they excite is excessive." At this time the Prussian army, under Blucher, was mustering in Flanders on the way to Waterloo. Contemporary record, private and public, describes how their route was marked by ruthless rapine.

In this same paper is a despatch from Rastadt, which shows that Prussia under the reign of King William and the influence of Bismarck was in 1871 dominated by the same grabbing instinct that marked its action in the Waterloo year. "It is," writes the chronicler, "but too true that the small princes of North Germany begin to complain loudly of the despotism which Prussia has, for some time past, exercised towards them. It may be expected that they will join the courts of Stuttgart and Munich, which, since the opening of the Congress, have not ceased to point their attention to the arbitrary pretensions of Prussia." At the close of the present war it is possible that the States of which the German Empire is compact will rise out of its ruins and assert the independence undermined by Prussia a hundred years ago, the work of subjugation being completed 70 years later.

I have been privileged to see a home letter, not yet published, from an officer on board one of the destroyers that avenged the torpedoing of the Recruit by sinking the two German boats responsible for the action. After a modest but graphic account of the chase, the capture, and destruction of the enemy submarine, the writer adds a passage that brings into strong light the different manner and method of British seamen towards a beaten foe. "After five minutes of concentrated fire," he writes, "one boat sank with a loud fizzle. The other burst into flames fore and aft. We ceased fire, and closed to pick up survivors. There were none on board the remaining boat, but about a mile and a half astern we came across the crews in the water. We picked up 46 all told, of whom five died from exhaustion. One had bullet wounds on him, showing he had been shot on his own ship." (With characteristic delicacy the British officer refrained from commenting on this gruesome incident and its obvious cause.) "We picked up an officer and 12 men in the last stage of collapse. But they recovered except in the case of one man. The officer later in the morning told me that when they found the game was up they ordered their men overboard, and attempted, unsuccessfully, to blow their ship up.

"Our men were like children as soon as it was all over. They gave the Germans their clothes, gave them tea, eggs, bacon, and cigarettes. They did everything they could to make them get over the shock. While we were picking up the blighters my first lieutenant seeing a German officer in the water, just on the point of drowning, went in after him and rescued him. One German sailor hauled on board said, 'It's a shame to pick us up only to shoot us later.' An officer refused to take a drink until a doctor had tasted it. He thought it must contain poison. When the first lieutenant visited one of the saved, made comfortable on the mess deck, lying on a locker, wrapped in blankets, and asked him how he was getting on, he put out his tongue, and made a rude remark. Five minutes later he had an attack of ague, and the doctor suggested he should be taken to the engine-room to be thoroughly warmed. So four of our sailors lifted him up and carried him off. As soon as he appeared on the upper deck he yelled, cried, and fought like a maniac. He though we were going to throw him overboard for having been impertinent." Only once does the narrative strike a note of righteous indignation. It is heard in the concluding sentence of the thrilling story. "Had we known that the Germans had left an officer and two of our men prisoners in one of their boats they knew would be shelled by us I think I would have steered through the whole crowd in the water and churned them with the propellers."

GERMANY AND THE UNITED STATES.

AMERICAN DIGESTION.

(BY A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT IN THE "TEMPS.")

"The United States have for France a deep feeling of friendship—a durable feeling, shared by the new American citizens as well as by the old. For we must not imagine that immigration can affect the feelings of a country. In one or two generations immigrants become assimilated, and they think as we do. We assimilate them completely. We have an excellent digestion."

Thus spoke Mr. Roosevelt, President of the Republic in 1908. At that time the immigration Mr. Roosevelt more specially had in view was that of the Japanese in the west. It was the moment of the incidents between the Japs and the Californians in San Francisco. Another immigration, far more dangerous, because methodical in its departure, and welcomed on its arrival, the German immigration, was meanwhile spreading tenacious roots all over the States. The Monroe doctrine had foreseen only one form of conquest—that of brutal force. There was another—that of patient, slow infiltration—spreading daily. It was the latter the Germans had silently adopted. German immigration in the States has become so important that the American "digestion" refuses to act.

The first German emigrants reached the States in 1683. Coming from Westphalia, they settled side by side with the Quakers of William Penn, who 40 years before founded Philadelphia. There they built a town, and in the midst of Indian, English, Irish, Swedish, and French elements, they called their town Germantown. Immigration went on. Soon Hessians and Bavarians were numerous enough for the English (1775-1783) to ask for their help against Washington. England was beaten. The German elements were the first to bow before the wind of American victory. They adopted the language and customs of the conqueror. New contingents arrived, multiplied, and spread. Milwaukee, founded in 1834 by the Frenchman Salomon Juneau, was a German city in 1860. Then came the disaster of '70—German unity was established. More and more numerous, the emigrants came from the banks of the Rhine, the Oder, or the Elbe. They came now a whole village at a time. They had money. They depended on an armed and vigilant diplomacy, so vigilant, indeed, that a few years ago William II., hearing that there was a danger of the German-Americans forgetting their language and the country of their origin, sent forth missionaries paid from his private purse, among others Dr. Exsersset. These missionaries were under orders to remind their hearers that German should be spoken, written, propagated, beyond any other language, especially before English. These orders were executed, and have never been transgressed since. At that time the census reported upwards of 10 millions of German descent as living in the States. To-day, the Americans themselves own that this number reaches from 20 to 25 millions, or a quarter of the whole population of the States, and it is a common thing to speak of Chicago as the third German city after Berlin and Hamburg.

THE BRITISH NAVY.

Germany may not yet appear definitely beaten on land, but on the sea. . . . who could dobut. From the deck of the Rochambeau I see the faint outline of a ship. Soon it becomes clearer; it is a merchant steamer. Captain Dumont looks through his glasses and passes on. He has been forty-four years at sea. I question him. "It's an English boat," says he. "I shall tell you something which is not known enough in France. Twenty years ago, when catching sight of a boat out at sea, it was safe to say 'English boat.' Ten years ago we began saying 'It's most likely an English boat;' but for the last five years it has been safer to say 'It may be an English . . . or a German boat.'" The mighty rake England is now clearing the seas with is taking us back twenty years. Navigation here is clear of all German boats—boats which in 1913 represented a trade for 536 million dollars, without mentioning passengers. Besides, the line Liverpool-Havre-New York is watched as if it were a railway line. During the nine days of the crossing every six hours at least we are challenged—especially at night. The wireless calls, "Who are you?" "The Rochambeau." "What is the password?" . . . . "Very well, here is the word for the next twelve hours. Hurrah for France! Hurrah for England! Good-bye."

The adventure of the Dacia was never repeated. You remember the Dacia? It was the boat a rich American with a fine German sounding name, Mr. Breitung, pretended he had bought, and which he had laden with 14,000 bales of cotton, ostensibly destined for the exclusive use of the German civil population. We have on board a few of the men of the Dacia. The captain was kept in France at the disposal of justice. To bring their enterprise to a good issue the Dacia men had invented a thousand ways of escaping the vigilance of the English cruisers. Wasted efforts! They had not been two hours at sea when they were signalled by wireless telegraphy to the English boats. From that moment signals were made one to the other up to the time when a French cruiser took her in tow. This had been arranged between the Allies, as the French law is very clear in such cases, while the English law is not. This was perhaps the only contingency the owners of the Dacia had not foreseen.

Two miles off New York Harbour another sight excited our admiration. Facing the outward offing, about seven or eight miles apart and in splendid line, one English auxiliary cruiser and two battle cruisers were watching. Against the setting sun, their outline seemed gigantic, they looked like three powerful wild beasts ready to spring. "Why this?" I asked Commandant Dumont. "They have been here since the 10th of August, and their watch will only cease with the declaration of peace. Not one German ship has been able to enter or leave the port of New York since they came. You will see the famous boats of the Boches quietly lying along their wharfs. There are 34 of them, of a value of about 50 million dollars. They have lain there for seven months now, earning nothing and spending about 10,000 dollars a day. Remember that the same state of thing rules in every port of the States—every port all over the world. . . . Then you will understand the epileptic rage of Germany against England."

Indeed, no sooner had we gone through the first channel, than we saw the Magdeburg, lader with dynamite and gun cotton for Germany. It had attempted to get away one of the first days of the war, during a fog, but 20 minutes later it was getting in again, thankful to return to the calm waters of the port, and not to have been blown up with all its cargo. A little further, German colliers had been swaying for months—and on the broad bosom of the Hudson there lay the 34 ships of which Captain Dumont had spoken. The proud Vaterland, with its 1000 feet of length, the "dernier cri" of Trans-atlantic boats, there it rests, with its mighty engines and its "kolossal" funnels—meanwhile the majestic statue of Liberty dominates this double picture of German captivity groaning within and English might watching confidently without.

CANOWINDRA TO EUGOWRA.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In your issue of the 15th ult. I noticed under the heading of "A National Railway" a letter signed by "National." Evidently this anonymous gentleman has just awakened out of a Rip Van Winkle sleep. Otherwise, if he is a local resident, with even a scant knowledge of local events, he surely has not forgotten that the whole matter was most exhaustively inquired into by the Parliamentary Standing Committee on Public Works, and a decision arrived at as recently as September, 1913, with the result that they made a recommendation to the Legislative Assembly that it was expedient to carry out the proposal to construct a railway from Canowindra to Eugowra.

With regard to the wish that this matter should be brought under the notice of the Minister for Works, I would like to remind "National" that probably the "South of the Lachlan" railway proposal has had as much limelight and publicity as, if not more than, any proposal of similar importance in the State. Yet they failed to convince the Public Works Committee that theirs was the better scheme.

A BRITISH GUN FACTORY.

REMARKABLE SPEEDING-UP.

One is struck by the complete absence of belts. In place of shafting and bands and pulleys there are powerful electric motors fixed on each machine, and I am first shown to one of the switch rooms, the heart of the electric power system that is now keeping the factory running seven days in the week and twenty-four hours in the day.

Into this room come three sets of electric mains, great lead-covered cables with each conductor insulated from its neighbour, and the lead sheath by half an inch of solid oil-soaked paper. One of the mains is from the generating plant of the factory itself, another from the local electricity works, and the third from the mains of the power company working in the district.

There is nothing elaborate about the fittings of the switch-room. The panels are of unpolished slate, the big switches are dull, and the big coils with the trigger arrangements, the circuit breakers, as they are called, which protect the distant dynamos in the event of a mishap to the cables in the factory, are big and severe looking. The room has been fitted up since the war broke out, and is an exact duplicate of one in another part of the building. In the basement somewhere is a sub-switchroom, with three great change-over switches, by means of which the current can be delivered in either room as desired. All the important cables are also duplicated, and all machinery can be controlled from whichever switchroom is in use.

I learn that only one main is ever in use at a time. Usually the factory runs off its own plant; in the event of a stoppage it would take current from the local works, and only in the unlikely event of a breakdown at both factory and town supply stations would current be taken from the power company. Consequently it may be said that there is no possibility of the factory having to stop work through injury to its cables or to its sources of supply. Of course, in peace time few factories had more than alternate sources of supply; few duplicated their conductors, controls, and switchroom. It is only since the outbreak of war that such precautions have been adopted; just as in peace time one would not have seen those armed sentries in the factory yard, nor those searchlight projectors and anti-aircraft guns on the factory roof.

A big gun, it has been said, cannot be improvised, and represents fully twelve months' work, as there is as much detail in its manufacture as there is in a locomotive or a giant crane. The statement may have been perfectly true in peace-time, but the output of the ordnance factories has been greatly increased during the past few months. To begin with, factories are now running 168 instead of 48 and 52 hours in the week, and as shifts of men leave for rest and meals, others pick up their tools or take their places at the machines, so that the work goes on without a break.

The continuous working greatly reduces the time necessary for producing a finished gun; it is cut down still further by the fact that the factory is now double-staffed with tools and treble-staffed with men, and the keenness of the workers is another factor which has to be taken into consideration. It may be asserted that the ordnance factories of Great Britain are now turning out five times as much as they were when the war broke out. When to these works are added the large number of engineering shops which are now on armament work, but which were previously engaged in turning out commercial products, one begins to understand how it is that England has not only raised and equipped an army of nearly two million men since August, but has been at the same time able to meet and more than meet the daily requirements of 200,000 shells for the 3in and 6in guns in the field, and to replace the wastage of naval and military artillery which is inseparable from active operations.

The steel used in big-gun making represents the last word in excellence. It is melted in open-hearth furnaces, and cast in eight-sided ingots, which are then bored down their centre, or "trepanned," as it is called. This is preparatory to the forging, and it is worthy of note that with the large ingots the boring bar is revolved, but the smaller ingots are rotated in a lathe in the usual manner. A mandrel, hollow, to permit of a stream of cooling water passing through it, is driven into the bore, and the ingot forged down to the required dimensions. It is now a gun tube, and is placed in a lathe some 90 or 100 feet long, with multiple saddles. The use of a number of cutting tools considerably reduces the time taken in rough-turning the tube, and as soon as the tools have done their work a carborundum wheel rushes along the glittering tube in a stream of dazzling sparks, and leaves it as smooth and true as the inside of a rifle barrel.

On a 12in gun no fewer than 117 miles of steel wire are wound in place, amounting in weight to some 13½ tons. Although the factory name of this is wire, it is really more of a tape, being a quarter of an inch wide by one-tenth of an inch in thickness. It is of enormous tensile strength, is tested to a breaking strain of 110 tons, and is made from the same quality of steel as the wire used in pianos.

Before commencing the winding the end of the wire is wedged into a recess at the breech end of the tube, and the necessary tension, of from 35 to 60 tons to the square inch, is provided by passing the wire through steel dies weighted to suit the varying tensions required. This tension is lessened with each succeeding layer, but is very great in the initial stages of the winding. The wire is wound off a reel which rotates as the gun-barrel is revolved, and the mechanism is such that the drum travels along the barrel at exactly the right speed to keep the turns of wire tightly clinched together.

Different parts of the barrel are wound with varying tricknesses of wire, the winding being thinnest near the muzzle of the gun. For instance, in a 12in gun there are no fewer than 9.2 layers, amounting in thickness to nine and a quarter inches, at the breech, where the principal strain takes place, these layers being gradually reduced in number to 14 at the muzzle.

Although the wire is wound on under tension and had been previously drawn through dies to ensure it being of exactly the same cross-section throughout its length, after winding it is possible that some slight inequalities may exist on the outside layer, and so a fine cut is taken along the barrel. After this has been done the tube is ready for the jacket rings to be shrunk on. In order to do this the gun has to be suspended vertically, and a deep pit with walls high above the ground is used for the purpose. Gas is used to raise the outer rings, which have been bored out to a less internal diameter than the external diameter of the wire-wound barrel, to a glowing red-heat, and they are then slipped in place. They can be allowed to cool gradually or can be cooled by water as desired, but in cooling, they naturally contract, and so hold the wire winding with immense force. As soon as this has been done, and the gun is cool enough, it is once more placed in the lathe and a final cut taken off. After that follows the machining of the breech-block hinge lugs, and of the slides of the mountings. The rifling of the bore is then machined out, by a bar traversed and rotated at a speed that shall ensure the grooves being of the correct pitch, after which the accuracy of the rifling and bore is tested by plastic gutta-percha. The gun is then laid on roller-bearings and carefully examined in the bore by means of mirrors.

It is interesting to learn that the breech-block has to undergo some 18 or 20 machinings, whilst the breech-bush has to pass through 14 before it is ready to fit in place. And, of course, the building up, boring, winding, and finishing of a gun barrel is only a part of the work of making a gun. The gun itself is only one part of a vast amount of mechanism necessary for the completion of the weapon, and during the construction of some of the smaller guns no fewer than 550 distinct machinings on 280 parts are required before the gun is ready for use. In the breech of a 6-inch gun there are no fewer than 100 parts, and in a pom-pom there are 400 parts on which a total of 770 operations have been carried out. And some of this machining is on a large scale, as will be seen when it is mentioned that the drop-forging for the lock frame of a pom-pom weighs 25lb when it enters the machine tool shop, but only 10½lb when ready to fit to the gun.

COMMANDER SAMSON.

(BY W.A.J.C.)

Picture to yourself a little slight-built man, with a thick dark-brown moustache and beard, in a double-breasted naval airman's uniform, the regulation peaked cap, whose legs to the knees are encased in leggings. He has a short stride, and arms that swing with a natural ease as he walks. A twinkling eye and a happy, strong, determined face, in some measure let you know that you have before you Flight-commander Charles R. Samson, of his Majesty's Royal Navy.

Flying was in its infancy a few years ago. The experimental stage, it could have been called. Aviators were looked upon then as wilful harbingers of death, as men who courted destruction in one of its most vivid forms. Then came the hydroplane—the biplane on floats. Associated and in conjunction with this latest craze for the conquest of the air was the name of Samson. He was undoubtedly the pioneer of naval tactics in connection with the sea-plane movement. The flights conducted by this audacious and fear-nothing young man—for he is only 29 years of age now—and the success of the many attempts brought into prominence the great possibilities for an aeroplane that was able to fly with safety over the water.

Commander Samson was 25 when he secured his pilot's certificate. It was also in 1911, when the question of flying over the sea was much before the public eye. The ambitious young naval officer had ideas of his own. Perfecting them, he commenced a series of daring developments which were crowned with entire success. In this same year, whilst the Kaiser was on a visit to England, and his yacht was anchored in the River Medway, Commander Samson made his name a by-word with the British people by giving a flight and short demonstration over his Imperial Majesty's ship. Then came further improvements. A controversy was fiercely raging as to the ability of the now accepted hydroplane to commence a flight from the deck of any warship whilst at sea. It was Samson who settled the dispute by making his first successful flight from a specially-fitted man-of-war in January of 1912. Promotion has come quickly to him. His name will forever be remembered when the Cuxhaven raid is brought to mind. He organised and participated in the glorious flight when Germany started back in affright at the recklessness and daring of the British airmen. Much useful and invaluable work has he done in this war. How much more will he do before it is concluded? The life and soul of all his companions in the naval air service, he is bound to win honours. Even the Kaiser has marked him out, for, as many know, there was £1000 offered by the German Emperor for the body, dead or alive, of this intrepid British commander.

SIR SANDFORD FLEMING.

EMPIRE BUILDER.

The news from Vancouver last week of the death of Sir Sandford Fleming, the railway builder and the founder of the Pacific Cable, calls to mind how much the British Empire owes to the far-sightedness, resistless energy, and constructive powers of the Canadian. Fleming first came into prominence as the "young engineer" who plotted and built the Intercolonial Railway which linked up and gave new and modern life to the maritime provinces of the Dominion. But his greatest feat was opening the prairie west of Canada and projecting that marvellous line of transportation, the Canadian Pacific Railway. In 1870 he was appointed by the Federal Government to ascertain the feasibility of finding a passage through the Rocky Mountains to the rich country between that great range and the Pacific slope.

The character of the man is best illustrated by the fact that in carrying out this task he tramped the entire distance between Winnipeg and Vancouver, which were then mere frontier settlements, with a pack upon his back, and that upon the journey he had to scale the Rockies. By this feat he connected eastern with western Canada, he saved British Columbia to the confederation of the provinces, he opened up a vast and hitherto practically unexplored tract of territory, and he gave to Great Britain the vast wheatfields which are now helping her in this time of stress. That is to say it was as a direct result of his long and arduous trip afoot that the Canadian Pacific was built. His Scottish endurance and keenness made the transcontinental road a possibility, and the railway in turn made him famous.

Subsequently when Western Canada had been peopled and its potentialities had been realised, he looked beyond its confines and set about putting into concrete form another of his dreams. This was the "all red" cable which now binds Australia to her sister dominion on the North American continent. Another of Sir Sandford's ideas, which takes in not only the Britain of the "seven seas," but all the rest of the civilised world, is the twenty-four hour system of keeping time, which one may see in operation at the Greenwich Observatory. He had stated his belief that he could furnish a means of universal regularity of the hours, and accordingly one may hear at Greenwich a simultaneous striking of the gigantic clock foretelling the union of night and day.

Sir Sandford was a native of Kirkaldy. He was the recipient of medals and university degrees, and he was a fellow the Royal Geographical Society. Like Rhodes, he will go down in history as having been a master constructor of the Empire.

OLD COTTAGE AT MOSMAN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In your issue of 17th instant there appeared some interesting details as to Archibald Mosman and his old stone cottage, now in course of demolition. Mr. Frank Walker, of the Royal Historical Society, mentions that Mosman's whaling materials used to be stowed away in the old stone two-story building locally known as the Barn, the architectural features of which (reminiscent of the period of Governor Macquarie) have for some years been concealed by a bill-hoarding. I may mention, with regard to this building, that there is in the Mitchell Library Picture Gallery a painting, by S. T. Gill, of "Mossman's Bay," from a point on the high ground immediately to the south of the present ferry wharf. This picture is undated, but the dress of the figures in the foreground seems to indicate the year 1850 or thereabouts. The old cottage and barn are easily identifiable, but two other buildings are shown of which no trace remains—viz., a cottage a few yards to the north of the barn, and a two-story building, with a lower tier of tall, narrow windows, a few yards south of the latter, and apparently of equal extent. Although these appear in the painting to be in line with the barn, it is curious to find that (prior to a considerable excavation made a few years ago) there was not sufficient level space for them at this spot, which was very rough. It may be that the perspective of the painting is imperfect, and that they stood on the site of the present Avenue-road, which is shown by the artist winding around the foot of the hill. It also shows the tower of that fine old house, The Rangers (recently demolished), above the tree-tops, and another interesting feature is the old cutwater-bowed paddle steamer starting from the masonry wharf on its adventurous voyage to Sydney. With regard to Mosman having retired from business and disposed of all his property, so as to secure a fixed income, I recollect that in investigating a suburban (St. Peters, I think) land title some years ago, I found reference to a deed of sale by him about 1843, made in consideration of a life annuity, which I believe was £400, and, if I remember rightly, the subsequent dealings showed that the speculation turned out very badly for the buyers.

I am, etc., A.J.C.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Your correspondents who have been dealing with the above subjects will, I trust, pardon me for holding the opinion that they are both off the track. In the first place "the old cottage" which was destroyed by fire in January of last year was not Archibald Mosman's home. "The Nest," a stone cottage, now and for many years the residence of Mrs. Badham, on the hill above, has the distinction of having been Mosman's home.

Nor did Mosman "practically start the whaling industry in these waters," neither is the credit of that due to the late Captain Edwards, as it was established here long before either of them arrived in the colony. Whalers made Sydney their port of departure for "the fisheries," and for "refreshment" as early as 1791, and between that date and 1817 as many as 60 whalers had frequented the port.

I have in my possession the log book of the "snip Cretan, from London, towards Port Jackson, May 18th, 1815" . . . . and "entered between the Heads" September 7, and after whaling in the Pacific, returned to London, Captain Joseph Moore being in command.

I have also the log book of the brig Woodlark, Captain Joseph Moore, from 1820 to 1824. This brig became a Sydney whaler, and this book gives her whaling cruises for five years. Captain Joseph Moore became a partner in the firm of Walker, Jones, and Moore. He was the father of the Hon. Henry Moore, M.L.C., a well-known merchant, of Moore's wharf. Captain Moore had a 40-acre grant in Mosman's Bay, which was afterwards bought by Oswald Bloxsome, on which he built The Rangers. As early as 1806 the whaling industry was well established, Sydney exporting in that year 2756 tons of sperm oil and 940 tons of black oil.

CURRENT LITERATURE.

THE WAR AND THE BALKANS.

Now that Italy has thrown in her lot with the Allies the question of the hour is whether and when we can count upon the accession of Roumania, Greece, and Bulgaria to our strength. In "The War and the Balkans," Messrs. Noel Buxton, M.P., and C. R. Buxton do not attempt to answer the question, but they provide us with much useful data upon which we can form our judgment, and gauge the probabilities. The authors have first-hand acquaintance with the States south of the Danube; since the outbreak of this war they have gone from town to town, explaining the issues to the inhabitants, interviewing public men, as the unofficial representatives of the British Government, and generally speaking, trying to counteract the barefaced efforts of German emissaries, armed with German gold, to win the sympathies of the neutral States, or at any rate to ensure the continuance of their neutrality. One result of the authors' activity was an attempt on their lives, made last October, from which they have fortunately recovered. Another is this book, which, though it tells us little that we did not know before, packs the whole of the problem of Balkan neutrality or intervention into a convenient compass.

That the three non-combatants, Roumania, Bulgaria, and Greece, with their million and a quarter of fighting men, could vitally affect the issue of the war, is a common-place. Roumania could attack Austria through Transylvania, and relieve the pressure in Galicia. She could also, with Bulgaria, invade Turkey from the European side, and relieve the pressure at the Dardanelles. Greece could reinforce Servia and the Allies at Gallipoli, and could also make things extremely unpleasant for Asia Minor. There would be ample reward for the victors. Why, then, do not these States seize such a signal opportunity, and throw their weight into the scale in support of the Allies? It seems a very simple proposition from the point of view of one unversed in the tangled skein of Balkan policy. Messrs. Buxton show us its complications.

To the Balkans the real centre of the war is not on the Aisne or the Yser canal, but on the Vistula. Commercial considerations and aspirations are to them secondary. The chief issue—in their eyes is how the claims of nationality are going to be affected; and we must remember that in the Balkans nationality is not only an extraordinarily vivid concept, but an extraordinarily complex problem. Each one of these neutral States may well pause to reflect whether allegiance to either cause will wholly satisfy its ultimate aims; and when we talk so glibly of the "obvious interests" of the three neutrals pointing to intervention on behalf of the Allies, we are assuming a good deal more than their leaders are prepared to assume. "The most momentous factor common to all the Balkan States," the authors affirm, "is that each of them represents but a part of the population which bears its name and shares its aspirations. Outside the borders of each is a region which, in the phrase consecrated by Italian usage, is "irredenta," unredeemed. The State itself carved out of the Turkish Empire with infinite difficulty and with the shedding of much blood, regards itself but the nucleus of the true nation which will one day be found united under one flag."

The position of Greece is, perhaps, the most simple of all. She has borne a cosmopolitan people, who have gone far afield. She cannot hope to re-nationalise the hundreds of thousands of her children who are to be found in every continent, but she has a very definite claim to suzerainty of much of the seaboard of Asia Minor. Since she has no designs on Turkey-in-Erope, her neighbours will not grudge her this. But the other Balkan peoples have not fared so far afield. In every one of them there is an Alsace-Lorraine. Roumania covets Transylvania, but it cannot forget that Russia took possession of Bessarabia. Servia resents the fact that so many Servians must live under Austrian rule, but her own new territories, acquired after the last war in 1913, include a predominant Bulgarian element. Bulgaria feels that in the second Balkan war she was jockeyed out of her legitimate conquests, and is by no means prepared to engage in another war from motives which, to many of her inhabitants, seem directly calculated to aggrandize her neighbouring rival.

Hence in each of the neutral States there is a division of sentiment. In Roumania and in Greece the Royal houses have German affiliations. In the former also there is the feeling that by judicious waiting Roumania may be able to repeat the experiences of 1913, when she gained a considerable accession of territory by a bloodless occupation. Moreover, both in Roumania and Bulgaria there has been an abnormally profitable commerce with Germany and Austria; and powerful vested interests have operated against action. These factors are not sufficient to outweigh any genuine expression of national desire, but hitherto this has been wanting, except perhaps in the case of Greece; and the reason for this is that it is almost impossible for one to move without all. As long as a single neutral in the Balkans holds aloof it can jeopardise the position of the others. An understanding between Servia, Roumania, and Greece might be easy to arrange, but Bulgaria is the incalculable element. Her strategic position in the peninsula gives her an advantage beyond her actual military strength. She can harass sorely pressed Servia on the flank; she can interpose her arms between Greece and Turkey; she can annoy Roumania; she can, if she likes, provide direct communication between Berlin, Vienna, and Constantinople. These advantages make her peculiarly susceptible to the offers which the German-Austrian-Turkish alliance presses on her with unflagging energy. "They have nothing to offer to Greece, and very little to Roumania, but, as regards Bulgaria, her geographical situation makes it worth Austria's while to court her."

The neutrality of Bulgaria is, therefore, a continual brake to the progress of the Allies. It is impossible, observe the authors, "to look with complacency on a situation in which Roumania remains inactive," and behind this question, of course, lies that of Bulgaria. "The uncertain attitude of Bulgaria constitutes a loss to the Entente in three ways. It provides Roumania and Greece with a pretext for not entering into the war, so that pressure cannot be put on these powers to induce them to move. Servia is compelled to keep troops on her eastern frontier, and in Macedonia, where the railway is guarded by sentries every few hundred yards. And finally, we lose the military advantages which might be gained from the co-operation of Bulgaria herself. Her attitude keeps inactive three armies, totalling over a million trained men." And, add the authors, it would be foolish to blink the fact that there is still a possibility of Bulgaria entering the war on the other side.

Is there no way out of the impasse? The enemy hopes not. Even if it is not possible to secure active support for the German cause in the Balkans, there is always the negative advantage of neutrality, and for this "agents are working with unlimited vigour and considerable success. They spread news favourable to their cause; they buy up some newspapers and influence others; they leave no stone unturned to damage the position of those who are opposed to them; they bribe and threaten in every way they can devise the people whose support they covet so keenly." Against their efforts we may remember that once before all the Balkans united against a common foe, and that the statesman who brought this to pass, M. Venizelos, has been again returned to power. We may remember that the whole spirit of the age is against the incorporation of reluctant peoples in alien nationalities, and that Servia will, in the event of victory, receive so much Servian-populated territory north of the Danube that she can willingly and wisely hand over to the Bulgarians the territory which belongs racially to them. But this book warns us that it would be absurd to expect the three neutrals—or, indeed, any one of them—to join us as a matter of course. Though there is a possibility of such a consummation, those who hope to see it to-morrow or the next day are liable to be grievously disappointed. (George Allen and Unwin.)

THE TURK AT HOME.

Miss Grace Ellison has spent a good deal of time in Turkey on terms of close intimacy with a number of Turkish families. She has come to the conclusion that no people has been more maligned by the itinerant writer of books and in "An Englishwoman in a Turkish Harem" she has set herself to correct the popular misconceptions. This was written in the earlier part of last year, when Miss Ellison was revisiting her friends; it is rather unfortunate for her that since then the whirligig of time has arrayed these folk whom she praises as highly among our enemies. Miss Ellison is conscious that her panegyric will fall rather flat, but in an afterword she explains that nothing that has happened can alter her high opinion of the Turkish nation as a whole. Enver Pasha and the Young Turks, seduced by German promises and German gold, are solely to blame for her entry into the war, and have betrayed their country. The responsible elements of the people have shown no liking for German influence; they have always desired to take as their models the British or French rather than the German civilisation. The Porte and Djemal Pasha tried to the very end to maintain neutrality, but they were overruled literally at the point of the German guns. The German Admiral Suchon was master of the situation. Turkey ceased to exist. "Turkey is now quite aware of the treachery of Germany," concludes Miss Ellison. "But it is too late."

The interest of her book lies in the picture she gives of the Turkish home, which certainly runs counter to accepted notions. Our ideas, she says, are all out of date. We should remember that in the last decade a tremendous revolution has been accomplished in social no less than in constitutional affairs, and nowhere has this been more marked than in the status of women. One little incident illustrates this. On her former visit her hostess had thought it a tremendous and hazardous adventure even to go shopping. Last year she entertained the author to a meal in a fashionable hotel quite as a matter of course. The emancipation of woman is going to bring the emancipation of Turkey from the bonds of despotism, corruption, and reaction (we seem, by the way, to have heard this before applied to many other nations), and though much has still to be done, the seed has been sown, and the harvest is not far off. In Djemal Pasha, the Military Governor of Constantinople, feminism has a valuable ally. The police have orders to give the fullest protection to women who choose to go about unveiled, and Djemal Pasha has given his effective sympathy to the cause in many other ways. The author admits that the Turkish women themselves have been slow to take advantage of their new opportunities. Prejudices die hard, but already there are signs of an awakening. The Balkan war gave them a chance to show that women can be of service to their nation in war, and no doubt the lesson has not been forgotten to-day.

Miss Ellison also breaks a spear against the conventional idea of a harem. She asked a prominent Turkish woman in the name of a Suffragist Society how the English women could best help the advancement of Turkish women. "Ask them," replied the latter, "to delete for ever that misunderstood word 'harem,' and speak of us in our Turkish 'homes.'" Apparently the harem in its traditional sense no longer exists save in the palace of the Sultan, and even there the inmates are asked every year whether they would not like their freedom to go into the world and to marry. In the average Turkish household there is but a single wife. Polygamy is the exception rather than the rule. As one philosopher observed, "it was all very well when wives worked in the fields and made themselves useful. Now that they require dresses by Paquin and expensive trinkets from Paris, it is a very different matter." Miss Ellison grants that harem life is rather demoralising. The monotony, the absence of any save domestic interests, the crowds of slaves who do all the work, all tend to make the Turkish woman lethargic mentally and physically. Still, now that Western ideas are sweeping through the latticed seclusion of the harem like a breath of fresh air, Miss Ellison hopes for much. The book is worth reading, for even though we sometimes feel that the author's enthusiasm has dulled her sense of proportion, she gives a reassuring account of a people in whom Australia feels a very lively interest just now. If only a half of what she says is true we may congratulate ourselves that Australian prisoners have fallen into Turkish rather than German hands. (Methuen; Sydney Book Club.)

THE CULT OF KULTUR.

Nowadays everyone is engaged in drawing historical comparisons suggested by Germany's spirit of aggressive militarism, but as far as we know, no one has remarked on the analogy between this and the idea which dominated the national outlook of the Jews of the pre-Christian and the early-Christian era. Prima facie the parallel seems difficult to establish, yet, in "The Cult of Kulture," Mr. Garnet V. Portus make out an excellent case. "The nation," he writes, "tutored by its priests and rulers, was firmly convinced that the Jewish people were God's elect, and were destined to extend God's Kingdom over all the earth. But this extension was to be accomplished through the adoption, voluntarily or involuntarily, on the part of the Gentile nations of the Jewish theocracy and the Jewish civilisation." This is his starting point, and the Old Testament bears him witness to the emergence and establishment of this as a national ideal. And the result of this ideal can be found in the history recorded in the New Testament. One came Who took small account of the elaborate ritual and observances of the Pharisee. Who preached a kingdom of mankind, not of Judaism. Who presumed to say to common folk, "who knew not the law," that their destinies were important even though they were not of "the chosen." Jesus was crucified, not so much because He was a blasphemer, but because He was politically unsound. "By Judaism, by the law, by the deliberate Judaisation of the world (even if this had to be accomplished by force), and by the magnification of the Jewish theocratic state was the world to be converted and live. But Jesus said No! Then Jesus must die!"

So far Mr. Portus's parallel holds even to "the priests and rulers." The reason why it cannot be pushed to its logical conclusion is that the Judaic dreams of a Judaic imperialistic culture were rudely shattered by another power. Long before the Crucifixion Jerusalem was part of a Roman province. The Crucifixion was only possible because of the indifference of a Roman over-lord. The Pharisees could go on indulging in vain visions of a civilisation dominated by their caste and ritual, but fortunately they had little power to realise them. Unfortunately their modern counterpart has not only the power, but has taken forethought to triple-gird itself with metal (which the Pharisees did not possess), and an impenetrable armour of conscious rectitude (which was not the least part of the Pharisees' equipment). It is this that we are arrayed against. We are fighting in all essentials the same idea which Christ fought, and which in seeming defeat He conquered. Let us hope that our spiritual conquest will be attained without our physical defeat. And let us beware of hypocrisy, which will blunt our swords before ever we join battle. We talk vaguely and disparagingly of "Prussian methods," but can we say that all that these connote do not exist to some extent in the social life of our community. The principles of "success at all costs," "the strongest must win"—these derive from the same source as the gospel of "hacking through." Both belong to the doctrine of "selfishness" in its literal sense, the doctrine that looks only to the realisation of personal desire apart from what this entails upon others. Syndicalism and sabotage have their counterpart in the cut-throat competition of business, which destroys the weaker in order that the stronger may wax fat. Mr. Portus's book is an extremely suggestive little publication, which opens many trains of thought. It is well worth buying for itself, but the fact that the whole of the proceeds of its sale are to go to the Australian Red Cross Funds makes it purchase additionally desirable. (Thos. SOME NEW NOVELS.

In "The Good Soldier" Mr. Ford Madox Hueffer has written a story with an unusual combination of qualities. It is a novel of character rather than of incident, yet it depends for effect largely upon the element of surprise. He introduces us to a pair of married couples, English and American, who meet at a Continental Spa. To all appearances they are thoroughly "nice," normal people, on the best of terms with each other and the world at large. So at least thinks Dowell, the American husband, who tells the story; his wife dies, leaving him unconscious of what has happened, and it is only years later, when Captain Ashburnham has cut his throat, that he learns the whole truth. He pieces it together little by little, picking up a thread here and a thread there from a rambling survey of his married life; sometimes retracing his steps when the significance of some hardly-noticed trifle becomes apparent, sometimes harking forward to an event whose bearing on the tragic chronicle is hidden from the reader. And it is the very discursiveness and inconsecutiveness of the process by which he arrives at the truth that are so true to life. When he has worked it out it is all so clear. Of the quartette he alone was blind. From the beginning to the end of their association Florence, his wife, had duped him; even her "weak heart," which had made their marriage one in name only, was simply a cloak for her amours. Her cupidity was simply nauseating, and we with her husband are content to dismiss her from our memory as something unclean. But Captain Ashburnham, the partner in her guilt, cannot be disposed of so easily. His character is more complex. Even when he knows everything Dowell can only reiterate that the captain is one of the finest men he has ever met. In all his public and most of his private relations of life he is beyond reproach; but he is a sentimentalist whose vagrant fancy is continually being caught by some woman or other. When this happens his resolutions fade, and he makes no attempt to control his desires. His married life is a long record of infidelities masquerading as grand passions. His wife accepts the situation, and in the half-admitted hope that he will return to her sooner or later if she does not drive him away she countenances his liaisons. Indeed, she goes further than that, and actually chooses mistresses for him whose influence she thinks will be for his good. At first we quite refuse to agree with the author's view of his dramatis personae. To us Leonora is simply an ill-used, over-patient wife, and Ashburnham, despite his much-advertised virtues, a cad without any sense of honour, or even decency, where women are concerned. But Mr. Madox Hueffer guides our sympathies with great skill, and with a fuller knowledge of the hidden springs of action we come round to his point of view to a great extent. That their married life came to shipwreck must in the final verdict be laid at the door of Leonora. She made some great mistakes; she could not share her husband's ideals or sympathise with his hopes. By persisting in treating him as an irresponsible child she made him an irresponsible child. And as for Ashburnham—well, we see that he was largely a creature of circumstances, and the way in which he faced his last great temptation, with its doubly tragic denouement, makes amends for much in his past. (The Bodley Head.)

When Mr. H. B. Marriott Watson called his newest book "Chapman's Wares" he probably forecasted quite accurately the impression that it would make on the reader who knew the author's better work. Palpably most of these stories have been written for magazine consumption, and though this in itself is no reason why they should not be good, the author has been content with a standard which, however acceptable to the casual purchaser of the journals in which these stories were originally printed, will satisfy neither those who admire his earlier efforts, nor indeed, one hopes, himself. "The Instrument" is a case in point. He develops on dissimilar lines an idea popularised by Mr. H. G. Wells. The preliminaries are admirable, the conclusion is unconvincing. Mr. Marriott Watson has chosen to draw rein upon his imagination just where it was required. Much the same may be said of many of the other stories. "The Room in the Dolphin" certainly has an effective climax, but the stage has been so elaborately prepared that some such climax seemed inevitable. The "Shadow of the Forest" has suffered from compression. It might have been worked up into a good novel, but as it is written it is a commonplace short story. "The Winkeyn de Wud" is good in its way, but its humour depends too much on the preliminary construction. In fact, in several of these stories the author seems to have sat down with the intention of writing a story, whatever happened. His efforts have not been as fortunate as usual, though in two cases at least—"Elaine" and "Quarantine"—he is equal to the H. B. Marriott Watson that we admire. (Mills and Boon: G. Robertson.)

Nowadays no writer thinks it beneath his dignity to try his hand at the common or garden detective story, and many have achieved no small success by showing that beneath the dispassionate mask of the sleuth hound quite a human creature may live. However, the hero of "The Story Behind the Verdict," by "Frank Danby," is different from the conventional, and also from the unconventional, heroes of detective literature. He is by no means of the stuff of which successful criminologists ought to be made. He is a blase youth, an inveterate poseur, a snob, an egotist, in whose harness of egoism there is but a single joint—his love for his mother. He writes in a decadent vein, we are led to understand, and is by way of being rather a genius in the exotic fields to which his peculiar variety of inspiration leads him. But for an accident he might have pursued the even tenor of the dilettante degenerate dabbler in life and letters, but the accident happens, and it gives him excellent reason to believe that the finding of a coroner's jury tells neither the whole truth nor nothing but the truth. He believes that if one takes the trouble to look into the matter the ordinary verdict, "death by misadventure," and so forth, covers crimes and tragedies of which the public have no inkling. He becomes an assiduous attendant at inquests, and not only does he, in the presumption of youth, invariably believe that the coroner is wrong, but he also, with the wisdom of the serpent, usually manages to prove it. His researches are, for the most part, unsavoury. Lust, blackmail, insensate jealousy, as often as not are responsible for "the story behind the verdict." Sometimes Wilbur feels that his unofficial interference in the affairs of his follow-men is, after all, rather odious; in one case at least it brings disaster. But his solutions are ingenious, his attitude is novel, and his personality is original in a book of this type. Not the least original feature of it is that the heroine is his mother. (Cassell.)

Those whose literary taste lies in the direction of sensation served hot, and complication continually more entangled, will find "Tainted Gold," by Mr. H. Noel Williams, wholly to their liking. The hero succeeds to great possessions, left by an absconding uncle, and founded on fraud. But Gerald Carthew is not allowed to enjoy them in peace. A gang of American criminals pit their ingenuity against his, and he needs all the assistance of a coterie of friends to circumvent their multifarious plots. This gang begins its operations before Carthew knows of his good fortune (though it would not be fair to reveal the why and wherefore of this), and it does not abate its efforts until it has been out-plotted, out-witted, and outgeneralled at every turn. We confess that to read the book is something of a mental exercise. There are so many schemes and counter-schemes, so many villains and self-constituted sleuth-hounds, so many hair's-breadth escapes, excursions, and alarms, that the brain positively reels. But lovers of detective fiction will receive their money's worth and to spare. (Stanley Paul and Co.)

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

"Within the Lines," the new war-play for the Criterion Theatre next Saturday, will introduce as the heroine a new leading woman, Miss Charlotte Ives, of Boston. Her first little stage engagement was with the Hunter-Bradford Stock Company at Hartford (Conn.), and after useful experience there she supported John B. Mason, a famous artist, at Hackett's Theatre, New York, in "The Witching Hour," a drama by Augustus Thomas, dealing with mental telepathy, the dominant theme of conversation and study at the time. Four years ago she was in the same author's "As a Man Thinks" with the same star, both in New York and on tour, and thus played an excellent part for 18 months. Miss Ives was then successful at the New York Criterion in the important role of Margaret Summers in Haddon Chambers' touching comedy, "Passers-by," with Charles Cherry, an artist of note, as Peter Waverton. Her last appearance before leaving for Australia was as Amy in "Liberty Hall," with John Mason as star, the play being revived for the twentieth anniversary of the New York Empire Theatre. Miss Ives cordially shares the very high esteem in which the late Charles Frohman was held. She remarks:—"The great manager was by nature sympathetic in the case of other people's troubles, and equally courteous to high and low. I was with him both in 'Passers-by' and 'Liberty Hall,' after which I was the subject of the last engagement he made for any artist before his death. He wanted me for a moving picture of 'The Dictator,' one of the pieces Willie Collier staged in Australia, and Daniel Frohman sent me to Havannah to figure in the 'movies' amidst the real tropical scenery of the farcical drama. John Barrymore, who was the wireless boy in the Sydney production, played the leading part. The news of the Lusitania reached me on my return. Mr. Daniel Frohman, after shaking hands, remarked with some emotion, 'The last instruction in writing my brother ever gave me was about yourself.' Two weeks later I sailed by the Ventura."

Our correspondent, "A Woman in London," writes concerning "The Angel in the House" at the Savoy Theatre last month, in which H. B. Irving, associated during his long tour here with classic tragedy and old-time melodrama, appeared with success in a high-comedy role as a Meredithian egoist. Under his mother's will the "angel" is quartered upon a kinsman, at whose baronial hall he arrives with vans of luggage, and a parrot. "He comes on dressed in deep mourning, the very embodiment of woe, leading three dogs, a spaniel, a greyhound, and a minute Pekingese, all three wearing black ribbon bows. This entrance was irresistibly funny. I don't know when I have seen a house so convulsed with laughter as the audience at the Savoy. Mr. Irving has a light touch. He almost makes it an extravaganza, and it is the only way to play the part. He upsets everything with a charming smile. Orders the family portraits off the walls, changes the colour of the furniture, and hangs cubist pictures, and then explains them with stick in hand! Later, left alone in a Greek temple in the grounds with Lady Sarel, a silly woman of fashion, he tests his own temperature, fears "a horrid chill," and allows his partner most unselfishly to divest herself of an elaborately scalloped flannel petticoat. This the hero puts on, and the curtain falls with his profession of love for Lady Sarel on account for her high temperature! Lady Tree fell to the humour of her part beautifully."

Mr. James Chalmers, who was at the Congress Hotel and Annexe, Chicago, last month, sends an interesting account of a musical festival at Chicago's best suburb, Evanston, at which he heard two or three world-famous stars from the Metropolitan Opera. However, his first festival visit was to the "Elijah," conveniently held in the Gymnasium, with an audience of 5000, and 2000 voices in the choir, supported by a fine orchestra—a most imposing sight. All the ensembles were very good. The North Western University Choir of 31 voices sang the double quartet ("He Shall Give His Angels") and "Lift Thine Eyes" quite wonderfully. The soloists were not above Sydney level on a similarly special occasion, and the visitor found the work of Clarence Whitehill, a famous operatic baritone, distinctly uneven. At a second concert the stars, Pasquale Amato (baritone) and Frieda Hempel (soprano) were "great" in their operatic selections. Mr. Chalmers was surprised to find Chicago such a musical city. "It has been my good fortune to meet Miss Lucille Stevenson," he continues, "who is a front-rank soprano in Chicago, and far beyond. She is the sister of Catherine Stevenson, who sang with the Royal Sydney Liedertafel just before I left. I could mention several others, but must give preference to M. Paderewski, who is here playing for the Polish War Fund. I find him as affable as ever, though sadder in appearance. He loved to hear what his friends in Sydney were doing, and was touched by the news that they were cordially backing Mme. Melba in her Polish concert."

Mr. Robert Greig, who left here with his wife (Beatrice Holloway) for South Africa at the end of last year, writes from Johannesburg to say that they are appearing in the Niblo repertoire with the J. C. Williamson Comedy Company on the Cape circuit. Mr. John Webster, an American comedian, has made such a hit that the artists of the combination jump to the conclusion that he is "sure for Australia." In that case, Sydney folk will eventually see two new American farce-comedies, which have already proved great winners—"It Pays to Advertise" and "A Pair of Sixes." The former is the story of a young slacker (John Webster), who is persuaded by an energetic advertising expert (Robert Greig) that a fortune can be made by pushing "13 Soap—Unlucky for Dirt" on the market, thus forcing the lazy one's millionaire father (Herbert Leigh), who is in the soap business, to buy them out. The cast also included Edward O'Neill (the villain here in "Sealed Orders"), Esther Mitchell (the little Chinese girl in "Mr. Wu"), J. Plumpton Wilson, and Jeannette Sherwin. It is probable that the lastnamed is the daughter of Mme. Amy Sherwin. The "Tasmanian nightingale," as she was called in her early operatic days as a prima donna with the Carl Rosa Company, had a daughter of that name who was preparing for the stage two or three years ago. She was named after her god-father, Jean Paderewski, with Mathilde after her god-mother, the late Mme. Marchesi. Mr. Greig adds that "The Fortune Hunter" and the other Niblo pieces all caught on in turn, and that the whole company is having a very happy time.

Miss Vera Tasma, a Hobart soprano who assumed that name about five years ago at the suggestion of the late Mme. Marchesi in Paris, will make her debut here at the Sydney Madrigal Society's concert on Thursday next. This singer's brilliancy at the Associated Board Examination of the R.A.M. and R.C.M. (London) induced the travelling examiner, Mr. Fk. Moore, to send her to the Melbourne University Conservatorium with a recommendation to Mme. Melba. This was in 1909, when the diva was giving advanced students gratuitous instruction there. When Mme. Melba left again for Europe, she sent her promising pupil to the Marchesi School. This was early in 1910, and the veteran French teacher took such a fancy to the new arrival that, after a year at the house of Mme. Sassoli (mother of the young harpist who visited Australia with Mme. Melba a decade ago), she was invited to spend the best part of her second year at the Marchesi residence. Miss Tasma received much good teaching from Frederic Ponsot, accompanist at the school, and a clever artist. More lately, after a stay in England, the soprano visited Rome, and studied Italian opera there under Mario Cottogni, a star baritone at Covent Garden in the mid-seventies. Just before the war, she returned to Hobart as deputy in a large teaching connection during the principal's absence in Europe, and now she proposes to settle in Sydney.

By the "frequency" of its revival, and its merits as regards the Bernard Shaw "book," and the music by Oscar Strauss, "The Chocolate Soldier" is rapidly taking rank as a minor classic of the stage. The piece will be reproduced in Melbourne to-night with C. H. Workman as Bumerli, the character he played at the Lyric Theatre, London, from September, 1910, until December, 1911, when he continued at the same house as Count Cliquot in "Night Birds." During the "Chocolate Soldier" run there were 13 different Nadinas, one of whom, Pearl Ladd, who succeeded Constance Drever for several months, appears as Nadina to-night. Reginald Roberts will sing the tenor role, and there will be a new Mascha (Dorothy Brunton), with Albert Kavanagh again as Popoff, and Ethel Morrison again as Aurelia.

MRS. R. L. STEVENSON.

(BY G. E. L. WESTBROOK.)

The funeral of Mrs. Robert Louis Stevenson, who died at Santa-Barbara, California, U.S.A., on the 18th of February, 1914, and whose remains were cremated and brought to Samoa by her daughter (formerly Miss Isobel Strong, but now Mrs. Field), took place at Mount Vaea, Vailima, in Samoa, on Wednesday morning, 22nd June, 1915. It was the express wish of Mrs. Stevenson that she should be laid to rest by her husband's side at Mount Vaea, overlooking Vailima, where "Tusitala" (the story-teller) is buried.

At the time of her mother's death Mrs. Field was on a visit to Samoa, her former home, and left immediately for the United States when the sad news arrived. When last in Samoa she expressed herself very gratified to find that Dr. Schultz, the Governor, who lived at Vailima, had always seen that the track leading to the great author's tomb had been kept clear, so as to make the way as easy as possible for those doing the pilgrimage to the top of Mount Vaea. The track is very steep, and is about 1400 feet above sea level.

Colonel and Mrs. Logan, who now occupy Vailima as Government House, offered their spacious rooms to receive the guests who included Major Norton Francis, Staff Officer; Lieut. Andersen, Lieut. Cotton, A.D.C., Mr. Mason-Mitchell (the Consul for the United States), Mrs. Mason-Mitchell, Mesdames Pye-Smith, Freeman, Kerslake, Halliday, Nelson, Willis, and Arlow; Miss Meredith, and Sisters Cecilia and Agatha, of the Marist Sisters; Messrs. Kerslake, G. E. L. Westbrook, Copeland, sen., A. J. Tattersall, Thomas Trood (who was British Consul during the 15 years of German occupation of Samoa), and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Stowers.

There was a large gathering of native chiefs and their wives. Two of the chiefs, Tuatagaloa and Tofaeono, had assisted in carrying the remains of Robert Louis Stevenson up the steep incline to his last resting-place on December 4, 1894.

To quote from the Samoa "Weekly Herald" of that date, "It was the express wish of the family that his body should be buried on the top of the mountain on the left side of the house. . . . On the morning of the burial about 30 willing Samoans cut a road 10ft wide through the bush to the summit, where there is a flat space of about 20ft to 40ft, known as the Tia Sooala (pigeon-catching place of Sooala). From it there is a magnificent view; below are the buildings of Vailima, and farther to the east the Vailele plantation and a view of the coast as far as Saluafata. Looking inland one may see smaller peaks and valleys covered with bush, while towards the north can be seen the slopes of Vaea running towards Apia, and a view of the outer reef. The Rev. W. E. Clarke read the expressive burial service of the Church of England, with the introduction of a prayer, which had been written by the deceased, after which the coffin was lowered into its place and the British flag placed over it, followed by sufficient flowers to almost fill the grave. The Rev. J. E. Newell gave an eloquent address in Samoan, and, after a prayer in that language, those present began the descent, after paying the last respects to the memory of one who was sincerely esteemed by those who knew him for his genial manner and kindliness of heart."

The land on which Robert Louis Stevenson was buried was the property of Mr. Thomas Trood, and presented by him to the family as a perpetual burial-ground.

By the order of Colonel Logan, the road leading to the tomb had been properly cleared, and steps made the day before the burial of Mrs. Stevenson.

Mr. Field carried the ashes of Mrs. Stevenson in an urn enveloped in fine mats. Mrs. Field and Vaaiga (the wife of Tamasese) came next, each carrying a fine mat, the same that had been presented to the family at the time of Mr. Stevenson's death. The Samoa chiefs, officers in uniform, the ladies in their white dresses, all carried arms full of flowers and wreaths, making the procession a most picturesque one as it wound upwards through the forest.

The Rev. Dr. George Brown, the veteran Wesleyan missionary of the South Seas, then on a visit to Samoa, and who was well acquainted with Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson, had been requested to conduct the service, but, unfortunately, did not return from Savaii in time. Colonel Logan therefore read the Church of England service for the dead. Filimoni, a native pastor, made a most eloquent address in the Samoan language; and then, removing the fine mats and flowers from the small space that had been cut out of the base of the tomb, Mr. Joseph Stowers interred the ashes of Mrs. Robert Louis Stevenson, beneath the chaste bronze tablet that was already in place, while the natives joined in singing a beautiful Samoan hymn.

After the burial service photographs were taken of the tomb and some of those present. On one side of the tomb is the requiem in verse written by R. L. S.:—

Under the wide and starry sky,
Dig the grave and let me lie.
Glad did I live, and gladly die;
And I laid me down with a will.
This be the verse you grave for me:
Here he lies where he longed to be;
Home is the sailor, home from the sea,
And the hunter home from the hill.

At the top is the name "Robert Louis Stevenson, 1850-1894." On the other side is an inscription in Samoan, beginning with the words "The tomb of Tusitala," a quotation from the book of Ruth following: "Whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge. Thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God; where thou diest I will die, and there will I be buried."

After the service the procession wended its way down the hill to the "Ala o le Lotoalofa" (Road of the Loving Hearts), where the natives had prepared a feast, and a long table had been spread composed of leaves and palm branches, with small trees to shut off the bright sunshine. The sign-post on this road, and the notice board, which is still readable, were placed there a few months before Stevenson died. The notice board commemorates in Samoan the building of the road by some Samoans (political prisoners) whom Stevenson had befriended.

While the feast was being spread a solemn kava ceremony was held in the ancient Samoan style, the kava being passed around according to rank.

Colonel Logan addressed the natives as follows:—"It is a pleasure to meet you here to-day, for we have gathered to do honour to the departed. The Samoans do not forget a friend—they are true and loyal—and we are gathered here together to do honour to one who loved Samoa and the Samoans. It must be a great pleasure to the Samoans that Mr. and Mrs. Field have come to this land upon this sacred errand. I am glad that I am here representing King George, and that I am able to place Vailima at their disposal. It would have been a great pleasure to the great chief who is buried on the hill to know that the British flag is flying on his old home, and so, although the occasion is a sad one in one respect, it is a pleasure in another, for Stevenson and his wife are together again. I am very glad indeed to see the Samoan chiefs here to-day to do honour to the wife of Tusitala. May God bless you all."

Tamasese said: "We are gathered here to-day to do honour to the memory of Mrs. Stevenson, a kind friend and a true wife, and I hope that every couple will be blessed with the same affection that beautified the life of Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson."

Leleua and Manogi, two "talking chiefs," also spoke, after which the party sat down to the "Taumafataga," or feast, which everybody thoroughly enjoyed. It consisted of sucking-pigs, poultry, prawns, salads, taro, cooked and ripe bananas, sugar-cane, and the milk of young cocoanuts. It must have been a great novelty to the visitors who had never been guests at a Samoan feast before.

Before the party dispersed Mrs. Field, in bidding farewell, said: "When Mr. Stevenson came here to Samoa he was very ill. He had searched all over the world—France, America, Australia, and many of the islands of the South Seas—but it was here in Samoa that he found health. He found not only health, but happiness, and many friends, so that when he came to die it was his wish to be buried in this beautiful land. My mother in the years that have passed since his death always thought of Samoa with affection, and it was her wish to be buried on Mount Vaea. Mr. Field and I have journeyed many miles to carry out her wishes. It will be very hard for us to leave Samoa, but we know that our dear ones on Mount Vaea are resting on the most beautiful land in the world, amongst the kindest and tenderest people."

THE CHURCHES.

A RIGHTEOUS MAN.

The righteousness of inflicting punishment upon Germany on account of the present war was the keynote of a sermon delivered by Bishop Averiel, of Auckland, last week. Sometimes, said the Bishop, a certain course of action was described as un-Christian. But the standard of judgment was often entirely foreign to the spirit of Christ. The so-called Christian standards were often nothing more than men's partialities. There was a weak and flabby sentimentalism abroad which regarded all suffering, whether righteous, disciplinary, or remedial, as the greatest evil of existence, and the absence of any kind of suffering, physical, mental, or spiritual, as the greatest good of existence. War and capital punishment were frequently denounced as un-Christian because they involved circumstances of horror. A righteous war was justifiable, and not un-Christian. A nation which regarded itself as Christian must be prepared to execute justice and judgment upon the oppressor, and if a Christian nation failed to stand for the principles of Christ it stood in the same position as a judge who failed to do his duty because of the painful consequences. As God's instruments for upholding His ideals and punishing the oppressor, the British nation was engaged in a righteous—if a terrible—work, and it dare not shrink from it. The ultimate object of the war must be the restoration of the true self in a nation which was not bringing forth the fruits of righteousness. There was nothing un-Christian in Britain's participation in the war.

THE KING'S EXAMPLE.

In a sermon delivered recently, Dr. Charles Brown said that the nation had been moved and thrilled by the prompt and brave action of the King in prohibiting the use of alcoholic drink in the royal establishments. A statesman, whose genius and courage no one questioned nowadays, had declared that drink was doing more damage to the nation than all the German submarines, and that it was a greater enemy than Germany or Austria. It was almost worth having a war to have had this admission made in the highest quarters. It should be burnt into the heart and mind of the people of Great Britain. The plague spot in our national life had now been laid bare, and it was to be fervently hoped that it would never be allowed to be covered up again until it had been drastically dealt with. Dr. Brown declared that the drink evil could be starved out, if only people would abstain, and he called upon the Church to follow the lead of the King. An impressive scene marked the close of the sermon, when the whole of the vast congregation rose to its feet, pledging itself to abstain from intoxicating drinks during the war.

THE RECRUITING CAMPAIGN.

Special prayers have been prepared for use at Church of England services to-morrow, which is the Sunday of preparation for the State recruiting campaign. On a circular addressed to the clergy, Archbishop Wright says:—"The Premier has asked me if possible to use next Sunday for the purpose of bringing before our people the solemn call for new national resolutions and for a yet wider response to the crusade for men, to be opened on August 4. I will ask you therefore to do your utmost at this time of solemn emergency to deepen the sense of national responsibility and of dependence upon God. To this end I enclose special prayers, and hope that in your sermons you will endeavour to press those truths home. It is only as we come humbly to God first that we can hope effectually to go out and do our duty. It would also be wise to have some special service on Wednesday, August 4, the anniversary of the of the outbreak of the war. Our aim should be to use such as will most impress upon our people the thought of the deep seriousness of the days in which we live and of the critical dangers through which our Empire is passing."

A. Clark).

The death is announced of the Rev. A. Ballantyne, who for the past ten years has been a Methodist missionary in Papua. He had been unwell for some time, and intended taking a trip to Australia for his health. He leaves a widow and family.

Referring to the visit to Australia of the Rev. Dr. Hoss, a Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church of America, the Melbourne "Spectator" says:—"It may be as well to explain what is not at all clear to the outsider—that John Wesley, while denying the doctrine of Apostolic Succession as applied to the validity of ministerial ordination, believed himself to be as Scriptural a bishop as any man in England or Europe. These are his own words, and following what he believed to be the Divine leading, he set about ordaining men for America, a field then so sadly neglected by others. Thus he founded the Methodist Episcopal Church, giving his American followers an order of bishops. That form of Church government has proved remarkably adapted to the American situation."

The Rev. G. I. Pearson, of New Britain, is on furlough in Sydney.

The Rev. H. R. Rycroft, who has charge of one of the Methodist stations in the Solomon Islands, is on a visit to Queensland. He is expected in Sydney shortly.

The Society of St. Vincent de Paul has greatly interested itself in the care of Roman Catholic soldiers in camp at Liverpool. It has there erected a tent capable of accommodating 1000 men, and mass is offered every Sunday. Everything that could add to the material comfort of the men has been provided—quantities of writing materials, ample supplies of Catholic and other literature, and games of all kinds, the whole work being in the charge of one of the brothers of the society, who lives in the tent, and who is carrying on a veritable apostolate among the soldiers. It is claimed that, satisfactory as the results have been from a material standpoint, they have been infinitely more so as regards the spiritual welfare of the men. Many thousands of religious objects—prayer-books, rosaries, scapulars, and medals—were distributed among them.

Extension into country towns is part of the work of the Mission Study Council for this year. Newcastle churches are to be approached this week-end by a deputation of speakers from Sydney. Special missionary services have been arranged for morning or evening in a number of the local churches, and united gatherings will be held in the afternoon to press the claims of the missionary education of the Church, more especially by means of mission study circles. Several circles will be formed in the district before the end of the month, and a leaders' training circle before the end of the year.

NEW MUSIC.

Messrs. W. H. Paling and Co. publish new music almost necessarily, as it appears nowadays, of a patriotic character.

"Coo-ee, Coo-ee! You're Wanted at the Dardanelles," music by Edwd. H. Tyrrell, words by Peter L. Tighe, provides what vaudeville audiences would term "a rattling good tune," than which no further remark is needed.

"See!" music by Chas. A. Jarman, words by J. A. Meade, bounds at once into a tripping melody in a breezy and virile ballad-style that pleases. The composition is musicianly, and not too long.

"The Marseillaise" has been arranged for piano by Marcelle Christian, the principal change serving to introduce sprightly variations in the accompaniment consisting chiefly of extended arpeggios, syncopated effects, and other instrumental devices.

"Heroes of the Dardanelles," words and music by Reginald A. A. Stoneham, was successfully introduced in the second act of "The Marriage Market" by John Ralston, as sailing-master of the Mariposa. Martial in character, with dramatic changes of mood which afford the relief of contrast, this song is effectively written for the voice.

"Men of the Dardanelles March" is the pianoforte piece composed by N. Albert Shaw (the copyright of which was sold for £14/3/ at a Roseville Red Cross concert). It was subsequently purchased by Dr. Dight, who now publishes it in the interests of the Wounded Soldiers' Fund. This march may be summed up as a quite characteristic and spirited piece of military-band music, with bright thematic changes.

"Three Cheers for our Gallant Navy" (Drain's Music Depot), words and music by A. V. Stenning, has been arranged by Mabel Wilcox. This song is but indifferently well harmonised, but it provides a suitable melody for the verse.

"She Who Gives Her Son" (All music-sellers), words by Stephen Ratto, composed by W. Bass Hodge, has the advantage of a striking frontispiece of an heroic matron parting from her boy. The song takes the form of a vocal waltz, which moves rhythmically forward, and is correctly harmonised.

THE TARIFF.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In your article in to-day's issue on the postponement of the tariff discussion in the Federal Parliament, you refer to the disappointment expressed in commercial circles with the steps taken by the British manufacturers to capture Germany's lost trade, and state that, notwithstanding the preference to Great Britain, home manufacturers have so far made "no effort" to secure some of the orders formerly placed with Germany, and that America and Japan are capturing this trade. You make no mention of the numerous handicaps to which British industry is subject at present. These may be summarised roughly as: (1) Shortage of labour through enlistment with the colours; (2) shortage of supplies of raw material; (3) shortage of shipping tonnage; (4) Admiralty and War Office contracts taking precedence over private orders.

A review of the various journals published in the United Kingdom which are available here suffices to explain the position. As long as the mother country is engaged in a life-and-death struggle with her enemies, the capturing of enemy trade, important though it be, must be relegated to a second place. But to say that British manufacturers have made "no effort" to capture enemy trade is unjust; the writer of your article is apparently unaware that there has been held in London a trade fair organised by the Board of Trade, and that, as a result of this, satisfactory business is being done by British firms making goods which take the place of those manufactured by the enemy. Since the beginning of the war the British Trade Commissioner in Australia has succeeded in placing many Australian firms in touch with sources of supply, of which they were previously unaware, and much business formerly done with enemy countries has been diverted to the United Kingdom, notwithstanding the handicaps before mentioned.

Secretary, the Australian
Association of British Manufacturers.

GERMAN EMPLOYEES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

I am, etc.,

CHAPTER XIX.
THE OCCULT.

For some minutes after Chauden Bux had pronounced the word of warning, Herbert Maury sat with his eyes fixed on the board between them. An observer who only looked at surface things might have thought that he was merely considering his next move, studying his future strategy, in order to escape from the predicament in which his opponent had placed him. But Chauden Bux, who, under his calm exterior had a trick of watching everything about him with unusual appreciation, knew that Herbert was not looking at his kings and queens, his castles and bishops at all; although his gaze was apparently fixed on them, his eyes were in reality seeing something else, something far different. And presently he rose, making a move with his hand toward chessboard and chessmen as if he wished to dismiss them.

"I won't play any more just now, Chauden Bux," he said, dropping into an easy chair. "Put the things away—I want to talk to you."

Chauden Bux obediently packed up the pieces, and, having placed them in a cupboard, turned to his master and folded his hands, a model of patient complaisance and attention.

"Sit down," said Herbert, pointing to the chair which Chauden Bux had just vacated. "Sit down."

The Hindu bowed, as if to acknowledge the honour done him, and quietly seating himself became still more a monument of attention. His hands were folded in his sleeves; his eyes were downcast; he remained so still, so motionless, that Herbert wondered if he had some power of transforming himself into something very like a statue.

"Chauden Bux," said Herbert, "I want to talk to you. You were in your late master's confidence."

The Hindu inclined his head in a fashion that indicated a desire to qualify Herbert's assertion.

"To a certain extent only, sir," he answered. "My late master was, if he pleased to be so, very reserved."

"All the same," continued Herbert, "he took you into his confidence a good deal. He talked confidentially to you, for instance, after you came here—about Barcovitch and Rysedale."

Again Chauden Bux bowed his head.

"Yes, sir, but only to extract from me such information as I could give him," he answered.

"Yet I've no doubt he told you a good deal," said Herbert. "Most men of my Uncle James's sort do talk to their valets. Now, I daresay he told you all about Mrs. Featherstone, eh?"

Chauden Bux looked an inquiry. His smooth face was full of innocence; it conveyed the impression that to him Mrs. Featherstone was little more than a name.

"Mrs. Featherstone was a passenger on board the Medina, sir," he said. "I frequently saw my late master in conversation with her. Also in Paris they were much together while we remained in that city—a few days."

"Did he never tell you that he was thinking of marrying Mrs. Featherstone?" asked Herbert.

"My late master, sir, was not a gentleman to tell me of his very private affairs," answered Chauden Bux. "If I may venture on surmising what would have happened in that event, it would have been that he would have informed me of the event an hour before it took place."

"Then you didn't know that they were engaged?" asked Herbert.

"No, sir—I did not know that," replied Chauden Bux.

Herbert, without taking his eyes off the Hindu, felt on the shelf at his side for a cigar-box. He picked a cigar out of it, lighted it, and smoked for a while before he spoke again.

"While you were away in London to-day, Chauden Bux," he said, "Mrs. Featherstone came here."

"Yes, sir?" said Chauden Bux, without surprise or interest.

"Mrs. Featherstone, Chauden Bux, says that when she was on the Medina she entrusted to your late master a certain jewel, a ruby of great value, which he was to have reset for her. Do you know anything about that?"

"Nothing, sir."

The answer was quietly emphatic, but as unemotional as the previous one.

"Mrs. Featherstone says that Mr. James Maury had that ruby on him when he left Paris—she saw it in his possession at the Gare du Nord station there, when she said good-bye to him. Did you witness this farewell?"

"No, sir. We were a little late for the train from Paris. Having seen my late master to his seat, I had to make haste to secure my own. I left that lady, Mrs. Featherstone, in conversation with him."

"Well, you had him pretty well under observation until I met you at Charing Cross, anyway," said Herbert, reflectively. "And I'm certain he never went anywhere that I wasn't aware of until that morning when he was murdered. Chauden Bux, when Miss Erringham and I found you sitting by my uncle's body you volunteered the statement that he hadn't been robbed. How did you know that?"

"Because, sir, I knew what my late master carried upon him. His pocket-book. His purse. A little ready money in gold and silver. His watch. His rings. All these valuables were there. As you, sir, and the police ascertained shortly afterwards."

"All the same," said Herbert, more to himself than to his listener, "all the same, if the old chap carried that stone where she said he did somebody who knew might have taken it. Then you don't know anything about this ruby that Mrs. Featherstone talks of, Chauden Bux?"

"Nothing, sir."

"Well, I don't see why she should lie about it," mused Herbert. "And yet I'm sure it's nowhere about his effects, and it certainly wasn't on him, Chauden Bux."

"Sir?"

"What were you after when you asked Miss Erringham to go away in silence? What did you mean when you spoke of the silence being broken?"

For the first time since Herbert had known him the Hindu showed signs of discomfort. His hands became a little restless, his fine eyes began to move; he glanced at the ceiling, he looked at the floor, finally he turned to his questioner with something of an appeal in his face.

"You needn't mind saying anything you like to me," remarked Herbert. "Be as frank and candid as you like. If it's anything to do with your religious belief, don't be afraid of saying what you please, straight out. I don't belong to any religion myself; I've no creed and no faith and no belief, but I've plenty of sympathy and respect for people who have. What was it, Chauden Bux?"

Chauden Bux smiled a little in a deprecating, melancholy fashion.

"Sir," he said, "with all respect, perhaps you would not understand. I have learnt, sir, that the ways and thoughts of the West are not those of the East."

"You can regard me as belonging to neither East nor West," said Herbert. "I have no regard to points of the compass in matters of that sort. I am a super-man. Speak, Chauden Bux."

The Hindu considered matters a little. Then his face became grave, and, bending forward, he spoke with earnestness.

"It is my belief, sir," he said, "that when the soul quits the body—and especially when, as in this instance, it is driven out of it by violence—it does not immediately leave the neighbourhood, the atmosphere, the personal environment of the body. It waits—it looks back upon the tenement of clay which it has quitted. It may even communicate its thoughts to persons who are close at hand if—" he paused a moment, "if they are properly receptive. I requested Miss Erringham—or, as you would say, I suggested to her by what you call telepathy—to go away from the scene of the murder, so that I might find out from the actual body of my master, which I knew was near, the truth of the case."

"And did you—did you?" asked Herbert, who, in spite of his scepticism, was eager enough to know all the Hindu could tell him.

"No, sir. He was there, it was true. But I learnt nothing."

"He was there," exclaimed Herbert. "Do you mean his spirit was there."

"Yes! But," continued Chauden Bux, shaking his head, "it was in a state of such shock, astonishment, and indignation that it was incoherent. It disappeared, weeping with rage that such a crime should have been committed against it."

Herbert sat for a moment staring at his companion. He let his cigar go out, and he suddenly threw it in the fire.

"You believe all that?" he said.

"I know it, sir," answered Chauden Bux quietly.

THE HALFWAY TRENCH.

Half-way up the [illegible] slope the advance had [illegible] in front of the trench. It turned [illegible] the [illegible] trench of the British [illegible] through which the [illegible] brigade was to advance. The [illegible] came up breathless with the pace and with its heavy packs, looked down and saw the British looking up at them, and tumbled without a word into the trench beside them [illegible] lay down in rear of the trench, where the parapet sheltered them. [illegible]

The men were given three or four minutes' spell, and then the Brigadier, who had so far led the [illegible], [illegible] on the parapet, [illegible] walking [illegible] of a storm of bullets, shouted, "Now, then, Australians!" and [illegible] with his periscope. And then [illegible] will [illegible] for posterity. A shout of "Come along, Australians!" went along that trench [illegible] who had been taking their breath there rose. The loose earth of the parapet fell in [illegible] into the trench as they scrambled up it. There was an infinitely small pause as they started out ahead of them with [illegible] attitudes and very grim set faces, gripping their rifles and staring out into the unknown. I have seen men stand exactly so in battle pictures, and wondered if they ever looked so in reality. Well—the artists are not all wrong. They stand there for [illegible], and then with shouts of "Come along, Australia!" swept like a hurricane across the [illegible] in front.

A DEADLY FIRE.

The moment they left the trench they began to fall—one here, another there—not quickly but steadily. Wounded men began to crawl back into the trench. Now a man would come hobbling, now on hands and knees, now [illegible]. I saw several men running who eventually [illegible] somehow into the trench with [illegible] a wound perhaps in the throat or the shoulder, and was [illegible] the British soldiers in that trench several times hopped out to help some of our wounded, both from the field behind the trench and that in front of it [illegible] under cover. I saw one Lancashireman go out and lie by a wounded Australian for some time, and talk to him and finally bring him in on his back.

But I never saw a single man come back into that trench who was not wounded except one, and he was a messenger who had braved that death [illegible] with a signal message in hand—of the [illegible] signallers who went out with the brigade headquarters that [illegible] four, I believe, were hit. I never saw a man who gave way to the temptation—for it is a temptation and has to be guarded against—to help a wounded comrade back into that trench for safety, and so leave his real duty of pushing forward with the attack. Line after line, as it came up and took its breath, went on across the slope, which was now becoming thickly scattered with the dead and wounded. When there was no officer to lead [illegible] I saw a man who, to the best of memory, was an ordinary private [illegible] "Well, boys," he said, "suppose we had better be going. We've got to get into it some time," and [illegible] scrambled, and 20 or 30 men scrambled out after him.

"A WONDERFUL SIGHT."

On they went through like a whirlwind. Away to the right at this moment I could see the French in the act of taking by a bayonet charge the redoubt which they had been attacking when I watched them previously. [illegible] the [illegible] of the last [illegible] who attempted to defend it [illegible] his rifle [illegible] the French [illegible] the parapet and [illegible] down with their bayonet at [illegible] which, I suppose, was sheltering below. On our left [illegible] but just across the [illegible] New Zealanders. They had got [illegible] of a tremendous fire across the daisy field. The Auckland Battalion lost altogether thirteen of its officers.

The fire from which the Australians suffered was probably not so much from the front as from the right and left flanks. The advance was so rapid that the left flank got a good deal ahead of the New Zealanders, who were meeting again with furious opposition in their centre, and who finally joined up their right with the second brigade's left after dark. The majority of the second brigade never saw the Turkish trenches ahead of them at all that afternoon, although they made them out plainly next day about a quarter of a mile away.

THE GAP ON THE RIGHT.

On the right, where the French would have connected [illegible] the line never joined up at all. The brigade pushed up four hundred yards ahead of the rest of the line—the French who had [illegible] their trenches [illegible] gallant charge, having pushed back a body of Turks on their left, and these troops began to get their fire in behind the Australian right flank. The brigade-major who was in charge of this part of the line [illegible] the Turkish bullets striking the stone on the Krithia road from the east—a fact which made him very anxious about his flank. He [illegible] to [illegible] messages through all [illegible], and the 8th Battalion, which was coming up in support, was partially diverted to this flank. The 5th, as it came up into the firing line, saw the Turks opposite part of its front. The trenches were about 150 yards away, and the Turks bolted from them as the line came up. Our men [illegible] however, still being on their [illegible], and after the right had been pushed up to within 400 yards or so of the [illegible] where the shells were bursting it had to stop and dig in. A British battalion was sent up to fill the gap between our right and the French left.

The advance of the Second Brigade was one of about a thousand yards under a very hot fire. The advance of each line only occupied about a quarter of an hour. The cost was heavy, but the ground was held on to, and there was never the slightest chance of it being retaken by the enemy. The actual gain of new ground was about five hundred yards.

SOME OF THE CASUALTIES.

The whole of the brigade headquarters staff that went into the fight was either killed or wounded, except one signaller. When the signallers were hit a messenger from the 8th Battalion volunteered to help to carry the reel with the telephone wire, but he, too, was hit. The Brigadier, who led the advance with the utmost gallantry, and whom everyone momentarily expected to see hit, somehow escaped until next morning, when he was wounded more than half a mile behind the firing line whilst going back to see if more stretcher-bearers could not be obtained. Sergeant-Major Monks, of the headquarters signallers, was killed by the side of the telephone line—one of the most popular men in the force. Colonel Garside was killed just behind the firing line. Colonel MacNicoll, of the 6th, was hit first when rising to lead his men after their spell at the half-way trench. He got up again, blew his whistle, and led them on, but was seriously wounded before he had gone three hundred yards. Major Cass was shot through the shoulder whilst he was endeavouring to ensure that the line wouldn't be outflanked on the right, and was hit a second time whilst lying on the ground.

The two brigades occupied for several days the trenches which they had won. Both needed relief and reorganisation—the new Queensland brigade lost not very far short of the same number as the Second Brigade. The advance made by them was easily the most important made in the centre during that battle. Of the original companies in most of the battalions of the Second Brigade, there was not a third of the strength [illegible]. Of course, however, many of these [illegible] consisted of men not permanently [illegible] many cases lightly wounded.

The Second Brigade returned to the Australian and New Zealand position [illegible] in time to take some part in repelling the Turkish attack of May 19, and the new Queensland Brigade just after the Australians. When I met some men of the 7th Battalion on the morning of May 19 just leaving [illegible] trenches where they had been [illegible], they seemed to have only one [illegible], and that was that the Turk would make another attack.

IN THE TRENCHES.

A HOT FIRE.

DEEDS OF THE TROOPS.

Captain A. W. Hyman, a Sydney solicitor, in command of the [illegible] Squadron, 7th Regiment, 2nd Light Horse Brigade, in a letter to Mr. K. [illegible], of [illegible]:—"I am now right up in the firing line, and have been under fire constantly. It is a big [illegible] of [illegible], but one gets more or less used to it after a day or two; it gives you more confidence when you are able to distinguish between [illegible] guns and those of the enemy. The work done here by our country has been magnificent, and when Australia reads the details she will indeed be proud of her men. The situation [illegible] and [illegible] are [illegible] extraordinary. In some places the [illegible]. When one [illegible] the Turks [illegible]. Now they [illegible] ever they want to [illegible] on the same. In some places the trenches are only about 20 yards apart, so that the words of command can be plainly heard. The cheerfulness of the wounded and the personal bravery of everyone are splendid. To me the Turks seem to be wavering, and I hope Italy having come in will make her might felt very soon. The other day the Turks wanted to bury their hundreds of dead, and they got an armistice. While this was going on a German officer hit a Turk with a shovel, and one of our fellows shaped up to him and the German slunk away. Such is the contradiction of things."

NIGHT FIGHTING.

"The Turks leave their fighting until night time," writes Lance-Sergeant C. Matheson to his wife. "[illegible] have look-out to wait [illegible] and they [illegible] the charge very early in the morning. I have accounted for a good [illegible] since I arrived. They are [illegible] excellent shots, and if you put your head above the trench for a second it is good night. Of course, they have only to do the same, and we serve them likewise."

AN ENGLISHMAN'S TRIBUTE.

Sergeant W. J. Cooper, who is an Englishman, forgets his own part in the landing operations in his desire to tell of the bravery of the Australians. "We are well established here now," he writes to his wife; "and all the Turks in the world could not get us out. Australia has made a name for herself that will never die. I am an Englishman myself, but I am proud of being a sergeant in such a fine body of fighters. The poor old Triumph went down yesterday afternoon. I saw that she was canted over on one side, and destroyers and steamboats were racing towards her to save the crew. In 15 minutes she was upside down. The bottom was painted a copper-colour, and it looked like a small island. . . . I never want to see such a sight again."

GLORY MARK.

Private W. H. Dudley, wounded at the Dardanelles, and now in hospital, writing to relations at Delegate, says:—"The order eventually came to dig in, and we held our position at awful cost. We lay there all night with red-hot rifles, as the Turks, led by German officers, attacked again and again, only to be repulsed every time. When dawn broke we had to charge the enemy again, who had taken up a position about 300 yards away. When within about 100 yards of them I was hit twice almost simultaneously; one in the left leg, and one in the right arm. I was carried back to the hospital, but a couple of days saw me fairly well again, and I went back to the trenches. On June 30 we again made a bayonet charge, and had almost gained the parapet when I got in the road of one of their machine guns, and fell badly wounded in two places, and unconscious. It was 2 o'clock next morning when I came to, and I began to drag myself towards our trenches. I then whistled, and stretcher-bearers brought me in. I am now in hospital with two bad wounds; one bullet having gone through my chest, and the other in the forehead above the nose. I shall always carry the scar of this wound, but it will be a glory mark. The bullet has been located in my head, but I may be sent to England to have the operation performed to extract it."

A TRYING TIME.

Writing to his sister (Mrs. A. M. [illegible]), [illegible], Trooper C. [illegible] tells the [illegible] that everyone, some of the boats on that memorable landing day. He says:—"Ten of our company were asked to go as boatmen, and you may bet I was not long in hopping into a boat, in which were Major Swannell and his company. Each pinnace was towing six boats, and before we got within [illegible] of the shore three of our boats had been sunk by shrapnel, half of the company being killed in a minute. The pinnace got hooked up in the barbed wire that had been placed in the water, and we had very hard work trying to get her off, with shrapnel falling all around us. Eventually we had to abandon the boats and take the pinnace back alone. I never expected to live through the experience, but did not even get a scratch."

PRISONER IN TURKEY.

Leading Stoker J. Kerin, who was a member of the crew of the Australian submarine AE2, writing to his brother (Mr. P. Kerin, of Coolamon) from Constantinople, says:—"Just a few lines to say I am well. I suppose you've heard of the AE2's exploit, and finally her fate. Happily no one was injured, and the boat sank in deep water. I do not know how long we will be detained here. The Turkish people are treating us very well indeed. Writing material is very scarce. I am quite well and safe, and having a good rest."

REFINING INFLUENCE.

Private A. M. M'Intosh (dentist), of the A.M.C., writing to his father, Rev. G. M'Intosh, says:—By the time I get home I will not want to talk about war any more, but only forget it as a bad dream, and yet not all bad, for there is no doubt that it has brought out all that is noble in thousands, and knocked out much that was bad. I am sure I have fewer sleepless nights now than I did at home worrying about fellows at the front. In fact, some of my best nights' sleep have been when the most shells were fired, and the rattle of rifle fire hardly ceased for a moment.

STAY-AT-HOMES REBUKED.

Lieutenant A. L. Fitzpatrick, quartermaster, 1st Australian Light Horse, writes from Gallipoli:—"We are still here in the valley in our bivouac, having a rest after our ten days' strenuous work in the trenches on Pope's Hill. We have been in this spot now for over a fortnight, dodging bullets all the time. It is a funny experience, and no one knows what it means until they have had a taste of it. If that crowd which gazes idly on at cricket matches and makes itself comfortable at home, and enjoys itself generally, could only see what our brave lads have gone through, they would surely blush with self-consciousness. The casualty lists will give them an idea of what war means. Numbers of fellows I met in Cairo at different times have gone, and the first day I landed here I came across the grave of Lieutenant-Colonel Braund near the beach. It is a great pity, but it is all in the game, and we must make the sacrifice."

DEADLY GASES.

Corporal A. McLeod, of the 2nd Seaforth Highlanders, an Imperial Reservist, who was in Australia when the war broke out, writes from France to a Mudgee friend:—"We are in a hot corner here. No doubt you have read in the papers about the Germans sending over to our trenches clouds of deadly gases. Well, I've had two doses of it. The first dose very nearly settled me. On Sunday, May 2, we were all wondering why the Germans were so quiet. But we were soon to learn why. The breeze was in their favour, and, with it, they sent clouds of gas of yellow and greenish colour. The breeze drove it in our direction, and we had to breathe this sickly and poisonous gas into our lungs. In a minute we were all gasping for breath, and some of our brave fellows were nearly driven mad. But they stuck to their posts until they were one by one overcome by the deadly gas. We lost a lot of good men, and the majority of us are unfit for anything."

AMERICA AND THE ALLIES.

IMPRESSIONS OF MR. J. C. WATSON.

Mr. J. C. Watson, ex-Prime Minister of the Commonwealth, returned to Sydney yesterday by the R.M.S. Makura, after a five months' tour of England, America, and Canada.

He said that while in the old country the main thing which impressed him was the large number of men he saw drilling in every town and village he visited. He was also struck with the fine physique of the troops. "It was quite a surprise to one who had been led to believe that the average Londoner was a degenerate," he continued, "but the men I saw were fine specimens. The contrast between the undrilled and the partly-drilled men was very striking. I understand that the Army authorities require each recruit to go through three months' physical drill before he is passed as a soldier, and in that time he improves wonderfully in his physique, and it is not an uncommon thing to hear of the chest measurement being increased by several inches. The men also become hardy. The men I saw were nearly all young."

When Mr. Watson arrived in New York the torpedoing of the Lusitania had just occurred, and the people were seething with indignation at the cowardly action of Germany. "Judging by conversations I had with different people, and by what I read in the papers," he said, "there was only one feeling—that the Allies would be successful. It was indeed gratifying to me to find that such unanimity of opinion prevailed on the question of the condemnation of Germany. The feeling had been there previously, but it did not find full expression until the Lusitania incident. The German papers there were the exceptions."

THEATRICAL DISPUTE.

Watson and another v Brennan's Amphitheatre, Ltd.

Mr. E. M. Mitchell, instructed by Messrs. Sly and Russell, appeared for the defendants (appellants); and Mr. Watt and Mr. Tighe, instructed by Mr. E. G. Maddocks Cohen, for the respondents (plaintiffs). The action, which was one brought by William Watson and Ethel Watson, vaudeville artists, against Brennan's Amphitheatre, Ltd., to recover compensation for breach of agreement, was tried before Mr. Justice Sly and a jury of four, in June last. The case for the plaintiffs was that by a contract dated July 22, 1912, they were engaged by defendants at a salary of £40 per week, plus their fares to Australia and return to England, to perform at various places of amusement. The period of engagement was originally 24 weeks, but it was extended to 28 weeks, and plaintiffs' complaint was that defendants had neglected to hand them their return fares, amounting to £92, and that in consequence of this they were unable to leave Australia, and thus lost profitable engagements in England. They therefore claimed damages in both respects. The defendants paid £36 2s 6d into court, representing the fares to England, and pleaded not indebted on the balance of the claim. The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiffs for £300, in addition to the amount paid into court; and defendants now appealed and asked that the verdict should be set aside and entered for them, or a new trial ordered, or that the amount of the verdict be reduced to the sum paid into court. The main grounds of appeal were that, on the facts and circumstances proved in evidence, no damages were recoverable above the amount paid into court; that the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover damages for loss of business, consequent upon their alleged inability to proceed to England, and that the verdict was against evidence. There were also grounds as to the advisability of certain evidence.

After argument,

The Court said the declaration alleged that the non-payment of the return fares prevented plaintiffs from carrying out their contracts with managers in England and elsewhere, which defendants well knew had been entered into; but there was nothing in the agreement to show that these contracts were in the contemplation of the parties. In the absence of evidence of the existence of such contracts, the performance of which would reasonably be in the contemplation of the parties, the plaintiffs could not recover special damages, and the jury was in error in deciding that anything more than the money paid into court by defendants was recoverable. The verdict must, therefore, be set aside, and entered for the defendants, with costs of the motion

IN EQUITY.

(Before the Chief Judge, Mr. Justice Simpson.)

BEQUEST TO ENGLISH CHARITY.

Judgment was delivered in the matter of the originating summons, instituted by the Perpetual Trustee Company, Ltd., of Sydney, and William Taylor, of Ultimo, trustees of the will of the late Mary Armstrong, of Redfern, for the determination of certain questions arising out of the will of the testatrix.

His Honor held that the testatrix intended to benefit the Royal School of Daughters of Officers of the Army at Bath, which institution had been incorrectly described in the will. Costs of all parties were ordered to come out of the estate.

Mr. R. K. Manning, instructed by Messrs. Pigott and Stinson, appeared for the plaintiffs; Mr. S. A. Thompson, instructed by Messrs. Vindin and Littlejohn, for the defendants, Sir William Taylor and J. A. Mullens, junr., trustees of the Royal School of Daughters of Officers of the Army, Bath, England; Mr. Parker, instructed by Messrs. Pigott and Stinson, for the defendant, Martha Gertrude Morton (representing the next of kin of the deceased); Mr. Clive Teece, instructed by Messrs. Stephen, Jaques, and Stephen, for the defendants, the councillors of the Royal Mineral Water Hospital, Bath, England; and William Marmaduke Bergin, M.B., director and treasurer of the New Orphan Houses, Ashley Down, Bristol, England; and Mr. Bethune, instructed by the Crown Solicitor, for the State Attorney-General.

APPLICATION FOR INJUNCTION.

Mr. A. C. de Lauret Arnold appeared for the defendant.

His Honor was informed that a settlement had been arrived at, the terms of which were filed in Court.

SOUTH SEA ISLAND LEGACY.

Te Tenai v Creswell.

Mr. W. A. Parker, instructed by Mr. F. Biggs, appeared on behalf of Titi Tenai, plaintiff in the suit of Tenai v Creswell, for a decree in default of the appearance to the suit of the defendant, Thomas Edgar Creswell.

There was no appearance on behalf of the defendant.

Plaintiff set out in his statement of claim that Francis James Thomas, trader, of Byron's Island, in the Gilbert Group, in the South Seas, executed his last will in February, 1893, whereby he appointed the defendant and the visiting missionary of the London Missionary Society to the Gilbert Group, trustees and executors, and testator bequeathed all his personal estate, including £300 in the Bank of New South Wales, Sydney, and £510 in the Bank of North Queensland, to his trustees upon trust, to invest and apply the annual income towards the maintenance and education of his grandson (plaintiff). He directed that on his grandson's attaining 21, the trustees should pay him all the personal estate and accumulations thereof in their hands. Testator died on January 6, 1897, and probate of his will was granted to the defendant, leave being reserved to the other executor, the visiting missionary of the London Missionary Society, to come in and prove. It was alleged that since the date of the granting of probate the defendant had acted as sole executor and trustee of the will.

Plaintiff had attained the age of 21, and through his solicitor had applied to the defendant for information with regard to the personal estate of the testator and for payment to him of such part of the estate as he was entitled to under the will of his grandfather. He had also requested the defendant to allow his solicitor to make an inspection of any accounts the defendant might have kept in connection with the estate, but he had refused and neglected to do so. He therefore prayed, among other things, that the defendant be ordered to file accounts of the personal estate which had come into his hands or the hands of any person by his authority, and that he be ordered to pay the costs of the suit.

His Honor made a decree as asked.

(Before Mr. Justice Harvey.)

Mr. Ebsworth, of Messrs. J. R. Baxter Bruce and Ebsworth, appeared for the defendants, the Mount Gordon Copper Company, No Liability, who pleaded that plaintiffs had not carried out the terms of a certain contract or provided them with sufficient working capital. There were no appearances for the defendants, Charles Jackson Taylor and Richard Herrick Corbett.

By consent, his Honor granted a decree in terms as asked.

ESTATE OF GOTTLIEB STURTZ, DECEASED.

Trustees Ask for Directions.

Mr. Davidson, instructed by Mr. R. Laurence, of Ganmain, by his agents, Messrs. Laurence, Son, and Macdonald, appeared on behalf of Wilhelmina Mary Sturtz and John Charles Sturtz, executors and trustees of the will of the late Gottlieb Sturtz, of Mangain, near Ganmain, in an originating summons issued by them for directions with respect to certain matters connected with the estate.

Mr. Hammond and Mr. D. S. Edwards, instructed by Mr. R. Laurence, by Messrs. Laurence, Son, and Macdonald, appeared for the infant defendant, Henry Sturtz; and Mr. S. T. Laurence, of Messrs. Laurence, Son, and Macdonald, for the defendant, Annie Augusta Robertson.

His Honor declared that the trustees had power to carry on the farming business conducted by the deceased during his life until the death of his widow, or until the youngest child attained the age of 21 years; and that they were at liberty to mortgage the farm for the purpose of enabling them to effect improvements to it by way of clearing and purchasing machinery.

COAL AND SHALE MINING AWARD.

His Honor delivered a supplementary judgment in the matter of the appeals on behalf of the Commonwealth Portland Cement Company, Ltd., the Lithgow Valley Colliery Company, Ltd., and the Invincible Colliery Company, Ltd., against the award of the Coal and Shale Mining (West) Group, No. 1 Board.

His Honor said that in the judgment which he delivered about a month ago he omitted to deal with the issue of the machine rate at the Invincible colliery. The award increased the rate for shooting and filling from 1s 5d to 1s 8d. The general grounds on which he based the increase in the hewing rate applied equally to the increase in the machine rate. The authentical computation of the increase on 1s 5d would give a result of a little over a penny, but seeing that the corresponding rates in the South group award were 1s 7½d and 1s 8½d, he thought the calculation should be based on a rate somewhat higher than 1s 5d. He therefore allowed the shooting and filling rate at the Invincible colliery at 1s 7d, and dismissed the appeal in respect of clause 39.

COURT OF CRIMINAL APPEAL.

(Before the Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Sly, and Mr. Justice Gordon.)

APPEAL AGAINST CONVICTION.

REX v COCHRANE.

The prisoner, George Cochrane, otherwise known as Grant Hervey, was convicted at the Central Criminal Court, before Mr. Acting Justice Docker and a jury of 12, on May 20, on an indictment charging him with attempting to obtain money by means of false pretences. He was sentenced to two years hard labour, to commence at the expiration of a two years' sentence he was serving; and he now appealed against his conviction on a number of points. The Court dismissed the application. Mr. C. A. White appeared for the Crown. Prisoner was not represented.

There was a second case in which the prisoner asked for leave to appeal. It was a charge of forging and uttering a telegram, and prisoner was tried before Mr. Justice Pring and a jury of 12 at the Central Criminal Court, Darlinghurst, on June 17. He was convicted and sentenced to two years' imprisonment with hard labour on each count, sentences to be concurrent, and to commence on the expiration of the sentence he was serving. He now asked for leave to appeal, mainly on the ground that there was no evidence against him to support the charge.

The Court said that on the circumstances disclosed at the trial and after a careful direction by the Judge, the jury found prisoner guilty, and they saw no reason for holding that the verdict was wrong. Leave was therefore refused.

REX v M'DONALD.

Mr. George Martin, instructed by Mr. J. W. Abigail, appeared for prisoner, Gordon M'Donald, in support of a motion for leave to appeal against his conviction and sentence. Mr. C. A. White, instructed by the Crown Solicitor, appeared for the Crown. Prisoner was convicted at the Central Criminal Court, before Mr. Justice Pring and a jury of 12, on a charge of false pretences, and was sentenced to nine months' imprisonment, with hard labour. The main ground now submitted by him in support of the present application was that he had fresh evidence to offer, which was not available at the trial.

The case was adjourned in order to allow prisoner to file another affidavit.

REX v MURRAY AND BENNETT.

Mr. C. A. White appeared for the Crown. There was no appearance for the prisoners, Angus Murray and Robert Bennett. Prisoners were tried before Mr. Acting Justice Docker and a jury of 12 at the Central Criminal Court on a charge of conspiring to defraud, and were convicted and sentenced, Murray to two years' hard labour and Bennett 12 months. They now asked for leave to appeal on various grounds.

The case stands part heard.

INCORPORATED LAW INSTITUTE.

The annual meeting of the Incorporated Law Institute of New South Wales was held in the library-room of the institute, Royal-chambers, Castlereagh-street. Mr. H. C. Ellison Rich, the president, was in the chair.

The annual report of the council showed that the strength of the institute had been well maintained, 20 solicitors having joined during the past year. Many members had gone on active service with either the naval or military forces. The subscriptions of all such members will be held in suspense during their absence—except in cases where arrangements were made for the exercise of the privileges of the library by deputy. The institute's nominees on the directorate of the Solicitors' Benevolent Association are Messrs. E. A. Smith, Leonard Gibson, and A. M. Hemsley. The council had considered the matter of the transfer of land and trading with the enemy, and steps were being taken to make it clear to the profession the procedure to be followed in cases in which any party to a transfer or other dealing is or appears to be an alien enemy. The suggestion had been made to the proper authority for the amending of Equity rule 293, which requires that a solicitor obtaining money out of a fund in court for a client must produce a power of attorney, which power requires to be stamped with a £1 stamp. With reference to legal aid to poor suitors, the counsel pointed out to the Attorney-General that it was the practice of solicitors here to undertake work for poor persons, charging only out-of-pocket fees, and in many cases not even those, and that being so the council was of opinion that no necessity existed in this State for the introduction of the system which had been adopted in England. In response to representations, the Attorney-General said he would consider the matter. The costs of notes on evidence when appeals were being prosecuted were considered by the council, and a joint sub-committee, consisting of representatives of the Bar council and the council of the institute will interview the Justices of the High Court with the view of securing an alteration of the rules, and so lessen the expense.

Messrs. A. M. Hemsley, A. N. Little, and D. W. Roxburgh, who retired from the council, were re-elected; and Messrs. A. Consett Stephen and Vero Read were elected as members of the council.

OIL-STORAGE VESSEL.

An oil storage vessel, constructed for the Commonwealth of Australia by Messrs. Poole and Steel, and the first of its kind built in Australia, was launched from the firm's shipbuilding yard, Johnstone's Bay, Balmain, on Wednesday. Mr. J. W. Clark, of the Naval Dockyard, Cockatoo Island, witnessed the ceremony, on behalf of the naval authorities.

The vessel, which is 156ft overall, 30ft in breadth, and 14ft in depth, was built exclusively of steel. Included in the hull are ten oil tanks, separated by air spaces and coffer dams, with a total holding capacity of 550 tons of liquid fuel oil.

FREETRADE AND LAND VALUES LEAGUE.

The following resolutions were carried at the annual meeting of this league:—

"The league protests against any war tax on the lines of existing taxation, which operates to increase the cost of living, to discourage investment and employment, and to lessen the industry of the Commonwealth. A war tax should not take the form of a war on industry, one calamity at a time being enough. It should be imposed on the public or population value of all land, to which all the people contribute. Such a tax would not discriminate against the poor, like Customs taxes, or lessen production. It should operate to bring more land into use, thus encouraging industry.

"This league urges the removal of all food taxes, so as to lessen the cost of living. Insisting upon collecting taxes upon butter, meat, and other necessary foodstuffs, is unduly increasing the hardship suffered by the people, especially the workers, many of whom are unemployed. We protest against taxing the foodstuffs of the unemployed and old-age pensioners, while land monopolists with £5000 worth of land are considered to be too poor to pay their share of a tax on land values.

"While heartily commending the desire of the State Government to assist returned soldiers to get land, we hold that the best method of freeing land for use for returned soldiers or all others who need it is by further taxing land values, without exemptions, thus breaking up land monopoly.

"This league protests against the arbitrary fixing of prices of commodities at less than fair market value, as such action operates to lessen the supply of such commodities, thus intensifying the shortage. A price below the fair market value is of no use when the goods a customer wants are not available, largely through artificial restrictions. We submit that it is the duty of the Government to encourage supply when a shortage threatens, and to check monopoly, but to avoid arbitrary action which interferes with the working of natural laws to readjust the position with the least injury to all concerned."

THE QUESTION OF THE DAY.

The question of to-day, of to-morrow, and of every succeeding day, is

HAVE YOU USED PEARS' SOAP. If you have not, you have not done your duty by your skin and complexion. If, on the other hand—that is, on both hands, and on the face, and on the skin generally—you HAVE used PEARS', you can feel happy, for you will have done the best that possibly can be done for the skin's health and beauty. There can be no question about that.

LIFE'S LESSER AILMENTS

It is to be feared, are exceedingly liable to escape the attention which should be bestowed upon them. While it is perfectly true that they are invariably more troublesome than serious, it is advisable that there should be a limit fixed to the carelessness with which "life's lesser ailments" are too frequently regarded. There is always the possibility that a "lesser ailment" may lead to or indicate something graver—something more serious. Many a breakdown in health might be prevented by proper attention in the early stages of indisposition. A prudent person will recognise at once the wisdom of heeding the warnings which Nature never fails to give when the general health is affected. When the symptoms point to the presence of impurities in the system affecting the organs of digestion and assimilation the safest medicine to take is—Beecham's Pills. Such symptoms include, among others, headache, biliousness, constipation, depression of spirits, languor, want of appetite, unpleasant taste in the mouth, wind, pain after eating, and general loss of tone. All who suffer in this way should not hesitate to take a course of

MOUNT OXIDE MINES, LIMITED.
Registered Office of Company, 121 Pitt-street, Sydney, 30th July, 1915.

TO THE SHAREHOLDERS OF MOUNT OXIDE MINES, LIMITED.

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

With reference to a circular letter, dated 19th instant, sent to the shareholders of Mount Oxide Mines, Limited, by Messrs. Jamieson and Palmer, of Sydney, and to the resolutions embodied in the requisition upon which an extraordinary general meeting has been called for 9th proximo by advertisement in the "Sydney Morning Herald" and "Daily Telegraph" of 27th instant, the following facts are placed before you as material in assisting you to judge whether the attack which has been made upon your directors by the above-mentioned persons, supported by certain of the shareholders, is justified or likely to result to your advantage.

The £20,000 referred to in the circular was, as appears by agreement of 23rd December, 1912, a copy of which is open to your inspection at the above address, a direct loan by a London Company, known as the Properties Selection and Trust, Limited (which by such agreement obtained an option over your Company's property), to J. Earle Hermann, Limited, on the security of 40,000 shares in your Company, owned by J. Earle Hermann, Limited, with an option to such London Company to buy such shares at £1 each.

The £20,000 was paid direct to J. Earle Hermann, Limited, in London, where the 40,000 above mentioned were lodged as security, and the amount so advanced was never under the control of your Company or its Directors.

In October, 1912, Mr. Mercer, representing the Properties Selection and Trust, Limited, came to Sydney, and opened negotiations, which resulted in the option agreement, dated 23rd December, 1912, before mentioned.

When the option period was about to expire, on 31st July, 1913, the Fanti Consolidated Mines, Limited, who had become the holders of the option, intimated that they did not intend to exercise such option, and at the same time demanded from J. Earle Hermann, Limited, the repayment of the £20,000 which had been advanced to them.

Shortly after this further negotiations took place, which at length resulted in the agreement, dated 21st August, 1913, between your Company and the Fanti Consolidated Mines, Limited, by which the whole of your Company's property, with the exception of certain specified cash and ore, was sold to the Fanti Consolidated Mines, Limited, the consideration being 170,000 shares in a proposed new Company, to be formed, as set out in the agreement, which also stipulated that the £20,000 loan to J. Earle Hermann, Limited, should be repaid to the lenders by the proposed new Company. This repayment was duly made, and the security given by J. Earle Hermann, Limited, released.

The circular letter addressed to you by Messrs. Jamieson and Palmer holds out as an inducement to you to support the action they have taken that in addition to your quota of shares in the London Company you will receive a cash dividend out of damages to be recovered from the Directors in case of success. They did not inform you that the Directors, as such defendants, have in their statement of defence, amongst other matters, contended that as the whole of the Company's assets were sold to the Fanti Consolidated Mines, Limited, the sale included the right to recover such damages, if any.

The circular referred to does not present to you the position in case the suit should fail involving the costs of three sets of defendants, as well as those of the Company. The Company has already been ordered by the Court to find security to the extent of £900 for the costs of the Directors, with liberty to apply for further security when they consider the limit of £900 has been exceeded.

Having regard to the magnitude of the suit, the sum named will not carry it far, and as the defendants are assailed not only financially, but in their honour, they are resolved if necessary to persist in their defence as far and as long as their rights of appeal extend.

Your Directors trust that this statement may lead you to seek further information as to the grounds on which the present litigation is based, and also as to the matters of defence set up on oath by your Directors, and so judge for yourselves the nature of the enterprise upon which your capital is being expended.

Should you be unable to attend the meeting, which has been called by advertisement for 12 noon on Monday, 9th August, 1915, at Vickery's Board Room, 82 Pitt-street, Sydney, you are requested to sign and forward your proxy to the undersigned, which will revoke any proxy previously given for this meeting. Your proxy to be effective should be lodged at the above address not later than Friday, 6th August.

A. J. GOULD, Chairman of Directors.

WHITE ANT DESTRUCTION.

Replying to a request for further information concerning his investigations into white ant destruction to supplement that published in these columns some months ago, Mr. Gerald F. Hill, Government Entomologist in the Northern Territory, has forwarded a brief account of some of his work since his earlier report was made available. Mr. Hill is careful to state that the species of white ant they are most concerned with in the Northern Territory is Mastotermes darwiniensis (the largest white ant known in Australia, being over one inch in length), and he does not think the method employed for its destruction could be employed against other white ants, which are of different habits. The method he employs is as follows:—If the tree is known to be infested with Mastotermes, or if it is sickly and termites are suspected, an auger hole is bored into the centre. The appearance of the material brought out by the auger will indicate at once the presence or absence of termites. If it is evident that there are no termites in the trunk, the hole is securely plugged and the end of the plug cut off flush with the trunk. If, however, the presence of termites is detected, the nozzle of the fumigator is inserted in the hole, and the fumes are pumped directly into the trunk. From 5 to 10 minutes' pumping will suffice to force the fumes upwards into the hollowed-out trunk and branches, downwards through the roots, and along the underground passages made by the insects. The hole is then plugged as previously described. In a few months the bark will have completely overgrown the plug.

This plan, says Mr. Hill, has proved quite successful and lasting. Trees so treated over two years ago have not been attacked since; the trees have not only shown no sign of injury, but the great majority have put forth new shoots, and have shown every sign of health and vigour. The chemicals used are white arsenic and pulverised sulphur, in the proportion of seven parts of the former to three of the latter. Wood chips or charcoal may be used to kindle the fire in the firebox. This method has been employed successfully also in the extermination of termites in hollow posts, house blocks, etc. If the soil is fairly stiff, and it is found impossible to bore the stem or trunk—for instance, if the trunk is too pulpy, as in the papaw, or too slender, as in the case of a young citrus tree, a trench is opened out around the tree to intersect the termite tunnels leading to it. These tunnels are then enlarged on the inner side of the trench to permit of the insertion of the fumigator nozzle, any leakage around the nozzle being plugged with moist clay or earth to prevent the escape of fumes. The fumes are then forced into the tunnels and allowed to find their way into the trunk. This method is, of course, much slower, and requires far more care, while it is possible only in fairly stiff soil.

Soil fumigation with bisulphide of carbon has been tried in the Territory with more or less success, and at the present time a series of experiments are being made to test its value for more general use. Kainit, which is recommended by Mr. Froggatt, has not been tried, but other chemicals have been used with very varying results. A much longer series of experiments is required before any recommendations can be made for general adoption. It has been found that termites will frequently leave infested areas of their own volition, after doing more or less damage to return later on. It is obvious, therefore, that hasty judgment should not be formed of the success or failure of experiments for their eradication. It would appear that no one method of control will prove effective against all phases of destruction by termites, and the more one sees of this formidable pest the more one is impressed with the fact that individual cases will have to be dealt with according to circumstances. It is only by repeated experiments and a wider knowledge of the habits of these insects that we can hope to find solutions of the many problems now experienced in dealing with them. In the progress of his experiments in termite destruction Mr. Hill had one or two interesting experiences. In one case a large oil palm was found to be sheathed in a crust composed of triturated vegetable matter and earth, under which many scores of giant white ants were at work. The four stems had been attacked below ground, and numerous passages had been made upwards through the interior tissues and outwards to the bark. The exterior had been furrowed and pitted by termites under cover of the sheathing referred to until the whole exterior for several feet up the stem had been badly damaged. The whole was coated with a mass of earthy material, fouled with gummy exudation, and the remains of countless insects which had been caught and carried down in the flow of gum. Poisoned baits were used in the soil about the roots without avail. The stems were then roughly scraped to remove the enveloping crust and sprayed with arsenate of lead (1oz to one gallon of water). For several weeks the termites did not attempt to rebuild the sheathing, nor could any trace of the insects be found. A few months later a few termites were found at work again, as before, on one of the stems. This was scraped and sprayed again. Eight months have elapsed since the last spraying, but so far there has been no return of the pest. This method has been tried on cocoanut palms and mango trees with satisfactory results.

In another case, a recently-erected fence through country badly infested with Mastotermes and a smaller variety of termite—Coptotermes acinaciformes—which is closely related to the common New South Wales mound-building species, was attacked before the fence was completed. The posts used were mostly pipy woolly-butt, bloodwood, and ironwood, all of which are more or less resistent to termites, though the sapwood and heartwood are not infrequently destroyed. All the hollow posts were filled with earthy material, carried up by the termites, and, had they been left undisturbed, the life of the fence would have been very short. As a simple and inexpensive experiment, a half ounce of white arsenic powder was placed on top of each post, to be washed down during the next rains. This treatment has proved quite satisfactory so far, as up to the present time the termites have not appeared in any part of the posts—seven months after treatment."

ROYAL AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY

At the monthly meeting of the council of the above society last Wednesday there was a large attendance, with Mr. S. Hordern (president) in the chair. The secretary reported that progress was being made with the new road at the Show Ground, and various other matters were being attended to in order to keep the ground in working condition. Several large military contingents had been encamped at the ground, and an officers' school had been carried on for some weeks. It was expected that the Show Ground would continue to be used for large bodies of troops as in the past. Several of the section committees had met during the month, and revised various sections of the schedule for the Royal Show, increases in the prize-money being recommended in accordance with the general decision of the council. Some new classes were added in poultry, and it was decided to add a class for Guernsey bull 6 months and under 12, and Guernsey heifer 6 months and under 12. On the recommendation of the vehicle committee the council decided that no competition would be held in the vehicle section at the next Royal Show. The charge for space would be the same as the entry fee for buggies when competition ruled. An extraordinary vacancy having occurred in the council, there were several candidates, and Mr. Winter Warden, of Milton, was elected.

ROYAL HORSE SHOW.

The Royal Horse Show, which takes place to-day, will afford a very interesting day at the Show Ground to all lovers of horses. All the classes will be judged in the morning, and in the afternoon there will be a grand parade of all the stock, two jumping events and a handicap trot. The entries for the show amount to 350 horses, which result is considered very satisfactory in view of existing conditions. The leading horse salesmen state that a strong demand for useful horses has set in during the past three weeks, and buyers from the Riverina and other country parts have been coming to Sydney to buy horses fit to work. This should be reflected in the sales next week.

THE WOOL TRADE.

CLOSE OF 1914-15 SEASON.

The 1914-15 wool selling season in Sydney was brought to a close on Wednesday last. For the best wools there was a strong demand, but inferior carbonising sorts were almost unsalable. The catalogues on Monday included some super lines of both greasy and scoured wool, but the bulk of the offering was composed of medium and faulty sorts. The best samples met with brisk competition at full rates, with an occasional bid in sellers' favour. Burry wools of good length also attracted attention, but the faulty and short burry lines were not wanted. The highest price paid for greasy was 16½d.

On Tuesday the catalogues were of a nondescript character, although a few nice lines were included. In the scoured section there were many lots above the average. All well-grown wools were very firm, as also were the best of the skirtings, but the faulty sorts were again neglected. Short and faulty lambs wool was almost unsalable. Best scoureds commanded full rates. In the grease the highest price was 17½d, secured for 70 bales of Wongoola/AWW clip, from Woodstock. A catalogue of star lots, which was offered on Wednesday, brought the auctions of the 1914-15 season to a close.

The quantities catalogued and sold were as follow:—

END OF OLD SEASON'S SUPPLIES.

It is a great relief to the trade to come to the end of old wool supplies, so far as auctions are concerned. As the "Wool and Stock Journal" points out, it would, of course, have been more satisfactory had the stores been cleared up, but instead there has been a considerable amount of extremely faulty wool passed in, much of it short and burry, and practically unsalable. It is a difficult problem to know what to do with this wool, as there is, at the moment, absolutely no demand for it, because the carbonising industry on the Continent has ceased to exist for the time being. With the prospect of a big shortage in production ahead, there are reasonable grounds for believing that sooner or later these neglected sorts will be keenly sought after, but it will not be until the war is over. The utter inability of speculators to obtain any indication of when peace will be restored prevents them from coming in and lifting the faulty wools while they are cheap. The hope of sellers is that during the recess, which will extend all through next month and half way through September, a demand may spring up privately for these burry and shabby wools; otherwise their position will be even worse when the new clip comes along. Owners have absolutely no choice at present but to store the wool and await better selling conditions, but no doubt, later on, the wool that buyers will not look at now will be snapped up eagerly, for, if the restoration of peace is followed by the boom in wool manufacturing that most people anticipate, the carbonising wools will all be wanted.

NEW SEASON'S SALES.

The 1915-16 wool selling season will be opened in Sydney on September 13. The new clip will, of course, be much smaller than the one just disposed of, and it is confidently anticipated that all good wool will be in strong demand at high prices. Should the war unfortunately still be raging when the sales are opened, there should be a strong inquiry from the Allies for wool suitable for the manufacture of military cloth, while on the other hand, should peace have been signed, much leeway must be made up in the production of fabrics for the civil populations.

The next Adelaide sale will probably be held towards the end of August. It will be followed by offerings in Brisbane on September 6, when some 47,000 bales are catalogued.

INTERSTATE MARKETS.

After an interval of almost seven weeks, wool auctions were resumed in Melbourne on Wednesday last. The series included some 12,000 bales, and marked the inauguration of the 1915-16 selling season in Victoria. A few good greasies were included, but the selection of these as a whole was by no means an attractive one, being largely composed of short, faulty, and inferior descriptions, but the display of scoureds, on the other hand, was particularly good, and attracted keen support. The bulk of the supplies was drawn from the Darling, Murrumbidgee, and Hay districts of New South Wales, and from the central district of Queensland. Prices ruled about 5 per cent. above the June levels.

THE LONDON SERIES.

The fifth series of London sales came to a somewhat abrupt conclusion on Saturday last. About a week previously the importers' committee notified its intention to suspend the series from July 24 to August 7, and gave as a reason for so doing the congestion at the docks. But that programme was not adhered to, and the series closed definitely on July 24. The cables indicated that the home trade took 152,000 bales, the Continent 15,000 bales, the United States 5000 bales, and 72,000 bales were held over for next series. As compared with May rates, good combing merinoes fully maintained the advance of 7½ to 10 per cent. noted at the opening, these descriptions meeting with strong support on Russian account. Fine crossbreds, thanks to a good French demand, also sold readily at about May parity, but all other descriptions showed a marked decline, varying from 10 to 15 per cent., and, in the case of faulty and shabby sorts, even more. The impression prevails that, until the way is cleared for the re-employment of the combing and carbonising plants of Belgium and Northern France, there is little hope for any improvement in these latter descriptions. The weaker tone of market in general towards the close is brought about by lack of support from the home trade, this in turn being due to financial considerations. Owing to the congestion at the docks and railways, it is often weeks before users can obtain delivery of their purchases, consequently there is serious delay and difficulty in turning wool into money.

For the sixth series of London wool sales, which are to commence on September 7, the list of arrivals closed on the 24th inst. The gross arrivals amounted to 249,000 bales, of which 128,500 bales were forwarded direct to manufacturers, leaving 192,500 bales available for sale, including 72,000 bales of old stocks.

BRADFORD TOPS.

According to latest mail advices, Bradford top makers were all sold well ahead, and orders were being booked for delivery in January and later. Values were without precedent, and topmakers were booked so far ahead that they were indifferent sellers. Some of them had advanced quotations for merinos to an unheard-of rate, in the hope of checking the demand, but they had found buyers even at these limits, providing reasonably early delivery could be promised. A good steady trade was passing in crossbreds, with the finer qualities in most demand. Some of these were scarce, and prices correspondingly high, while prices for lower sorts remained firm.

Our cable this week from Bradford states that business is quiet, but that a good tone prevails in the market. Sixty-fours, super sixties, and common sixties were all 1d higher on the week.

SYDNEY WOOL RECEIPTS.

During the week ended yesterday only 1720 bales of wool were received in Sydney by rail, compared with 4229 bales during the same period last year. On the other hand, the arrivals by boat show an increase over those of the same week of the previous year of 3535 bales. From July 1 to July 30, 1915, the arrivals by rail were 517 bales behind those of 1914, but the receipts by boat increased by 4708 bales.

NORTH COAST RAILWAY.

MORE DELAYS OCCURRING.

NORTON GRIFFITHS WORK IMPEDED.

(BY OUR SPECIAL REPORTER.)

MACKSVILLE.—The next link in the chain of the North Coast railway awaiting completion is that of the fifth section, a distance of about 30 miles. This is to be the last section to be completed by the Public Works Department, as the other sections have been taken over by the Norton Griffiths Company. When this section is opened the railway will reach continuously from Sydney to Kempsey, the capital of the Macleay River. Owing to the delay in the delivery of steel work for the bridges, the work of laying ballast and sleepers has been delayed, and many men have been put off. There are bridges over the Hastings River, Stoney Creek, Wilson River, Cooperabung, Smith's Creek, Piper's Creek, and the Macleay River. The two large bridges over the Hastings and Wilson rivers respectively will be ready for the steel work within two months, as the concrete work is nearing completion. All the formation is ready, with the exception of about four miles towards Kempsey, which, too, is in hand. Five steam navvies are at work, but they will be ready to transfer to another section in two or three months. The line from Wauchope to the Macleay will probably be ready well ahead of the bridge over that river. The temporary work is finished, and the piers are being constructed. Everything is in readiness for sinking the steel cylinders when the air-lock is available.

Much greater progress would be possible on this section if the Walsh Island work could turn out the steel work up to time, but this does not appear possible. If the steel work for several of the bridges were available a train could be utilised for the plate-laying gangs, and the whole construction work facilitated. The Walsh Island works are making practically the whole steel work, excepting rails, required by the Government, but owing to the delays which are occurring in the delivery of steel, it looks as if the fifth section will be delayed like some of the others. If it is desired to bring this section into a revenue-producing one as early as possible, greater expedition must be looked for from the Walsh Island works. The lack of explosives is causing delay also in the work.

The inability of the engineer on the fifth section to utilise more labour has resulted in delays on the next section. This, the sixth section, is included in the Norton Griffiths contract. This section which extends from West Kempsey to the Nambucca River, at Macksville, is about 36 miles long. Five hundred men could be employed on this section if plant were available, but until some of the steam navvies from the fifth section are received, only a score or two of men will be engaged. There was a pretty general impression that this company was to utilise its own plant, and that this would be a factor in speeding up the rate of construction, but evidently the contract provides for utilising Government plant. The company took up the work from the sixth section onward from July 1, but without plant no change in the rate of construction is to be expected. It is apparent that the delays which are occurring should be remedied as work on both sections is being subject to delays which, considering the large sum of money already spent, must be costly to the State.

Mr. Kinloch, the Norton Griffiths engineer, on the sixth section, has been employed in railway construction for many years in Chili and Bolivia. He is favourably impressed with the physique of the men so far engaged, and also with their working capacity. Macksville, which lies on the south bank of the Nambucca, at the terminus of the sixth section, is rapidly growing, large numbers of new buildings, an hotel, stores, banks, and residences having sprung up within the last few years. Land values have been on a high level for five years, and the town promises to develop into an active business centre for the prosperous dairying industry of the Nambucca River district.

P. P. BOARDS.

ALBURY.—At a meeting of the Pastures and Stock Protection Board at Albury, an interesting report, touching the condition of stock and pastures, was given by the inspector. During the past few weeks the pastures have improved to a remarkable extent. Sheep pastures may now be considered fair all over the district; also fair for horses that are not working, but it will be some little time before fair food for cattle can be expected. The water supply is everywhere excellent, many tanks which had been dry, are now full to overflowing. The condition of stock is still in many instances low, but it shows an improvement, and sound sheep on holdings may now be considered safely over the effects of the late severe drought. On the off routes for travelling stock, not much used by sheep returning from the mountains, the feed is fair to good, but on the main routes, owing to the large number of stock returning to Riverina, and to the fact that owing to their condition they were allowed exceptional latitude, in order to save their lives, the grass is eaten off as fast as it grows. The inspector strongly urges the necessity of preserving all these travelling stock routes intact. A trustworthy return of the total losses by drought cannot be compiled until after shearing, as those who have sustained the biggest losses will not muster till then. It is stated, however, that on one holding that had 20,000 sheep at the beginning of the drought, and was not overstocked at that, a muster at the end of last month showed a loss of 21 per cent. of the whole, and 36 per cent. of the breeding ewes. Since the district was first infested, it has never been so free from rabbits. Stock, generally, are in good health, save for the fact that some sheep are showing signs of worms.

DAIRY HERDS.

MELBOURNE, Thursday.

A deputation representing the dairy farming industry of the western districts of Victoria waited on the Minister for Agriculture, Mr. Hutchinson, to urge that Government aid should be afforded to dairy farmers of that section of the State in replenishing the herds depleted by the recent drought. The proposition laid before the Minister was that the Government should come to the aid of farmers with a grant of £100,000, to be secured by mortgage over the stock to be purchased with this sum. The grant, being in the nature of a loan, would extend over a period of five years, and would be repaid by instalments deducted by the butter factories from the monthly returns of the farmers. The Minister promised to bring the matter before the Cabinet.

THE HARVEST.

ADELAIDE, Thursday.

In the House of Assembly yesterday the Commissioner of Crown Lands stated that the Federal Government had entered into an arrangement with Eden, Smith, and Co., and Gibbs, Bright, and Co., to effect on behalf of the Commonwealth Government the chartering of all freights in connection with the coming harvest. Merchants operating in the State had been consulted, and they were falling in with the arrangement and loyally supporting what was being done. With reference to the tonnage from each State, he believed that it would be allotted as far as possible in proportion to the requirements of each State. The tonnage would be ascertained at a later date, when they would be in a better position to tell what quantity of wheat and other freight would be shipped to the motherland and the other markets of the world.

Mr. O'Loughlin said they should have formed a committee of all the wheat merchants.

CLOTHING FACTORY.

TAILORESSES' STRIKE.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Following the threat on Thursday that the women and girls employed in making uniforms for Australian soldiers at the Commonwealth Clothing Factory would cease work if the order of the manager for the machining instead of the hand-sewing of band linings were insisted upon, over 200 employees went on strike this morning. Work at the factory was stopped in consequence of their action. Subsequently members of the Industrial Disputes Committee waited upon the Minister for Defence (Senator Pearce), who insisted that the girls should return to work before he would consider their case. He intimated that he had given the order objected to: but, recognising that some hardship would be inflicted if any of the girls were put off, he promised to instruct the manager to do everything possible to prevent the shortening of the staff. This decision was conveyed to the strikers, and the girls agreed to resume work.

MEAT FAMINE.

POSITION IN TASMANIA.

HOBART, Friday.

Something approaching a meat famine now exists in Tasmania. During the winter months Tasmania usually imports cattle and sheep for the butchering trade, but with greatly depleted stocks the practice has been reversed, and, in addition to live cattle and sheep being sent to Victoria, frozen and canned meats are also being exported to that State. Victorian buyers attend the Tasmanian stock sales and buy large quantities of stock. Meat has now reached almost famine prices. At yesterday's sales, steers realised up to £38/10/, bullocks £31/2/6, heifers £13/5/, wethers 51/, ewes 37/, and lambs 25/6; while pork realised /9½ per lb. These are the highest prices recorded in Tasmania for many years. Compared with three years ago, there are 45,657 fewer cattle, 177,511 fewer sheep, and 14,192 fewer pigs in the State. In previous years Tasmania has imported as many as 80,000 sheep and 1600 head of cattle in a season.

COAL TRADE.

NEWCASTLE, Friday.

Mr. Manuel Gundelach, Consul for Chile and other South American republics, interviewed in regard to the alteration in the coal trade restrictions, said: "You can see the impracticability of obtaining to-day the tonnage at a moderate rate to transport the Australian coal to South America, and, considering that the United States merchants have obtained a grip of the trade, it will be only after a very hard fight that you can dislodge them from their present standing. There has been a heavy importation into Chile of Alabama coal, and the starting of a regular line of steamers to run between the two countries makes it still harder to place Australian coal in Chile."

BUILDERS' LABOURERS.

THREATENED STRIKE.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The time given by the Builders Labourers' Federation for the withdrawal of the order by the Prime Minister, refusing payment for certain holidays, expired this afternoon. The order was not withdrawn, but it is considered extremely improbable that the ultimatum will be enforced. It is stated that since the threat was made the officials of the federation had several private interviews with Federal Ministers whose departments are concerned in the trouble. The question of payment for holidays was not provided for in the award granted the federation, but it is asserted that certain Ministers were able to convince the representatives of the dissatisfied men that improved conditions might be arranged at a later date.

The Builders Labourers' Federation has cited the Government before Mr. Justice Higgins on Monday for certain alleged breaches of the award. The summonses assert that the Government has failed to pay the builders' labourers employed at Point Nepean and Crib Point the country allowance of 1s 6d per day, as provided for under the award.

SHOW ABANDONED.

ADELAIDE, Friday.

At a meeting of the Royal Agricultural Society a letter was received from the military authorities stating that the society's show grounds were required for training troops. Although the communication only reached the president's hands a few minutes before the meeting commenced the members decided to abandon the spring show, which is usually held in September. At the conclusion of business it was agreed to contribute £210 to the soldiers' fund.

A portion of a German 17in shell which fell within a few yards of them at Dunkirk has been sent by 30 Ulstermen of the armoured car service at the front to Sir Edward Carson. The fragment is mounted on an oak base bearing the inscription: "We stood our ground as Ulstermen should."

HONOUR'S PATH.

Yesterday was "Australia Day," and throughout the length and breadth of Australia the people at home were occupied with thoughts of those who are fighting the battle of freedom and civilisation in an alien land. None of us can afford to remain idle in these days. If those who are fighting our battle at the front have their work to do, we, too, have ours; and the noble response made to the Red Cross appeal to our people yesterday was in keeping with the magnificent deeds of our soldiers on Gallipoli. "They gave their lives; we must give our money." Nor is it enough to give our money—we must give our service, each according to his or her ability. We must have a mobilisation of brains as well as muscle. We need the best that our inventors can give us. We need the help of the business men of the community; and that help is at our service, only waiting to be availed of. In a time like the present, we cannot expect the Government to do everything, and it would be foolish of the Government to attempt to do everything. The whole of the forces of the nation need to be organised, and the sooner that is done the better will it be for us. The president of the Chamber of Commerce has boldly declared for conscription, and it may even come to that; but we are of opinion that, whatever may happen in the future, the manhood of our nation needs no such driving force behind it at the present time. The British people, unlike the German, have never had to be driven to the battle front; and the fact that it has been necessary on occasion for German officers to follow German soldiers with revolvers pointed at them, instead of leading them, may be contrasted with the eagerness of British soldiers to seek combat with the enemy, strong in the faith that God will defend the right. We saw it at Mons, and we have seen it at Neuve Chapelle. And have we not seen it also at Anzac Cove, and all along the line on the peninsula of Gallipoli? Officers and men alike are imbued with the same spirit of self-sacrifice and devotion to duty. Let us make sure that the gaps in their ranks are filled up. Nor should we stop at filling up the gaps; it should be our aim to send to the fighting line as many men as we can raise. The greater the force we throw into the scale, the sooner shall we see the end of the war. Yesterday saw a wave of patriotic fervour passing over our land such as has never been seen before, and the scenes as our soldiers passed through the city streets in the morning were unprecedented. From each of our wounded soldiers who took part in the procession came a call for help for their comrades fighting in the Dardanelles, none the less clear because it was unspoken. And to-night, in the Exhibition Building, when the first of the great recruiting meetings in this State is to be held, the appeal will be emphasised—the appeal to the young manhood of this country to go forth and do their duty. We believe that there will be a response in this State as spontaneous and whole-hearted as resulted from the recruiting campaign in Victoria. Many married men have gone to the war, and many more of them would go but for the claims of wife and children; but for the unmarried men who are capable of shouldering a rifle, and are free of ties, only one course lies open. The path of honour is the path of duty.

Mr. John Galsworthy, the well-known dramatist, recently described the British people as "slow to move, but, once moved, hard to shake off—tenacious as the bulldog which, having got its teeth in, does not let go in a hurry." We may be a slow, methodical people, not easily excited, but once aroused we are the most determined people in the world. As Mr. Wade put it at the annual dinner of the Chamber of Commerce on Thursday, once the British nation rose to the occasion it responded in a way that was a lesson to the world for all time. To-day we are aroused as we have never been before, and we are determined to fight the battle through to the end. The nation of shopkeepers has once again become a nation in arms, and we are facing the great task that lies before us in the same spirit, and with the same inflexible will, the same resolution, as have characterised the nation in the past. We dare not underestimate the magnitude of the task. After twelve months of war, we realise that every available man, every ounce of energy, the organisation of all our resources, are required if we are to make sure of victory. It is not enough that we come out of this war victorious; it must be such a victory as will make peace sure and lasting, crushing for all time the tyrannous Prussian militarism that has plunged the world into mourning. The speakers at the Chamber of Commerce dinner were under no delusions as to the dangers of a patched-up peace. Sir Gerald Strickland remarked that he did not look for an early victory, nor did he wish for any victory that was not absolute and conclusive; and that wish is the wish of all. Such a victory can only be accomplished by organising the whole nation and the whole of our resources. If the keeping of 100,000 men in the field—which, as Mr. Winchcombe says, is the least we ought to do—is going to cost Australia forty millions sterling a year, we must meet the bill cheerfully. Australia is worth it all. For this is Australia's war no less than Britain's. When we sent our contingent to the Soudan, when we sent our troops to South Africa, there was no menace to Australia, no threatening invasion of our own land; but to-day the case is far different, and if it had not been for the navy which a wise statesmanship had created in this country we would assuredly have been bombarded by the enemy cruisers which were in these southern waters in the early days of the war. Nor can we doubt that with anything less than the complete and crushing defeat of Germany, the future of Australia would be imperilled. After a few years' breathing space, the monster would attack again. So it is that in this war we are fighting not merely for the sanctity of treaties and the rights of the small nations, of whatever nationality, but for our own freedom and our own existence. The sinking of the Emden by the Sydney, the historic fighting at the Dardanelles, the death of many of our bravest men, the return of our wounded to their native shores, are all reminders of the realities of war and of the reality of our own share in this the greatest conflict in history. It should be the desire of every young Australian to play a worthy part in the great days we are passing through—to share in the glory of battle and the ultimate triumph of our arms.

WARSAW AND THE ISSUE.

Everybody to-day is thinking of Warsaw. When delivering his great speech on Wednesday afternoon Mr. Asquith had evidently in his mind some rumours or fears that Russia or France might become exhausted before Great Britain, and conclude a separate peace with the enemy. His own opinion of such a thought was expressed with the eloquence and dignity of which he is master in a glowing tribute to our Allies, to the superhuman exertions of the French, and the patience, the courage, and the heroic endurance of the Russians. Mr. Asquith did not refer to the source of these rumours, nor had he any need to do so. Nine-tenths of his hearers knew that it is part of the German system of warfare to destroy the confidence of its enemies by exciting the suspicion of one against the other. Quite apart from their origin, however, British subjects have another test of these reports by which they can judge of their true value. If they can for a moment turn from the issues before the British Empire and from the strain on their own energies, they will realise what a German victory would mean to France and Russia, and how all its implications have been grasped by the people of both countries. To Russia it would mean possibly the loss of territory, certainly a moral and material retrogression, and the loss of her recognised claim to the leadership of the Slav race. Russia would probably recover from such a defeat after the lapse of a generation, in which her people would feel the torture of the German spirit domineering over their own. But for France there would be no recovery. France would lose the place which she has held in Europe during the history of modern civilisation. The existence that would be left to her would be less tolerable than extinction. All her actions would be subject to a German veto. Her efforts at regeneration would be crushed at birth, or be carried on under such a cloak as to deceive her conqueror. The free, curious, and eager life which has made France the origin and the testing place of new ideas would be polluted by the entrance of a culture alien and antipathetic to itself, and ruling it only by the right of strength and persistence. We hold, then, that Russia will steadfastly continue the struggle with Germany, even should Warsaw be abandoned; but can France face the heaviest blows of circumstance?

It is only by realising the antipathy between the French and the German characters that we can explain the extraordinary efforts made by France to meet the strain of this war. It is not easy for British subjects to do so because until the war began they had generally failed to understand the German character. Even those of their countrymen who had warned them of the German peril had thought rather of the efficiency and the progress of the enemy than of his innate barbarism. It required the events of the past year to give them the knowledge which Frenchmen have gained by their insight and the experience which they combine with a faculty for wide generalisation. To-day, however, British subjects are able to sympathise with the French point of view to an extent which has not been possible since the time of the Revolution and of the Napoleonic wars. They have seen the whole nation display qualities which through a conventional misreading of history had been denied it by its critics. In the last months, moreover, they have been given a statement of the Latin character by a writer who, though by birth a Frenchman, has combined a knowledge of the English people with a command over their own language equalled by few of his contemporaries. Mr. Belloc as a student of the war has incurred the penalty of prophesying with confidence on a subject on which the statesmen and soldiers of every country have been deceived. But he has two qualifications to speak for the French people in which he has no rival. The first is a knowledge of the history of France and a love for the people which sees the past and the present as one continuous whole, the second a moving and lucid eloquence which is stirred into action whenever the French tradition is attacked. There has never been a eulogy more eloquent, more precise, or more just than is contained in his last book, "A General Sketch of the European War." It is not necessary to press this evidence in order to show the general standard of thought among the French soldiers. It does show, however, how Mr. Belloc regards this war as the last, the greatest, and the most serious of the efforts of the barbarian to destroy the life of his country. On the one hand he sees a series of enemies possessing in common nothing positive but brute strength and the negative quality of inability to understand a great tradition. On the other he sees his country with its indivisible history guarding its own freedom and respecting the freedom and distinctions of others. He sees opposed to him a nation intoxicated with the success of half a century, and, on the other, France, to whom the interval of half a century is a moment in the history of the modern world. France has suffered heavily from divided counsels and from the insignificance of some of her statesmen. But her people have remained unrivalled in their sense of the need of the present, in the precision and delicacy of their work, and of their ideas and of their power of grasping what is essential. It is this insight that they have appreciated the true danger of the German system of peaceful penetration carried on in all the countries of Europe and America before the war. They have learned from it that success in commerce and in science and national efficiency are only to be judged by their influence on character, and are to be feared and hated when they cause the cruelty, the treachery, and the contempt for all humane instincts which have expressed themselves in this war. Its readers can see how the constant attacks of the German armies on the French and British lines appear to a Frenchman educated in the history of his country and endowed with its peculiar patriotism. They appear to him as the hordes of barbarism dashing against the fortress that has guarded the treasures of Europe since the fall of Rome. They take their place in history in line with the invasions that wrecked the declining Roman Empire, and in later years threatened to wreck France. The people, he says, do not regard this invasion as their ancestors regarded the Napoleonic wars, when Goethe could accompany the Prussian armies to celebrate the dawn of a new world, or as they thought of Marlborough's campaign. They thought at first that utter destruction was upon them, on their religion, and on the homes of their fathers, that brute strength was to destroy all that time has preserved. Now they believe that there can be no safety for themselves or their children without a permanent decision. Russia and France are thus united; and the Allied nations will fight Germany to the bitter end.

FOURTH OF AUGUST.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Wednesday next will be the anniversary of Great Britain's declaration of War in the most righteous cause in history, against a nation with not an equal for breach of faith, brutality, atrocity, whose high authorities have commanded the murder of innocent civilians, and whose military commanders have encouraged outrage, rape, and the murder of little children. Little children and babes have been tossed in the air on German bayonets! Let Lord Bryce's report confirm all this. Great Britain's fight, and our fight, and our allies' fight, is to save ourselves from like atrocious barbarism. It is to save our wives and daughters and little children. Do not let us make any mistake. This is what Germany means for us in this land; and for Britain, too, if the Germans should get there. Never was there a more strenuous fight, and never were there more devilish means to secure victory and oppression than those used by the Prussians, led by the House of Hohenzollern, and aided by the German States and the Austrians.

I am sure all are doing their best here. Our young men at the front have proved themselves true sons of Australia, coming from the grand old British stock. Hundreds more are offering themselves, and are willing to go. Our wives, our daughters, and our children are working. As evidence, see the Red Cross and other societies and the Australia Day demonstration. Yet, are we all doing our best? Ah, Sir, there is something yet to be done. It is suggested that during five minutes on a particular day at an hour to be named we should all sing "God Save the King." Is that all?

The 4th of August last year was the most eventful day, so far, in our history. The coming 4th is to be no less serious; indeed it will be more serious, for the great strife is at hand, and it is fitting that all Australia should cry to Almighty God to aid our Empire, our navy, and army. Surely, if it is not in the province of our Government to call the people to prayer, it is the bounden duty of the leaders of the Churches. By a general arrangement there could be half an hour, say, from 12.30 till 1 o'clock, on Wednesday next, when all the churches and places of worship could be open for "invocation service." Business should be suspended for the half-hour, and the call to prayer might be sounded on church bells. Those who could not attend the churches could devote the time to home and private prayer to Almighty God for help and victory.

Let the Archbishop of Sydney, the Archbishop of the Roman Catholic Church, and the acknowledged representatives of other denominations take the lead, and announce it to their own people to-morrow. Let the members of his Majesty's Government in Australia encourage the setting apart the half-hour suggested, and we shall have the Australian people acknowledge one God, who has helped us in ages past, and will continue to do so still if we trust in Him.

This appeal, I am confident, comes not only from the writer of this letter, but also from mothers and sisters whose hearts are full of anxious thought, and whose hearts may be sadder yet for dear ones who are at the front fighting for us. In the midst of the fighting invocation their prayers and tears will be manifest. For their sakes, as well as for that of others, allow me to ask your publication of this letter. Half an hour on Wednesday next is little to ask for the voice of the nation to appeal to our God to deliver us from the violence of our enemies and for victory.

I am, etc., FAC ET SPERA.

SOLDIERS' LETTERS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The return issued by the Postmaster-General (Mr. Spence) to-day shows the extent to which the postal services were availed of in regard to the troops serving abroad. The record amount of mail matter sent by an outgoing mail steamer from New South Wales was as follows:—Letters, 82,823; parcels, [illegible]; and 15,008 other articles.

AUSTRALIA DAY

FOUR HUNDRED THOUSAND EXPECTED.

SPLENDID SUCCESS OF THE DAY.

STIRRING SCENES IN SYDNEY.

CITY A GREAT FAIR.

ABLAZE WITH PATRIOTIC FERVOUR.

There was never anything like it before. "Australia Day" will assuredly never be forgotten. There are days that stand out for all time in our memory—great days associated with great events—and among the greatest of these is "Australia Day." It was stupendous. Over £339,000 has been given in this State alone. When the full returns are received the total will probably reach £400,000.

July 30, 1915, is a landmark in our history—as truly as is April 25, 1915. Back from the shot-torn slopes of Gallipoli, bearing their wounds upon them, have come some of our soldiers who won imperishable glory for themselves and for us; and in many a hospital in Egypt battle-scarred Australians are lying at this moment, with the memory of marvels of life and death burnt deep into their brains. And remembering their imperishable record, we organised "Australia Day"—an offering of gratitude—a pouring out of love from our hearts, and of money from our pockets, money to provide comforts and nursing assistance for those who have fought so valiantly. Never was appeal more confidently made; never was response more generous.

ALL HEARTS BEATING AS ONE.

From end to end of Australia there was but the one thought. All hearts were beating as one. Not a man, not a woman, not a child, but was thinking of our soldiers—thinking and giving, the rich man of his riches and the poor man of his store. And some there were who, far from Australia, were yet of us, and thinking with us. One of these was Mr. Hugh Ward, whose organising work at the beginning of the movement did so much to make it a success. Somewhere between Suva and Honolulu the Makura, which reached Sydney yesterday, received a wireless message. It ran: "My love to Australia. Tell them I hope 'Australia Day' will be a great success." And it was signed "Hugh Ward." That the people here had not forgotten him was strikingly shown by the crowd in front of the Town Hall yesterday, when, after cheers had been given for our soldiers, for our King and country, for the Governor, the Premier, and the Lord Mayor, someone called for "three cheers for Hugh Ward."

That crowd, the sights that one witnessed there, will never be forgotten. The Town Hall was a picture of colour, a mass of flags, stretching from the tower to the steps below; and there was not a part of it that gave some foothold, no matter how precarious, but was occupied by sightseers. So it was everywhere. There were people even on the roof of St. Andrew's Cathedral. In every shop window, on every awning, and on every roof—even to the topmost parts of the tallest buildings—human beings were crowded. Thousands of them were silhouetted against the sky—"Snipers," the street boys called them. And as for the street itself, it was a dense mass of humanity, now swaying this way, and now that.

And all around was colour. Down the street a little way, stretching right across from the Queen Victoria Markets to the other side, was a huge calico sign, with the words painted in red: "To help our wounded. Australia Day demands your support." A monster Union Jack covered almost the entire front of one of the large picture theatres on the other side of the Town Hall. Look where you would, up or down, George-street was a mass of colour—"the colours that never run." The patriotic fervour was ablaze. There was scarce a shop, or building of any description, that had not its flags and bunting. Nor did there seem any incongruity in it all. True, it was "for our wounded," and many a mother's heard must have been aching, but, if it was a day for remembering the fallen ones, it was also a day for rejoicing over the glory of their deeds—at once a lament and a cry of victory.

A NEW SYDNEY.

Strange and unforgettable sights! A city we never knew before! No one knew beforehand of the surprises of the day. Few of us could even have guessed it. We knew, of course, of the army of collectors that was to take possession of the city, and we came out in the morning prepared to surrender all we possess; but we did not know of the thousand devices that had been planned. Even the central organising committee did not know the half. But little committees, in city and suburbs, preparing for this great day, had made preparations of their own. Some had planned this thing, and some that, and when the whole splendour of the day burst upon us we were amazed. One pauses for words to describe it; and the words refuse to come. It was indescribable.

But when you went to catch your train in the morning, and you saw the engine decorated with flags and wattle; when you saw railway trucks coming down the line laden with wattle, when you saw girls walking through the carriages selling sprigs of the golden bloom for a silver coin; when ladies insisted on pinning miniature soldiers' hats and caps in your coat, and pressing you to buy little "allied" golliwogs—when these things followed so closely on the collection boxes that had met you at the street corners of your suburb, at the entrance to the railway station, and again on the platforms—you were almost persuaded that your pockets would be empty by night. When you got into the city you no longer doubted it. Escape was impossible—and, indeed, there was no desire to escape. Such enthusiasm, such whole-souled giving, there has never been.

Australia Day! It was an Australia Day in the fullest sense. If the morning broke somewhat dull, the sun soon came out and stayed out, and the blue Australian sky was over us. There were crowds and bands everywhere. All along the route of the military procession the streets were packed with people. One wondered where they had all come from. Many were unable to see the procession at all; and particularly was this the case near the Town Hall, where the police—"who always get the best places," as one irate and elderly lady put it—had great difficulty at times in keeping the route open.

BOYS OF THE OLD BRIGADE.

It was "Tipperary" that the band was playing when at half-past 12 the procession reached the Town Hall, where the State Governor (Sir Gerald Strickland), the Premier (Mr. W. A. Holman), the Lord Mayor (Alderman R. W. Richards), and some other prominent citizens led the cheering. And as "Tipperary" passed on its way another band came on the scene, playing "Boys of the Old Brigade." It was irresistible. The crowd took up the refrain and sang it. ("The Boys of the Third Brigade" some sang, remembering the 25th of April!) And along behind the band—a great procession of them—came the new young soldiers of Australia in their khaki uniforms—

Ready and strong, marching along,
Like the boys of the Old Brigade.

The procession passed on its way and was gone. The taxi-drivers, their cars decorated with wattle and miniature flags, began to toot again; the scores of lorries and carts that had drawn up in Market-street, in Park-street, and other streets, leading on to George-street, and all of them decorated for the occasion, started off again.

For it was a business day, and the shops were open. It was a business day with "no business doing," as one man put it—no business, that is, except the collecting and the buying and selling in the streets for the Australia Day fund. And this went on without ceasing. There was not only selling of the ordinary kind; every few yards there was an auctioneer. Dolls, flowers, lollies, jams, books, pictures—anything and everything—were going up to auction. There were women auctioneers as well as men; there were boy auctioneers and girl auctioneers. At the corner of Pitt and Market streets there was a boy in a soldier's uniform who was a born auctioneer. A Russian girl in Russian dress stood on a motor car near the Challis House barometer, auctioneering. In front of the Real Estate Agents' rooms in Castlereagh-street, at the top of Moore-street, live lobsters were being sold by auction. At the Soldiers' Club in George-street, where there was always a great crowd, a roaring business was done.

THE HEART OF THE FAIR.

Martin-place and Moore-street presented an extraordinary spectacle. The city had the appearance of a great fair, and here was the very heart of it—a huge bazaar. To the young lady from Russia it must have seemed like Nijni Novgorod, world-famous for its fair. Where at other times are the stands of the flower-sellers in front of the Post Office were yesterday the stand of ladies selling flowers and sweets and all things conceivable for the benefit of our wounded soldiers. And beautifully decorated stalls they were. To pass them by without admiring them was impossible, and admiration on such a day is a costly thing. Under a canvas, midway between the Post Office and Challis House, young men and young women were calling out for coins to fill in the outlines of an Australian flag, marked upon a large flooring. And all day long, and far into the night, coins were thrown in—coins of all kinds—even sovereigns and half-sovereigns. One of the stars of the flag was covered with gold. Notes and cheques were also thrown in. Under another large tent in Moore-street ladies were selling tea and coffee, with sandwiches and cake. The whole scene suggested Orient—this great thoroughfare of our city might have been a street in Cairo or Constantinople.

People were throwing money away yesterday in the most lavish fashion. A well-known ladies' choir located at the top of Moore-street on a lorry, was simply pelted with money. The same thing was happening to some professionals who were giving an impromptu entertainment from a motor car further down. Decorated automobiles, many of them placed at the disposal of the organising committee by the Automobile Club, passed tooting up and down the street, the ladies in the cars singing, reciting, and collecting as they went. "We never found collecting as easy as to-day," remarked one lady who said she had been through many a Hospital Saturday fray. "You don't have to ask at all—they throw it at you. They've quite destroyed all my fine feathers!"

There was no spot in the city or the suburbs where there was not a collector to be found. They stood even in the doorways of the hotels. They invaded shops and offices. They went into the most sacred places.

A MAGNIFICENT RESPONSE.

It was a great day of giving all over the city, all through the State, all over Australia. From the country come reports of the same wonderful enthusiasm as in the metropolis. Already a magnificent total is in hand. Much more has yet to come in. How much more we shall not know for some days. It is enough to know for the present that expectations have been more than realised, that Australia has risen grandly to the occasion. If the splendid result achieved is a tribute to the capacity of the organising committee, it is also a tribute to the great, sympathetic heart of the Australian people.

THE ROYAL EXCHANGE.

Auction sales were the order of the day at the Royal Exchange, and some unusual deals were effected in this popular business meeting-place.

Mr. George Parnham, of the Country Producers' Selling Company, conducted sales on the steps leading to the building, where the bidding was most spirited. Amongst the articles which brought good prices were a wallaby, pictures, and a ham.

A lobster, purchased from a neighbouring fish shop, by the combined subscriptions of a telegraph messenger and a well-known man, was handed to the auctioneer for disposal. Inscribed on its back was the following note:—"Caught at the Dardanelles this morning." It realised 15s. The auctioneer had received over £40 from sales early in the afternoon.

THE PROCESSION.

NAVAL AND MILITARY PAGEANT.

MAIMED HEROES GET OVATION.

There was no room for the pessimist in yesterday's crowds. Warsaw may fall; the Turk may continue his stubborn resistance against the march to Constantinople; one's hopes of a great and brilliant drive by the Allies on the western frontier may be deferred. But the sight of such a pageant as that of yesterday makes one feel proud of his race, and confident of ultimate, complete victory.

That confidence found voice in cheering yesterday. The cheers began in the Domain, before even the procession was properly marshalled, and the joyful appreciation of the populace found vent at every yard of the route. The tens of thousands of people who lined both sides of each of the streets traversed seemed to be possessed of but one thought. These were "our boys." These were the brothers of those who have made such grand history at Gallipoli. To-day, to-morrow, any day now, they might take ship for the scene of the roaring cannon and the flashing bayonet. This was Sydney's opportunity to show those who have been there and come back what we thought of their valour, how we appreciated their services to civilisation, and to show those who had answered the call for reinforcements what a supreme confidence we have in their pluck and ability to carry the old flag of the Empire, and the young flag of the Commonwealth, to triumphant victory.

There have been other naval and military pageants in the streets of Sydney—many of them. Eight or nine months ago the populace turned out to give the men of the First Expeditionary Force a rousing reception and an affectionate farewell. Sydney thought it had done its best on that occasion. But yesterday there was an added something. Indeed, that something had become the thing itself. Then, we had no history behind us. Our men had not known or faced the dire perils of modern warfare. Yesterday, there was a glorious history—a history of splendid achievement—to think of and to cheer for, and so we all cheered until the sound of the marching feet and the beat of the drum had died away. Then, too, there was the element of "lest we forget" in yesterday's procession. Of those battalions of infantrymen and regiments of cavalry which we farewelled in the memorable route march some months ago, many will never come back, and still more will come back to us to be nursed and compensated for their battle scars. So we had to cheer yesterday lest we might weep, because we could not forget what those others had done and suffered, and the possibility of suffering before these boys who are to fill up the gaps.

RETURNED SOLDIERS.

The presence of the returned soldiers from Egypt and the Dardanelles, about which there was some doubt right up till the eleventh hour, was the principal attraction of the procession. Their absence would have been a keen disappointment to many thousands of people. When these heroes arrived they were practically unannounced. They had a big reception, but nothing like what it would have been had Sydney known the day and hour of their home-coming. So yesterday's procession was eagerly availed of as the opportunity to welcome these brave lads home. And it was a welcome worthy of the finest valour and the best traditions of a sturdy race. They came, these heroes of Gallipoli and of Egypt—for those who fell by the wayside during those long months of hard training are heroes nevertheless—in the van of the procession, as they had gone in the van of the fighting. Two of the State Governor's vice-regal carriages followed immediately behind the complimentary escort of mounted police, and [illegible] were followed by several motor cars and military ambulances. Here and there one caught sight of a bandage. It was the signal for still louder cheering. Never were battle scars more honourable or more honoured.

BLUEJACKETS.

A carriage load of veterans was given next place, and these old men, who still have the flash of war in their eyes, beamed their acknowledgments of the great reception given to the procession. Then there came a big detachment of naval reservists. Many of them mere boys, there was still that rhythmic, jaunty swing about their marching which told of the serious manner in which they are preparing to uphold the prestige of the Grand Fleet. Always popular in a marching pageant, these uniforms of the British Jack-tars were given a rousing cheer. Instinctively there came to one's mind the thought that it was from the ranks of these that Captain Glossop got the crew of the Sydney, and all the world now knows how willingly those Australian naval men went into action when the German raider Emden was sighted.

AIRSHIP ON GUARD.

Just as these naval reservists swung into Macquarie-street to the strains of "Sons of the Sea" there came the sound of M. Marduel's aeroplane motor. All eyes were turned skywards at once, and there the gallant Frenchman was seen flying over these troops of ours, as though on guard. It was a fitting accompaniment. There have been so many reports of how the transportation of troops in Europe and in Turkey has been carried out under the watchful eye of aeroplanes, quick to detect the enemy, to locate his trenches or his batteries, and thus ward off a possible ambush. The sight of M. Marduel's aeroplane yesterday set the mind going along these lines at once, and completed the military perspective.

CAVALRY AND ARTILLERY.

A touch of colour was lent to the pageant by the presence of a squadron of A Regiment of the Australian Light Horse. These were the one-time New South Wales Lancers, who had earned the reputation of the crack cavalry of Australia. Yesterday they were allowed to parade in full regimentals, and their chocolate-coloured trimmings set off their smart khaki uniforms, while the red-and-white pennons floated gaily in the breeze from the tops of their lances. There have been reports from the war of the services of similar cavalry. They were used in the early stages of the campaign in Belgium and France, and during much of the fighting in Poland. Australian cavalry has had no opportunity yet. But many of them have got off their horses and gone into the trenches, while they all long for the chance to show how they can ride, and fight as they ride, when they know their cause is just.

A detachment of artillery reinforcements, with several field guns, followed the Lancers. Those whom these men have volunteered to reinforce have had their part in the fighting, and there was no mistaking the demeanour of those who paraded yesterday. They will be ready when their time comes to unlimber their guns.

THE BOYS IN BROWN.

With the exception of a small number of Highlanders and a pipers' band, the balance of the procession was made up of the "boys in brown." The Liverpool camp had been divested of most of the better-trained troops, and Sydney people were given a splendid idea of the stamp of men who are being sent to reinforce the Australian army in the Dardanelles. For the most part, these men three months ago were at the workshop or the desk or on the farm or station. They now wear the King's uniform, and they wear it well and proudly. The trained soldier might perhaps detect some slight irregularities in the slope of their rifles, but they can march, and there was a sturdiness and determination about their marching that impressed the onlooker, and inspired in all a supreme confidence in the fulfilment of the task these Australian lads have to do. These boys in brown have made the name of Australia ring throughout the world, and they have struck terror into the breast of the pagan oppressor. Yesterday Sydney saw and was convinced that, however often the call might come, there are reserves of this same class of soldier to fill up the gaps.

Behind the members of the expeditionary forces came a large number of the rifle reserve. These men had no bayonets fixed to their rifles. They have learned to drill and to shoot, and whilst they may be unable to cross the world to meet the foe, they give an earnest of what might be expected of them should it be necessary to repel an invader from these hitherto peaceful shores.

Then there came a number of detachments of the purely citizen forces. Credit must be given to these boys, for 90 per cent. of them are still under the military age for active service. And although the Australian citizen forces are as yet but five years old there is to be seen a splendid development of the scheme. The boys march in column of fours with the steady tread of the soldier. They carry their arms in a manner almost incredible to those who have not watched the growth of the movement. Their marching earned the highest encomiums, as also did the performances of the several trained bands used in the procession.

A SHOWER OF CASH.

As usual the balconies and lawns of Parliament House were largely availed of by sightseers yesterday. A large number of ladies occupied seats on the balconies and stagings erected for the occasion, and the scene was a most animated one while the procession marched past. Just prior to the arrival of the procession Miss Grace Stafford arrived, accompanied by a number of collectors with their boxes. Miss Stafford, quite unannounced, stood out on the drive in front of the Legislative Assembly Chamber and recited A. G. Stephens's poem, "The Women Left Behind." Miss Stafford imparted some fine emotional work into her effort, and at each recurrence of the refrain, "Cash, cash, cash," there came a shower of coins from the hundreds of guests from the State legislators. The result of her irresistible appeal was that the boxes of the ladies who accompanied her were soon filled with the coins that rained upon the artist.

THE BASE.

GOVERNOR TAKES THE SALUTE.

When the Governor, Sir Gerald Strickland, the Premier, Mr. Holman, and Major-General Finn, A.D.C., arrived at the saluting base in Macquarie-street (opposite Bent-street), the Police Band, under Captain W. G. Bentley, brigade bandmaster, played "God Save the King," whereupon the great crowd cheered lustily. This was at about 11.20 a.m. The procession was then expected within a quarter of an hour, but it was quite half an hour before it came along, and it took about 40 minutes to pass. Those present at the base included Mrs. and Miss Braund and Mrs. Larkin, widows of the deceased legislators who lost their lives in the operations at the Dardanelles. Several wounded soldiers stood by on crutches. The Consuls for France (M. Chayet), Japan (M. Shimizu), and Belgium (M. Watteuw) were present. The military was represented by Colonel Wallack, C.B., State Commandant, and his orderly officer, Captain Daily Watkins, Colonel Lee, Lieut.-Colonel Luscombe, A.A.G., Captain Godsell (who had charge of the military guard of honour), and Lieut. Howell Price (headquarters staff). The Ministry was represented (in addition to the Premier) by Mr. A. Griffith, Minister for Education, Mr. J. D. Fitzgerald, M.L.C., Vice-President of the Executive Council, and Mr. H. C. Hoyle, Assistant Minister for Railways. Others present included Mr. Justice Harvey, Mr. Justice Heydon, Judge Murray, Mr. F. Hagelthorn, Minister for Public Works (Victoria), Mr. J. S. T. M'Gowen, M.L.A., Mr. J. J. Cohen, M.L.A., and Mr. E. B. Harkness (the joint hon. secretaries of the Australia Day movement), Archbishop Wright, the Rev. R. Scott West, Moderator of the Presbyterian Assembly, Mr. L. Deer (publicity officer), Mr. Hugh D. McIntosh, Mr. H. Y. Bradden, Mr. J. Mitchell (Inspector-General of Police), Mr. J. Davis (Director-General of Public Works), Mr. F. A. Coghlan (Auditor-General), Mr. G. Playoust, Mr. and Mrs. Neville Mayman, Mrs. Arthur Griffith (and son in uniform), Mr. J. Stinton, Mrs. W. A. Holman, Mrs. Dwyer (P.L.L.), Mr. W. O'Neill and Mr. D. Guihen (president and vice-president of the Labour Council of New South Wales), Dr. C. W. McCarthy, Captain W. H. Head (president of the United Imperial Navy and Army veterans), and Sergeant-major S. Withers (secretary), who had with them about 30 veterans in uniform as an extension of the military guard of honour.

All bands in the procession ceased playing opposite Parliament House, and marched past the base to the music of the Police Band and the band of the A.I. Expeditionary Forces of the Liverpool depot, which were stationed in Bent-street.

It was an inspiring sight to see every arm, every boot, every head move as if controlled by some precise mechanism. The unison of motion became almost a monotony, but it was a splendid tribute to the drill instructors who have had to bring this proficiency out of the raw material of a few weeks or so ago. The men heeded well the call of their officers. "Eyes right," and the Governor took the salute continuously while those around him frequently broke into cheering. The wounded soldiers, who travelled in several motor cars behind the mounted police at the head of the pageant, were cheered again and again, and they responded by putting coins in the ladies' boxes. The fair collectors scored well at this base. They were frequently showered with half-crowns from the balcony and windows of the Australian Club.

THREE CHEERS.

"THE KING AND AUSTRALIA DAY."

"No men on earth can cheer like Englishmen, who do so rally one another's blood and spirit when they cheer in earnest, that the stir is like the rush of their whole history, with all its standards waving at once, from Saxon Alfred downward." What was written by Charles Dickens in the days of Queen Victoria serves admirably as a description of the thrilling scene outside the Town Hall yesterday, when a crowd of 20,000 men and women showed that the cheering habit is one of the characteristics of Australian loyalty. In honour of Australia Day the whole façade of the civic building was bright with flags. Lines of bunting were stretched from the main entrance to the top of the bell tower. British and Australian ensigns draped over the front of the portico completed a gorgeous scheme of colour, which palpitated in the sunshine. An immense assemblage had watched the march-past of the military procession, and hundreds more poured into the wide street as the music of the bands became fainter and fainter. All traffic was suspended as the agitated mass of humanity awaited the arrival of his Excellency the State Governor, who was timed to start the cheers for his Majesty the King at half-past 12.

Delayed at the saluting base, Sir Gerald Strickland arrived about a quarter to 1, preceded by a guard of honour formed of mounted police. His Excellency was accompanied by Lady Strickland, Miss Strickland, Captain Pascoe, A.D.C., and Major-General Finn, A.D.C. Without any loss of time the State Governor and the State Premier went with the Lord Mayor (Alderman Richards), the Deputy Town Clerk (Mr. Layton), and the Minister for Railways (Mr. H. C. Hoyle), to the portico overlooking George-street.

Hat in hand, and "leading the way," his Excellency said: "I call upon you to give three cheers for his Majesty the King!" The honest and hearty roar which followed must have been heard at the Circular Quay and at the Railway Station. Making the most of the opportunity, the enthusiastic crowd, in a swell of sonorous sound, extended the number of the cheers much beyond three.

Then Mr. Holman stepped forward, and scored a double-encore in the easiest fashion. The State Premier's call was "Three Cheers for Australia Day and our Wounded Soldiers!"

One seemed to hear the voice of a nation magnificently thundering its tribute of admiration and gratitude to "our heroes of the Dardanelles." That crowd in George-street was shouting, with affection and recollection, its loving "God Be With You All!" to the Australian soldiers at Gallipoli.

GOVERNOR PLEASED.

The State Governor, Sir Gerald Strickland, last night expressed himself as highly pleased with the public enthusiasm shown for the objects of Australia Day, and with the admirable arrangements and management of the march-past. He regarded this feature as excellent, and he was gratified at the stirring welcome accorded those taking part in it.

ISLAND WAR CANOE.

An endeavour is being made to secure for the Sydney Museum the magnificent Solomon Island war canoe which has been presented by Mr. H. Wickham, of Hobupeka, Roviana Lagoon, New Georgia, to the Australia Day Fund. Mr. W. T. Crick, trustee of the canoe, on behalf of the Australia Day Fund, has agreed that if a sum of £1000 can be raised by special subscription for the fund by the end of August he will hand the canoe over to the trustees of the Museum. It is stated that there is a movement on foot to purchase the canoe and send it out of the country. Subscriptions can be sent to Mr. R. Etheridge, Australian Museum, or to the central committee, Australia Day Fund.

"MAGNIFICENT."

PREMIER'S APPRECIATION.

GOOD NEWS FOR SOLDIERS.

With the Australia Day register showing £324,000 up to 10 o'clock last night, and the street collection barometer standing at £28,470 2s 6d, the Premier offered a few words of congratulation to the assembled workers in the movement.

Mr. Holman, who was greeted with cheers, said: "Ladies and gentlemen, at the close of this extraordinarily successful day I wish, on behalf of the committee, to offer our warmest congratulations and our most grateful acknowledgements to the great army of workers who have to-day been toiling in every corner of the State of New South Wales, and many hundreds of whom I see congregated around me on this occasion. There is no need to point out to you the magnitude of the success which has been achieved. (Cheers.) The figures upon the board indicate that so very much more eloquently than any words of mine could.

"It is a success," added the Premier, "beyond all precedent in the history of our State, and I can only say, in the name of the committee, that we are deeply indebted to every one who has contributed to the achievement of this great success to-day. A great and noble army of workers throughout the city and country, headed by a secretary of unrivalled experience in Mr. J. Cohen, M.L.A., has brought our operations to this magnificent and successful achievement. (Cheers.) I am delighted to be present to-night to be able to share in a humble degree in this great triumph. I will now conclude with asking you, ladies and gentlemen, to sleep well after a laborious effort, and the achievement of a great success in the interests of the gallant forces who are fighting for us." (Cheers.)

The Premier concluded by calling for three cheers for "our soldiers at the front"—which were given with great heartiness.

Late last night the Premier despatched cablegrams to the Australians at Mena and Gallipoli, informing them of the great success that had attended the Australia Day movement.

MARTIN-PLACE.

A RIOT OF PATRIOTISM.

Martin-place was a memorable scene. Carnival was in the air. The people laughed as they showered coins into the skilfully constructed flag beneath the clock tower; they laughed and cheered the auctioneer to fresh efforts in selling ridiculously small articles for ludicrously high prices; and when the band struck up a popular air they sang, and sang heartily.

"I have never seen such an enthusiastic crowd in the streets before," said Mr. Alfred Edwards, the Superintendent of Traffic, as he forced his car slowly through the throng. "There has not to my knowledge been a single case of disorder, despite the fact that hundreds of pounds at this busy hour are changing hands every minute."

In King-street it was just the same—the constant rattle of the collecting boxes, the pretty girls, the flower-bedecked stalls. In Victoria-square children "tangoed" on a raised platform, and the terpsichorean exhibition kept hundreds entertained while the collectors got busy.

There was no official adjustment of the "barometer" in Martin-place throughout the afternoon. The grand total stood at £140,000, and the expectant crowd was disappointed. They had a little diversion, however, as several times during the late afternoon M. Marduel, the accomplished Sydney aviator, circled gracefully overhead.

But amid all this gaiety there was a pathetic note. Slowly, walking laboriously on his crutches, with the assistance of a couple of friends, a wounded soldier passed through the stalls. His was the honour of the day. His right leg was heavily bandaged, his left foot encased in a hospital slipper, but his eyes were bright with the excitement of his homecoming, and on his lips the happy smile of free-born youth, which even Turkish shell and months of pain had failed to kill.

STREET BAROMETER.

DEPOSITING THE SPOILS.

"You can't move for them," said the affable passenger to the tram conductor, as the rattle of money-boxes sounded on every side in the city thoroughfare.

"The spiders are everywhere," he added, and then, lest his words might be misunderstood, he explained, "They are good spiders, too."

The "good spiders" had, metaphorically speaking, laid their delicate, gauzy web most effectively, as the scene during the day at the Town Hall proved, the main hall of the building being the "good spiders' parlour." About 300 banking officials were at work here methodically counting up the spoil as it came in. The work had been considered too heavy to impose on any one banking institution, so the big hall, capable of seating several thousand people, was transformed into a charitable counting-house.

The collecting started at daybreak, and at 11 a.m. the bank barometer registered £1914 15s 3d. The scene at the bank was picturesque and ever changing. Here the different collectors came proudly with their boxes, and one obtained some sort of idea of the number of them at work. The name of the costumes of the collectors was legion, and from time to time the dumb animals employed by their masters to take a hand in the collecting found their way into the bank. One stumbled across a little lamb at the door swathed in patriotic ribbons, and further along the centre of things a merino sheep similarly bedecked was met with.

Two little fellows clad in khaki as Red Cross men, and carrying a little stretcher, brought in their street collections from time to time, and made a pretty picture.

The banking arrangements were under the control of the City Treasurer, Mr. Solomon, who was assisted by Mr. Beck, accountant of the Bank of New South Wales, and Mr. Armitage, accountant of the Commonwealth Bank. The cashiers, who took the coin in bulk after it had been put into neat rolls and placed in wooden cases by the staff working with the tellers, occupied offices at the northern and southern wings; Mr. V. E. Neilly, of the Commonwealth Bank, and Mr. W. H. McKern, of the Bank of New South Wales, presiding over the work in this department. After the cashiers tallied the money, it was placed into the strong room of the Town Hall.

The majority of the staff at work counting the money was supplied from the various banks, the balance coming from the Australian Mutual Provident Society, under Mr. Holdsworth.

The barometer at the Town Hall recorded both city and suburban receipts. These headquarters were in communication with all the branch banks, and received periodic advices of the amounts banked there. This enabled a reflex of the takings in the whole of the metropolitan area to be registered.

ELEPHANT'S TAKINGS.

During the afternoon the first takings from the baby elephant, African Daisy, owned by Mr. Ellis S. Joseph, were received, and they filled several barrels and a bucket, quite a little army of tellers being required to count the cash. Mr. Joseph informed a "Herald" reporter as he waited at the bank counter that he was a wild animal hunter and dealer, and had himself captured the little elephant in Southern Rhodesia last October. It was now 4 or 5 years old, and he had trained it for a fortnight for the work it had been put to during the day. The girl who rode on the elephant was Olive Buckleton, daughter of a Sydney sportsman. The first takings included copper, silver, and gold coins, as well as bank notes, and came to £63 13s 7d.

The takings at 4 o'clock were £10,002 5s 8d.

STREET BAROMETER.

1 p.m.	£4,546	11	1
4 p.m.	10,002	5	8
6 p.m.	13,678	11	10
8 p.m.	19,296	13	11
1 a.m. (incomplete)	33,750	1	3

The coins comprising the Union Jack in Martin-place amounted in value to over £450.

WITH THE COLLECTORS.

"For Our Boys!" It was more of a command, really, than an appeal, and one felt that behind the sweet smile was the set determination to let none escape without first contributing. At every street corner the mere male was brought to the halt and relieved of his surplus cash. The rattle of the collection box was insistent, and "No mercy" was the motto for the day. Ingenious statements concerning the large amount already given were greeted with a look of smiling unbelief, and another rattle of the box.

It was the day of giving. "Give willingly; for they deserve it; those brave Australian lads, who so unflinchingly faced death in its most awful form"—was the unspoken appeal that opened the hearts and loosened the purse-strings of thousands of people. And, realising that it was the day for generous giving, most people gave generously.

There was an abundance of artistic souvenirs to be had from charming vendors. Art union tickets for all manner of articles were sold at the various section stalls, while a thriving trade was also done in loyal badges at varying prices.

And the ladies smiled through it all. Very tired they must have been long before the day was over, but never too languid to hold up the likely-looking passer-by, and to demand his contribution.

The methods adopted by the managers of the various sections were often most original. In Oxford-street, for instance, a baby elephant had been pressed into the service. It was most gorgeously decorated, and suspended from its back on either side was a cask for the cash offerings. The "mahout" in charge was a diminutive maiden, dressed to represent Africa, and she and Jumbo, junior, did remarkably well. At one corner a stuffed kangaroo, with pouch invitingly open, was the centre of attraction, and a khaki-clad dog, in a begging attitude, succeeded in obtaining a good many donations throughout the day.

But the most spontaneous display of generous giving occurred when the wounded soldiers passed along Pitt-street with the procession. As they came past each vantage point a shower of coins assailed them from all quarters, until the floor of their motor car was covered with silver and copper. The enthusiasm of the throwers lent power to their aim, and the manner in which the soldiers had to duck must have recalled that day in April, when they were under shrapnel fire.

By 11 o'clock the collection boxes had begun to roll into the Town Hall depot, and all day long a constant stream of gold, silver, and copper poured in. The people gave freely, and our boys will not be forgotten.

THE DEPOTS.

RED CROSS WOMEN DO BUSINESS.

The depot for the sale of foodstuffs and other goods at 70 Pitt-street was exceptionally well patronised, and Mrs. J. O. Fairfax, and the Misses Eadith Walker, Fairfax, and Marion Street, with their numerous assistants, were kept busy. The goods which they and their friends had given were in splendid condition, and found ready buyers. The ladies seemed to be quite at home in their new surroundings, and did not lose any business by reason of scant praise of their wares.

There was a great rush to the depot for light refreshments, and a good deal of business was also done in flowers and pot plants. It was regretted by the ladies that the depot was not opened for more than one day, for the few things left over had to be sacrificed. These were offered at auction.

A large quantity of produce was delayed in transit, including some poultry from the northern districts.

Up to 5 p.m. over £150 worth of goods had been disposed of.

The Darling Point workers, headed by Mrs. Macphail and Miss Carter, were in charge of the depot at the A.B.C. Cafe, and the sales for the day reached £516.

SALE OF FRUIT.

The appeal made for fruit by the produce department of the Red Cross Society was most generously responded to. About 200 additional cases of choice fruit came forward at headquarters, where the stock now in hand is 1600 cases. Mr. L. A. Saunders, the secretary, stated that this fruit would be sold at market rates, and that orders would be gladly accepted for delivery in the city and suburbs upon the promise of payment on delivery. No charge would be made for delivery whether prepaid or not. If this appeal should not have the effect of clearing out some of the present big stock, the society would have to take into consideration the question of having an auction sale.

The districts represented by this extraordinary generosity are Windsor (which heads the list with 334 cases), Richmond (next with 240 cases), Mangrove Mountains, Castle Hill, Riverstone, Gosford, Epping, Hawkesbury, and Ryde.

Twenty-four girls came in from the country, and in parties offered their services for selling the fruit. These offers were gladly accepted, the result being that much business was done at different stalls in George-street and at other places. An auction was attempted at the Soldiers' Club, but the continued movement of the people militated against its success. Miss Higman, who was in charge there, managed, however, to do a fair amount of business in the produce of the Richmond district. Mrs. L. A. Saunders sold Castle Hill fruit at the tramway shed, Parramatta River Wharf, Circular Quay, and booked many orders. Miss Lane sold produce and other articles at the Mosman Wharf. Windsor fruit was sold by ladies at Railway-square, under the direction of Miss M'Mahon. Produce and a miscellaneous collection of goods were sold at Paling's, George-street, under the direction of Mrs. Goldsmith, and a similar stall was worked at Custom House-square, under the direction of Mrs. Davidson.

At the produce department in George-street, Miss Ryan and assistants got rid of 200 cases. Oranges brought up to 16s a case. High prices were obtained also for most of the large supply of Tasmanian (Hobart) apples.

AUCTION SALES.

At the conclusion of the forage and grain sales at the Sydney goods shed enthusiastic scenes were witnessed when a truck of chaff presented by Messrs. Stockman and Kleinig, produce agents, of Homebush, was offered at auction.

The various auctioneers and agents who do business at the sheds offered the chaff bag for bag, and a great deal of patriotism was shown over the purchasing. Bidding was brisk, and very high prices were offered.

The consignment realised approximately £306.

Various functions were arranged by the Australia Day committee of Sussex-street to bring in money to the coffers. Auctions for articles varying from small badges and favours to a truck of choice hay chaff were held, and success attended the auctioneers' efforts in all cases. The chaff, which was offered at the Redfern yards, realised £306, all the usual buyers and merchants in the trade participating in the bidding. In all it is estimated that over £1000 will be handed into the central committee as a result of the day's efforts.

The real estate auctioneers of the city and suburbs sold a large collection of gifts in Castlereagh-street. Mr. Henry Gorman opened the sale, and his place in the rostrum was taken by the other auctioneers in rotation. The first item disposed of was a coop of 20 dozen live lobsters, a gift from the fishermen of Laurieton. They realised £10 10s. Mr. Hugh McIntosh bought two second-hand motor cars for £50. A Belgian flag, the gift of Mr. J. T. Lingen, was purchased for £25. A drawing by Mr. Harry Weston, the gift of Messrs. John Bridge and Co., brought £15 15s. A Ghurka kukri, presented by Professor Wilson, was disposed of for 21s; a Bible (1607) from Mr. Hardwick, Mudgee, realised £5 5s, and a book containing Queen Victoria's autograph, given by Mr. F. Keen, of Longueville, was sold for £5 5s. A horn snuff-box, dug up in a battlefield in Scotland 135 years ago, the gift of Mrs. S. C. Soltan, brought £3 2s. A collection of autograph letters, including those of Queen Victoria and King Edward VII., realised £4 4s, while two pistols used in the Crimean war brought £1 1s each.

In addition to the sale at the real estate rooms, the auctioneers sold goods in the street. Mr. C. H. Crammond, at the corner of Moore and Pitt streets, did well. Messrs. Richardson and Wrench gave up their auction rooms for use as tea rooms. Messrs. Hardie and Gorman had quite an interesting stall in their auction rooms, where boomerangs sold well. Messrs. Raine and Horne's new auction rooms were taken possession of by ladies who disposed of vegetables, fruit, and other produce. Sales were also held at the rooms of Messrs. Stanton and Son. Messrs. Arthur Rickard and many other firms assisted in the work of increasing the funds.

Auction sales were conducted outside the Soldiers' Club and at many of the depots, extraordinary prices being realised. One of these sales at depot "X" enabled Mrs. Percy Hart, the lady in charge, to report having realised £89. A little doll brought £16 10s, and some cushions brought fancy prices. A doll attached to this depot was raffled for £20, which amount was additional to the £89, the result of the auction.

An attractive collector at the top of Hunter-street was a young lady dressed in khaki (male attire) with a blood-stained bandage over her forehead. Outside the Equitable-building goods of all kinds were sold at auction, including loaves of bread. Opposite the General Post Office the employees of David Jones, Ltd., conducted an auction. Auction sales were also held at other places, the public in all cases responding cheerfully. The ladies at the depots worked untiringly.

Near Aarons' Exchange Hotel yesterday a loaf of bread, a box of chocolates, and a pair of sox, the ordinary value of which would be less than 10s, were separately sold and resold a number of times, realising in the aggregate over £74. Outside the building Mr. Dawson put up the loaf of bread, and it eventually realised £42 2s; while inside the hotel Mr. Ted Ebsworth auctioned a 5s box of chocolates, the total sales amounting to £20 18s. Mr. Seabright (of Messrs. Hain and Seabright) disposed of a pair of sox for a total of £11 11s, and also sold several articles on behalf of the fund for £10 11s.

AT THE SOLDIERS' CLUB.

The members of the Soldiers' Club, George-street, turned up in strength to view their comrades passing in the big procession. Not only were the balconies crowded with men of the present naval and military forces, but several of the sick and wounded back from the front found vantage spots there. One man, more venturesome than his fellows, got out on the verandah over the footpath, and nearly ended his earthly career. He did not know that the verandah was of glass, and went through with one leg up to his thigh, luckily without the glass cutting him.

At 11.30 a diversion was caused by a couple of mounted figures in shining armour appearing. One as King Richard delivered the stirring speech of the warrior king to his troops before Agincourt, and was heartily cheered by the soldiers for his effort.

When the procession came into sight nearly every man in it turned to glance at the cheering crowds in khaki and blue on the club verandahs, and as the long line of infantry moved along, one of the wounded on the balcony called for three cheers for the infantry, which were readily responded to, and another cheer was given for "Our Pals in Gallipoli." The crowd was very dense along this portion of George-street, and as no arrangements had apparently been made to control it, it closed in on either side of the marching men until, as one of the soldiers on the club balcony expressed it, owing to their being crushed out of column of fours, "they look like a long drawn-out crab going sideways."

At the entrance to the club collectors were busy, and no soldier or sailor refused the call to pay, pay, pay. Even a wounded soldier was bailed up. He produced a coin, but remarked, "I thought you were collecting for me, not from me." The fair collector apologised, but added, "put it in all the same. You know you'll get it back with interest," and in it went.

OTHER STATES.

GOOD RESPONSE IN VICTORIA.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

From early dawn till evening the familiar rattle of coins in tin boxes was the undertone of the city's business. At every street corner, in every doorway, in every shop or tram or railway station the generous populace bought golliwogs, flags, painted gum leaves, patriotic buttons, flowers, sweets, little boomerangs, and other things; but nobody grudged 1s for an article that was only worth 1d, for it was Australia Day.

The weather was fine and the streets were crowded. It was in the afternoon that the real interest began, when the procession organised by the Victorian Artists' Society went through the city. It took the form of a historic review of Australia. The idea was very thoroughly carried out. In the mining section walked Mr. J. Hodges, "Eureka Jim," who is said to have actually hauled up the Eureka flag (now in the Ballarat Museum). One of the finest exhibits was an old coach of Cobb and Co., with its escort of mounted troopers, and its passengers in crinolines on the box seat, and after this coach and escort passed some grim actual relics of the past. These were the armour, made from the mould boards of ploughs, which the Kelly gang wore to protect themselves from the bullets of the troopers. The armour of Ned Kelly was worn by Mr. Russell. It was lent for the occasion by Mr. Russell Clarke. That of Dan Kelly was lent by the Chief Secretary, and that of Steve Hart by the Exhibition trustees.

The actors and actresses who did not take part in the matinee in Her Majesty's Theatre made up concert parties, and performed throughout the city. The matinee realised about £2000. Several of the city shops had displays appropriate to the day. In the kiosks during the afternoon many leaders of the Women of Victoria sold flowers. Lady Stanley was at the corner of Exhibition-street and Bourke-street. His Excellency the Governor visited the kiosks during the afternoon, and watched the procession from the Melbourne Club.

Melbourne's contribution was £7434.

The suburban collections so far announced amount to £5670, and country to £5643, bringing the total to £154,095.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

ADELAIDE, Friday.

Fine weather prevailed for Australia Day, which proved a brilliant success. People were early astir, and the main streets were thronged with enthusiastic crowds, who eagerly patronised the stalls ranged along the principal thoroughfares. The main buildings were gaily decorated. The procession was the longest and most impressive ever seen in Adelaide. Over £3000 was collected in the streets.

WESTERN AUSTRALIA.

PERTH, Friday.

To-day the culminating point was reached in connection with the Australia Day appeal to the people of this State. For weeks auction sales and collections have proceeded with the utmost enthusiasm, and the money already handed over to the controllers of the fund totals several thousand pounds.

TASMANIA.

HOBART, Friday.

The Australia Day collections in the city of Hobart will amount to over £5000. The figures from other centres are not yet available.

MELBA'S CONCERT.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Governor-General and Lady Helen Munro Ferguson and the Governor and Lady Stanley were present at the concert given by Madame Melba at the Town Hall last night, in aid of the funds for the Australian sick and wounded. At the end of the concert, the Governor-General said they could not let Madame Melba leave Australia without expressing their gratitude for what she had done for the men of this country, who were fighting under the colours of the Allies in their war for freedom. A sum of £3000 had been realised by the concert, making a total of £30,000 raised by Madame Melba in Australia. He called for three cheers for Madame Melba, and these were enthusiastically given.

STATE BAROMETER.

At 6 o'clock last night the barometer showed a total of £169,896. At 10 o'clock the street collection barometer showed £28,600, while advices from the country indicated that £135,000 was actually in hand.

It will be seen, therefore, that, apart altogether from suburban collections, the proceeds of raffles as well as the Australia Day contributions from country centres outside the immediate reach of telegraphic communication, the total is £333,000. There is, therefore, no doubt that at least a sum of £400,000 will be assured to the Australian wounded soldiers.

SECRETARIES GRATIFIED.

When spoken to at the conclusion of the counting, Mr. J. J. Cohen, M.L.A., and Mr. E. B. Harkness, joint honorary secretaries, said that they were delighted beyond measure at the splendid results achieved. They were sure that before Tuesday next £400,000 would have been received. They considered that they had succeeded in the most gigantic effort yet recorded. The executive and the organising committee had worked together assiduously and harmoniously. They emphasised the fact that the cost of carrying out the collection was practically nil. They were pleased to know that the men at the front would be advised of the splendid results achieved, and that they could rest assured that nothing would now be wanting in nursing back to normal health those who are wounded in the fighting.

BANDS IN THE STREETS.

The bands turned out in force, and it was a case of "music, music everywhere." Many bands generously gave their services, and relays of musicians provided popular programmes at well-known centres.

The National Rifle Reserve Band had the place of honour during the morning at the Town Hall, and again took a turn in discoursing sweet strains during the afternoon, being relieved by St. Vincent Orphanage's Band after lunch. In Martin-place the Eastern Suburbs' United Band rendered a programme between 10 and 12, their place being taken at 2.30 by the Police Band, while the Public School Band played in Macquarie-place. At the Royal Exchange, St. Vincent's Orphanage Band was the chief attraction at 11 o'clock, prior to the procession arriving. An orchestra was stationed in Queen's-square from 10 till 11.30 to while away the time until the troops swung into sight, and during the afternoon the band of the 35th Infantry rendered popular and patriotic selections. The Customs-house, with its big, open square in front, was not forgotten, as St. Vincent's Orphanage Band played several pieces there prior to moving to the Royal Exchange, and in the afternoon the Eastern Suburbs' United Band took its place. Nearly 30 bands gave their services, and helped to brighten the proceedings from first thing in the morning until late in the evening.

ON THE HARBOUR.

The ferry boats carried a lady collector or two on each trip, and passengers were entertained with the rattle of boxes from the time their boats left the wharf until they reached the Quay. On the Manly boats, where the run occupies over half an hour, the collectors were able to deal with travellers more effectively than on the shorter trips, and, after the boxes had received toll from the passengers, impromptu auction sales were frequently organised on board to swell the fund.

At midday an uproar was created on the harbour when small craft and large steamers commenced to cock-a-doodle-doo with their sirens, the shrill notes of the smaller vessels mingling with the deep-toned roar of the ocean liners.

THE LYCEUM CLUB.

No. 40 Hunter-street, the building adjoining O'Connell-street, was occupied by ladies belonging to the Sydney Lyceum Club, which is a branch of the London Lyceum Club. They did the best they could with the limited space at disposal in the way of catering for the public and turning over the profits to the Red Cross Fund. The movement was organised by Miss Theo Cowan, who worked also a stall at the corner of Bligh and Hunter streets, in which she and her assistants did well selling sketches by artists, flowers, button-holes, and euthymol goods (presented by Messrs. Parke, Davis, and Co.). The tearoom was in charge of Mrs. Robert Cocks, who had many willing assistants. During the afternoon there was presented a musical programme, which had been organised by Miss Nitschman. The contributors included Mrs. H. B. Allard, Miss Dora Hill, and Mr. G. Taylor, the last-mentioned doing some lightning sketches. Madame R. Soley was engaged with more willing helpers on the ground floor selling all kinds of beautiful things. The day's effort put up by these ladies should indeed result in a good addition to the Red Cross funds.

FIGHT FOR WARSAW.

Russian Preparations

FOR RETREAT TO NEW POSITIONS.

AN UNOFFICIAL REPORT.

The Petrograd press is preparing the public for a new withdrawal of the Russian forces, which is necessitated by the enemy's overwhelming superiority in guns and munitions.

The newspapers state that the resumption of the Russian offensive is impossible until the Russians are in possession of adequate supplies of munitions.

The "Times" Warsaw correspondent does not think there will be any fighting in the vicinity of Warsaw. There will probably be only a rearguard action between Warsaw and the new line.

The "Daily Mail" correspondent at Petrograd says that everything useful to the enemy has been taken away, and all arrangements have been made for a rapid transfer to the new positions.

RETREAT LIKELY.

THE RUSSIAN FORCES.

SHORT OF MUNITIONS.

PETROGRAD, July 30.

The newspapers are preparing the public for a new withdrawal, which is necessitated by the enemy's overwhelming superiority in guns and munitions. The newspapers state that a resumption of the Russian offensive is impossible till the mobilisation of industry supplies the army with munitions.

The "Times" correspondent at Warsaw does not believe there will be any fighting in the vicinity of Warsaw. There will probably be only a rearguard action between Warsaw and the new line.

The "Daily Mail" Petrograd correspondent says that the retirement from Warsaw will be voluntary and orderly, and not owing to pressure by the enemy. Everything useful to the enemy has been taken away. Only troops in the centre will have a considerable distance to march. These are ready to move, and everything is prepared for a rapid transfer to the new positions.

A communique states: The enemy at Rozani unsuccessfully attempted to advance between the Narew and the Brok. The enemy's outposts on the left bank of the Vistula were repulsed in the direction of Gora Zalwarja and Grodzisk (about 15 miles south of Warsaw). The enemy's continuous attacks at Maydan and north of Grubieszow (about 55 miles south-east of Lublin) were repulsed. They lost enormously. Austrian attacks above Sokal (Northern Galicia) were repulsed. Six Austrian regiments crossed the Bug at Kamionka and captured some of our trenches, but were driven back on Wednesday across the river in disorder. We took 1500 prisoners at Sokal and Kamionka.

Reuter's Petrograd correspondent says that at the beginning of the war Russian military opinion was divided whether Warsaw or the Vistula should be defended. In the upshot, the Russians have gained a year before taking up the front they contemplated in 1910, and now await a Franco-British diversion.

When the Duma meets on Sunday the Government will acquaint the country with the military situation.

SPEECH BY KAISER.

A German prisoner says that when the Kaiser visited the eastern front he addressed the troops, saying that if he had 1000 sons he would send them all to their death for the honour of Germany. "The Kaiser spoke a great deal," the German prisoner added, "and at last we tired of listening to him. An hour later, when we were sent to attack, the Kaiser scolded the officers for being too lenient. He said the leaders who were too soft with their subordinates were useless in war time. 'In a just cause,' the Kaiser added, 'I am ready to force myself to be cruel.'"

ENEMY REPORTS.

An Austrian communique states: We surprised a strongly fortified position on the frontier between Bukowina and Bessarabia. The enemy fled after bloody hand-to-hand fighting, leaving 170 dead. We captured 500 east of Kamionka. The enemy's attacks near Sokal were repulsed, otherwise the situation is unchanged.

A Berlin communique states that the situation north of the Niemen is unchanged. "We have taken 20,100 prisoners, north-east of Suwalki. After occupying part of the enemy's position the Russians last night delivered repeated attacks on our front, south of the Narew and Nasielsk. All failed with heavy enemy losses. The Russians on the nights of the 27th and 28th attempted to advance westerly, in the district south-west of Gorakalwarja, where an attack was repulsed. Yesterday the situation in the south-east was unchanged."

GALLIPOLI.

LARGE SUPPLIES OBTAINED.

LONDON, July 30.

Mitylene reports state that the Turks have evidently obtained large supplies of heavy ammunition, thus enabling them to keep up a sustained artillery fire.

Anglo-French aeroplanes again attacked Smyrna, and destroyed the gasworks and petrol depot.

The Exchange Telegraph Company's correspondent at the Dardanelles reports:—This is an invisible war. Sitting on the highest observation point, one can see nothing of the war, although one knows countless men and guns are under our very eyes, yet in the battle for Achi Baba a long khaki line leaps out of holes and charges a black gap a few yards ahead. They disappear, having simply gone from one hole to another, but it means a captured trench. The guns lengthen their range. The second trench is rushed in the same way, yet not a Turk is visible. There is no such luxury as resting here after a sojourn in the trenches under rifle fire. The men come to the rear under shell fire from guns of all calibre from Achi Baba and the Asiatic coast.

The Turkish guns always pot at the British ships entering and leaving the harbour. The Allies are achieving wonders by patience, endurance, and organisation. The naval co-operation continues, smashing villages and wrecking guns, but it is now essentially a land campaign. The operations may seem to progress slowly, but the visit reveals what an immense organisation has accomplished while fighting for a firmer footing. The precipitous cliffs and landing stage, which made the name of the Australians famous for ever, failed to arouse wonderment after seeing this great network of organisation. Defects in organisation would be fatal in this trench warfare. It is a question whether snow and frost bite in Flanders are not minor ills compared with the enervating heat and sunstroke. Men are almost knocked out before fighting begins. Turkish prisoners are dejected. This is a hopeful sign. If the Allies can now press their advantage final success is assured.

A TREMENDOUS PROPOSITION.

Reuter's correspondent with the Mediterranean Expedition quotes a battalion commander, who, while crouching in a dug-out watching the shells bursting, said, "For goodness sake tell the people at home what a tremendous proposition we are up against."

Reuter's correspondent continues: By dogged determination and homeric courage, the Allies are no longer holding on by the skin of their teeth, but are at the supreme task. Ahead the fire-ravished soil is furrowed, as though a titanic ploughing competition had been held. Every acre the fragments of shell aggregate iron enough to build a battleship, and lie a trackless waste. Barbed-wire, of enormous gauge, trails across the scorched yellow stubble at every dozen steps.

Twelve miles up the coast the Australians and New Zealanders are holding a wonderful cliff, perched enclave, which compels the Turks to maintain at least two divisions to counter a permanent thrust in their communications. The Turks are being abundantly fed—a great factor in sustaining their war worthiness. Prisoners admit weariness, but the Turks are still convinced that England conspired to betray them to Russia, and still regard the annexation of the battleships which were being built in Britain as an act of piracy, while the German is regarded as a benefactor for giving them the Goeben and Breslau, and sending submarines to attack the Allies' warships.

Between the days of big things, we are now getting little affairs of considerable strategic significance. From a little work commanding a gully, the enemy had maintained an irritating fire since the 14th upon a sector of our new position, and he had to be stopped. The French seventy-fives poured a heavy fire. Then, in the blazing sunshine, with the dust whirling in the gale, the men charged, and brilliantly captured the position, with heavy enemy losses. Three hundred yards of trenches, forming an enceinte in our new line, were found so packed with Turkish dead as to be untenable. This is the section taken and lost several times during the last big effort. The enemy's artillery was very active during the assault.

THE EUPHRATES.

LONDON, July 29.

As a result of the action at Nasiriyeh, on the Euphrates on the 24th, the Turks retreated twenty-five miles. Their casualties were 2500, including 41 officers, and 600 prisoners were taken. Our casualties were 564, including 137 killed or missing.

DEALING WITH SPIES.

GERMAN AGENTS ARRESTED.

LONDON, July 29.

The Press Bureau says that in addition to five already convicted for espionage, the authorities recently arrested ten alleged German agents of various nationalities, four of whom have fully confessed. All will be tried in camera for attempting, to collect information to communicate to the enemy regarding the fleet and army.

The efficacy of the measures taken by the authorities is proved by the fact that all were arrested within three weeks of their reaching the country.

ITALIAN FRONT.

FIERCE FIGHTING.

AUSTRIANS DRIVEN BACK.

ROME, July 30.

A communique reports marked progress in the Cordevole Valley. The enemy advanced in force in Padola Valley, but were repulsed. Our artillery wrecked another cupola on Fort Hensel. The enemy deployed great forces on the Carso Plateau (Isonzo region), supported by violent artillery fire, and attempted to advance, but were driven back suffering grave losses. Prisoners state that the defeated troops had just arrived on the scene. One regiment of Alpinists was almost annihilated. Our advance continues slowly. We took 1485 prisoners on the Carso Plateau on Tuesday and Wednesday.

A semi-official message states: While a column of wounded were leaving the battlefields at Isonzo to reach the motor ambulances, an Austrian aeroplane descended to 300 metres, where the bandages were clearly visible. The Austrians opened a vigorous machine-gun fire upon the wounded and continued to fire on them for some time, fortunately doing little damage.

During the second phase of the supreme Austrian counter offensive against the bridge-head at Sacrado on the 22nd, the enemy's columns suddenly found themselves under a terrific crossfire of the Italian field batteries. The men could be plainly seen being mowed down in dozens. For one tremendous hour the Austrians were unable to go either forwards or backwards, and stood living motionless targets for the Italian gunners. The blood-curdling scene only ended when 1000 survivors signalled their surrender.

Three Italian aeroplanes on the 23rd bombed Innsbruck (Austria-Hungary). Eight bombs were dropped, but they did not cause serious damage. The aeroplanes returned safely to Italy.

An Austrian communique says:—The Italians made unsuccessful attacks on the edge of the plateau near Sdraussina and Vermegliano. The enemy evacuated his position before the bridgehead at Gorizia, and retreated from the positions occupied prior to the battle. We annihilated an Italian company in the region of Tofana.

WESTERN FRONT.

MINING OPERATIONS.

PARIS, July 30.

A communique states: Some grenade and petard fighting took place last night in the Souchez sector. Bombs and air torpedoes were used at Bagatelle and other places in the Argonne, where we mined and blew up several posts.

We picked up 200 German dead at Lingekopf, and 400 at Barrenkopf.

At Bandesapt (in the Vosges) we occupied another blockhouse in the south-west portions of Lunois. The Germans delivered a violent attack at Barrenkopf, but were repulsed. We maintained our gains. Our fire caught and destroyed a German battery.

The Press Bureau says: Sir John French reports that active mining operations have been in progress on both sides the last few days, with intermittent artillery engagements, but no infantry attacks. The enemy exploded three mines in the neighbourhood of Saint Eloi and one near Givenchy. Only one did slight damage. We exploded a mine on the 28th, north of Gourteleen, which destroyed twenty yards of the enemy's parapet. One of our aeroplanes on the twenty-fifth shot down a German machine, which fell on our lines east of Zillebeke.

Allied airmen raided Zeebrugge and Knocke on Thursday, and considerably damaged a mole and bridge on the maritime canal at Zeebrugge.

A Paris message says the Germans have imposed a fine of £200,000 on the city of Brussels, on account of the destruction of a Zeppelin at Evere on June 6.

AIRMAN KILLED.

Aviator Benoist was descending at Issy-le-Moulineaux when his aeroplane fell 1000 feet. The machine caught fire and the aviator and his mechanic were enveloped in flames. Benoist jumped from the machine and was picked up alive. He died later in the hospital. His mechanic was incinerated.

SUBMARINE WAR.

LONDON, July 30.

Submarines, during the past week, sank three British merchantmen, totalling 5649 tons, and 16 fishing boats.

A Copenhagen message states that an inquiry into the sinking of the steamer Nogill shows that the submarine, after examination, allowed the vessel to proceed. Later seven large German torpedoers stopped the Nogill. After two hours' conference the officers decided to blow her up because her cargo was relative contraband.

REGISTERED IN AMERICA.

WASHINGTON, July 28.

The United States Government has agreed to register eleven foreign-built steamers which were bought for Richard Wagner's American Trans-Atlantic Company, and which were reported to have been purchased for British, Scandinavian, and Mediterranean ports by Jansen, of Copenhagen. Hugo Stinnes of Mulheim is said to be providing the money.

The Department of Commerce is satisfied that the steamers represent German capital, but as Wagner's Company 's registered in Delaware, the steamers are entitled to registry.

The Bureau has notified Wagner that if the vessels attempt to trade with Europe they will probably find their way to the Prize Court.

Wagner declares that if German money is used to purchase the steamers it will be repaid. Some of the steamers will be engaged in the South American trade.

METALS.

LONDON, July 30.

The "Morning Post" comments that Merton and Company, the Government's metal brokers, are largely associated with the Metallgesellschaft, of Frankfort, whose American companies are cornering spelter. The journal compliments Australia's efforts to destroy German monopoly.

KING COAL.

NATION'S LIFE BLOOD.

LLOYD GEORGE'S SPEECH.

LONDON, July 29.

Three thousand miners attended the National Conference of the mining industry in the King's Way Opera House to-day. All the leading miners' men were present, and every coalfield in the United Kingdom was represented.

Mr. Simon, who presided, said the miners had sent 250,000 of their comrades to the firing line. The industry, owing to recruiting, was 3,000,000 tons short monthly. With goodwill and a greater effort, it should be possible to recover some of the shortage, though he hoped the regulations securing the safety of mines would not be modified. The Eight-Hours Act might be suspended during the war, but the Government could not play tricks with the Act without consulting them.

The Minister for Munitions, Mr. Lloyd George, was greeted with a roar of applause. He said that coal was the life-blood of the nation. He was not sure that the industry realised its importance at the present time.

"King Coal is the paramount lord of industry," said Mr. Lloyd George. "It is our real international coinage. Shells mean coal; rifles, and cannon mean coal. The 250,000 British casualties were really inflicted by the Westphalian miner working in co-operation with the Prussian engineer, without stint, and without regulations, putting all their strength at the disposal of the Fatherland."

Mr. Lloyd George went on to ask whether the British miners were doing their share similarly. He admitted the country could not expect men to work overtime, to suspend trades-union regulations, and put forth their full strength if all were going well, and there was no danger; but, he asked, can anyone, reading the war news intelligently, doubt that the situation is serious—if not perilous? "There are two new parties now," he said—"pessimists and optimists—the blue-sky school and the grey-sky; but I think the sky is mottled. We ought to remember that the sun is shining behind the storm clouds; but we should prepare for a thunderstorm. Don't read the headlines in the newspapers, but read the news. The man who does not then understand the peril threatening his country would not believe if one rose from the dead. There are hundreds of thousands of dead lying in the east and west who could tell them of that peril if they rose. Events in the east portend that a larger share of the burden than ever will be cast on Britain's shoulders. It would be useless to pay nine-tenths of the price of victory. We cannot bridge twelve feet of the stream with an eleven foot plank.

A WORD TO SHIRKERS.

"There is only one question. All classes and all trades must ask themselves, Are we doing enough to secure victory, which means the fate of freedom for all ages? There is too much disposition to cling to the amenities of peace, such as fashions, lockouts, strikes, ca canny methods of slowing up the output, sprees—all our wages must go up, profits must be improved, and prices must be kept down. It was also said that no man must be called to serve the State unless he wishes; or should only do the work he liked—not what fitted him. This freedom implies the right to shirk. Freedom implies the right for you to expect to enjoy, and for others to defend the country? Is that fair? Assuredly, victory is not along that road.

"There is a story of the Australian and New Zealand battalions that has not appeared. I will defy the Press Bureau, and tell it. The New Zealanders and Australians were facing a Turkish attack the other day. What was the effect? No man would go on the sick list. Not all the doctors in the regiments could persuade them. They would not complain. There was no pulse-feeling, I can tell you. (Cheers.) There was no shirking—not until the attack was over, and they had finished the Turks would the men go to the hospital. That is the spirit which alone will enable us to win through. Nothing short of this will achieve victory. The peril is a great and immediate one; but if the democracy of Britain rises to the occasion they will again triumph over all the forces of despotism. The time has come when every man and woman must help their country.

"Our soldiers are awaiting anxiously to hear the rattle of loaded caissons coming from England. They have left us to fill the waggons. When that is done, there will be written in letters of flame the story of how the flag of freedom drooped for a moment under the onslaughts of a ruthless foe; but the men and women of Britain came to the rescue, and planted it firmly where no tyranny shall ever tear it down."

Mr. Lloyd George was visibly moved at his reception. The house was packed from stalls to gallery, with rows of coal-owners and miners. The delegates occupied the platform. The speech was full of picturesque phrases, and had the quality of intimacy arising from the fact that he was among men who knew him well. The threat to defy the Press Bureau was greeted with general laughter, and the Australian story following aroused loud applause. His closing passage was electrical in its effect. The meeting again rose to its feet and cheered itself hoarse when Mr. Lloyd George and Mr. Henderson left to attend a Cabinet meeting.

Mr. Smillie then proposed, and Mr. A. F. Please, president of the Miners' Association, seconded, a resolution emphasising the urgency for owners and workmen to secure the greatest possible output of coal during the war.

The conference passed the resolution with enthusiasm.

REPAYING THE DEBT.

MUNITION WORKERS' STAND.

PARIS, July 29.

General Maudhuy wrote to Cruesot's munitions workers as follows:—"I hear you are working day and night to send us guns and shells. Bravo! Thanks! By so doing you will save the lives of many of your brothers, and we shall win a crushing victory all the sooner."

The workers replied: "We are aware of the debt we owe to our gallant brothers-in-arms. They can count on us as we on them, and depend on us to do our utmost."

MERCHANT SHIPPING.

LONDON, July 30.

The steamer Port Kembla, which left Sydney on June 3, has arrived at London.

LATE WAR NEWS.

SUBMARINE PIRACY.

TRAWLER SUNK.

LONDON, July 30.

A German submarine sunk the trawler Young Percy. The crew were saved.

Many meetings have been arranged in provincial towns for August 4, at which resolutions will be submitted to carry the war to a successful finish.

SOUTH AFRICAN REBEL.

PRETORIA, July 30.

The rebel, General Muller, has been sentenced to two years' imprisonment for treason.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LONDON, July 30.

The official Press Bureau states that now that the Ministry for Munitions has been fully established, Colonel Sir E. F. Girouard has resumed the directorate of Armstrong, Whitworth, and Co., Ltd.

Thirty coppersmiths at the Fairfield shipyard are being prosecuted before the Munitions of War tribunal for striking over a dispute with the plumbers. This will be the first prosecution under the Munitions of War Act in Scotland.

SIR R. L. BORDEN.

FREEDOM OF THE CITY.

Sir R. L. Borden, Prime Minister of Canada, received the freedom of the city at the Guildhall. Mr. Asquith, Mr. Bonar Law, Sir George Reid, Mr. Thomas Mackenzie, the Agents-General, and several members of the Cabinet were present.

In returning thanks Sir R. L. Borden said he hoped the outcome of the war would be the erection of a monument to autonomy and the self-governing Dominions, and to the courage and power of the Empire, which would be more thoroughly and effectively organised for the purpose of preserving our own existence.

Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, and Canada were all great free nations, possessing full self-governing rights, and had joined in the conflict for the love of liberty, ideals of democracy, and the spirit of unity founded thereon, which made the whole Empire single in purpose. There was also an intense conviction that the war had been forced upon the Empire, for in honour it could not stand aside and see weak, inoffending people trampled in the dust. We also realised that the issue of the conflict transcends even the destinies of our own Empire, but involves the future of civilisation and the destinies of the world. Therefore, we must not fail.

Sir R. L. Borden's mention of Australia, New Zealand, and South Africa was greeted with cheers.

ANTHONY WILDING.

HIS LAST LETTER.

LONDON, July 30.

Officers state that Anthony Wilding was in charge of a three-pounder, and directed the firing from early in the morning till the middle of the afternoon, when he entered a dugout. He was killed an hour later.

The official report spoke highly of his work. In his last letter, written on the day he was killed, Wilding said, "For the first time in seven and a half months I have a job likely to end in my gun, myself, and my whole outfit being blown to hell. However, it is a sporting chance, and if we succeed it will help our infantry no end."

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

LONDON, July 30.

Sixty Bills have received the Royal Assent since Parliament adjourned.

Mr. Asquith announces that following the example of France, the Government has arranged for cinematograph records to be taken of suitable scenes, at the British front communications.

A man named Pim has been sentenced to three months' imprisonment for refusing to leave Ireland. Denis MacCullough, on a similar charge, received four months' imprisonment. The defence alleged that Pim's political opponents had inspired the civil authorities to induce the military to take action.

French and Italian newspapers warmly applaud Mr. Asquith's speech.

Mr. Gerard (United States Ambassador) states that several priests have been sent specially to Limburg at the instance of the Pope.

Thirteen British wounded soldiers at Hampstead Heath took shelter during a thunderstorm under a tree, which was struck by lightning. All were severely dazed and burned, and were retaken to hospital.

LISBON, July 30.

A secret wireless plant, believed to be German, has been discovered at a Lisbon residence. Five arrests were made. The prisoners confessed that they erected three other stations in the capital.

BANK HOLIDAY.

Monday next, August 2, will be observed as the usual August bank holiday.

MR. BALFOUR, ENGINEER.

Canon Bickersteth, vicar of Leeds, recalls the following incident in a letter to the "Times" on the appointment of Mr. Balfour to the Admiralty:—On a Sunday some thirteen years ago my neighbour of those days, the late John Penn, then M.P. for Lewisham, the head of the well-known engineering firm, said to me:—

"Yesterday I was going to play golf with Arthur Balfour, and went to pick him up in Downing-street on the way to the railway station. He threw down the book he was reading, and excused himself for going to sign some letters before starting, and I had the curiosity to pick up the book. To my surprise, it was on my own subject, marine engineering, and I said to myself, 'Well, I flatter myself that this is a subject on which at least I know more than my political chief.' But as we travelled from London to the south coast, I was almost led to change my mind, as I was put through such a searching catechism of inquiries as to first principles and their application that I had to recollect all I knew about engineering. I felt there was little I had learnt which that man did not know, and he would be in his right place at the head of the Admiralty."

WAR NOTES.

THE WARSAW POSITION.

Judging by the unofficial news from Petrograd, the Russians have decided not to maintain their resistance until the enemy wins his way to the very gates of Warsaw, and it is foreshadowed that no great interval will now elapse before the troops will be withdrawn from the city. The whole position resolves itself into a question of munitions. With the line he held on the Narew and Vistula, and across to the Upper Bug, the Grand Duke's strategic position, as a position, appeared to be quite strong enough to enable him to cope with the Austro-German onset. But the best position in the world is no better than the worst if you cannot keep the men defending it supplied with the necessary guns and ammunition. All speculations as to the fate of Warsaw hinged on that one big "if"—if the Russians had munitions enough. And now it appears that they had not. Fight strenuously as they might—and the whole world will acclaim their fighting of the past ten days as heroic—they could not prevent the enemy from gaining yard by yard upon them; he carried too many guns. If we are to believe the despatches to hand from the Petrograd correspondents, the Grand Duke has decided to withdraw his troops from the Warsaw angle before that angle becomes so acute as to make the withdrawal too hazardous. He is apparently going to reproduce almost exactly the story of Przemysl and Lemberg, wherein the Germans sought to envelop a large part of his army, but he withdrew his whole force intact before the enveloping movement could be carried to a decisive point. It is exactly a week and a day since we were apprised of the fact that steps had been taken to prepare the Russian people for the news of the fall of Warsaw, and we remarked at the time that, whereas there was not at that moment any suggestion of the city falling immediately, it could be taken for granted that the military authorities, if they regarded the ultimate evacuation as inevitable, would, in the meantime, see to it that the great bulk of the military supplies in the city were transferred elsewhere. This morning's cables assure us that everything that would have been useful to the enemy has been taken away.

PREPARATIONS FOR EVACUATION.

Indeed, the preparations for the evacuation would appear to have gone so far that the Grand Duke has now so adjusted his forces that there will be no difficulty in withdrawing his wings, and only the troops in the centre will have any considerable distance to march. This indicates that the withdrawal of men has already to some extent actually begun, and that a careful railway programme has been worked out. The troops of the centre are said to be ready to come out, and they, together with portion of the flanks, will fight a rearguard action back to the new position. The Petrograd correspondents suggest that the Grand Duke will avoid much fighting in the actual vicinity of Warsaw. This is doubtless with the idea of saving the city as much as possible from the havoc of the enemy's shells. As to how far eastward of Warsaw lies the new line which the Grand Duke proposes to take up, it is impossible to say, though there is everything to suggest that it will be well back towards Brest Litovsk, and will have as its lateral line of communication the railway coming down from Grodno through Bielostok, Kleshisheli, and Brest Litovsk to Cholm or Kovel. We have already explained how, when once Warsaw was evacuated, the Russian line in Central Poland, if it remained anywhere in the vicinity of that city, would for the time being be a great, useless salient, which it would be purposeless to defend. The evacuation of Warsaw will necessarily shift the centre of gravity of the whole eastern campaign, and for that reason the further east the line is withdrawn in Poland, the better for the Russians, and the worse for the Germans—if they decide to follow the Grand Duke in that direction.

WHAT THE EVACUATION MEANS.

Apart from the failure of their attempt to envelop a big Russian force in the neighbourhood of Warsaw, the evacuation of that city at this stage should mean one very serious disappointment to the Germans. It is obvious that they counted upon driving home a lightning stroke from the north and the south simultaneously, in the hope that they would force the Russians to a decisive battle. The fall of Warsaw was to be part of the smashing of the Russian army of the centre, and there is every reason to believe that they counted upon the blow being such as to persuade the Czar to think of a separate peace. If the Russians had any idea of this being their final great battle in the war they would have defended Warsaw till the very last; but the fact that they are going to withdraw while yet their lines of communication are still quite safe demonstrates very clearly, even to the Germans, that they have not the slightest intention of negotiating for peace. The Germans will have gained Warsaw—the military importance of which cannot, of course, be denied, nor can its political importance be over-estimated—but, as was the case after Przemysl, and again after Lemberg, they will still have the whole Russian army to deal with. Had they not counted upon Russia giving up the struggle they must have reckoned upon a badly broken Russian army after the great battle of Warsaw. Even this calculation will be upset, and to just that extent they will be compelled to keep a larger force than they anticipated in the east when they commence to transfer their troops for an offensive in the west. As to our Eastern Allies, however, it is more than ever clear now that all prospect of a formidable offensive on their part must be dismissed from our minds for some time to come. They will have to secure an adequate supply of munitions before they can hope to undertake any big move. This does not mean, of course, that fighting will die down in the eastern theatre. The coming months will certainly see some severe struggles both in the north and in the south there; and a very considerable Austro-German force will be kept pinned to that front. But much water will have passed beneath the bridges before the next serious Russian invasion of enemy territory figures in the cable news.

THE "ALPINI."

There are few despatches concerning the northern and western Italian operations against Austria in which the "Alpini" do not figure. These troops entered the war with an already high reputation, but they have undoubtedly added great lustre to it. They are recruited from the mountaineers, who are familiar with all the dangers and difficulties of the Alps. Lithe in body and hardy in constitution, they represent formidable fighting units, and so far seem to have done the best work in the Italian advance into the Tyrol. Their efforts are most conspicuously felt in the roughest portions of the fighting line, and there is less call for their distinctive services in those places where tactical considerations compel the Italians to make use of masses of infantry supported by heavy artillery. They fight sometimes for whole days at a time in small groups, crouching in the crevices of the rocks which command a valley, or hidden in the Alpine forest, or half-covered with the snows of the heights, safe as if they were behind the battlements of a fortress. Their effectiveness is due also to the fact that they are all magnificent marksmen. Their eyes are accustomed to hunting the chamois and the white hare, whose swift course demands unerring shooting. These men seldom spend a shot unless they are certain of hitting the mark. In this lies the explanation of the fact that they are capable of holding out for a very long time against an enemy distinctly superior in numbers, by means of their own rifles, when they have once esconced themselves in their own chosen positions in the clefts of the rocks. A correspondent in Italy recently stated that, although it was kept from the official despatches, he had it on the best of authority—since confirmed from Switzerland—that at several places the "Alpini" had carried out intrepid raids, hurling themselves into the enemy territory 20 or 30 kilometres from the battle front. Patrols of a few dozen men had advanced over mountains, destroying bridges and railway lines, and in other ways effectively hampering the operations of the enemy. Then, in a region like that of the Tyrol, the mountainous character of which precludes aerial reconnaissance, motor traction, and the use of cavalry, the "Alpini" prove wonderful scouts. Moving with the agility of the chamois about the almost inaccessible mountain-tops, they have time and again robbed the Austrians of the most important secrets of their military positions.

WAR LESSONS IN NAVAL SHOOTING.

The long ranges at which the larger ships have so far fought in this war have upset the calculations of many naval men, and they have already had the effect of forcing the United States Navy Department to plan revolutionary changes in the methods of target practice. In a recent press interview one American naval officer admitted that no efforts had been made by the big ships to hit targets at anything like the range at which ships have been sunk or disabled in the European war. Neither had any effort been made, it was stated, to locate and fire on a target the exact location of which would have to be discovered by some means outside of the ship itself, as would be the case in actual warfare. To locate such a target it would be necessary for a destroyer to signal its exact location to the battleship. Owing to the small size of the destroyer and to the fact that it could lie "bow on" to the enemy ship or target, it would probably not be discovered at all, and if discovered could scarcely be hit. This scouting work could also be done with an aeroplane, though it would be much more difficult to determine exact ranges from a safe altitude. It was by such means, the United States naval experts believed, that the English ships were able to put the German cruiser Blucher out of commission while she was 18,000 yards, or a little over ten miles, distant from the vessels doing the firing. The British battle cruiser Lion was put out of commission by the Germans in the same battle at approximately the same range. This battle, concluded the officer, was a tremendous surprise to American naval experts, and made the target practice of American battleships look like child's play.

TAXATION.

THE NEW SCALE.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

It was ascertained to-night that there is to be no new Federal taxation except the income tax, so that whatever anxiety may have prevailed on this point is relieved.

In making his financial statement next week Mr. Fisher will announce that it will require approximately £4,000,000 to balance the ledger this year, apart from war expenditure, which is provided for out of loans. Incidental to the war, however, the Treasurer has to provide for interest on the loans, and for pensions for wounded soldiers and dependents of those who are killed. These two items alone may possibly reach three millions, but on the other hand there is a credit in the shape of interest payable by the States on the amount borrowed from the Commonwealth.

Last year the whole of the surplus from preceding years was used up, and, taking these items together, the Treasurer was confronted with a task of finding nearly £4,000,000, and it was on this basis that the income tax was framed. In order to lighten the burden on the taxpayers provision will probably be made for the payment in two half-yearly instalments, and incomes will probably be assessed for the year ended June 30, 1915.

The rates approximately are:—

PERSONAL EXERTION.

Salary.	Tax in £.
£157	3d
£500 (over the exemption)	7d
£1,000 (over the exemption)	10d
£2,000 (over the exemption)	1/6
£3,000 (over the exemption)	2/-
£4,000 (over the exemption)	3/-
£5,000 (over the exemption)	3/6
£6,000 (over the exemption)	4/-
£7,750 and over	5/-

On incomes between these totals the amount of the tax will, as already explained, be graduated.

INCOMES FROM PROPERTY.

In the case of incomes derived from property the rates are slightly higher, ranging from 10d in the £ on amounts of £500 to 5s in the £ on £7000 and over. The respective amounts are as follow:—

THE BALLARAT.

WOUNDED AUSTRALIANS.

PERTH, Friday.

The steamer Ballarat put into Albany this afternoon to coal on her way to the eastern States with wounded soldiers from the Dardanelles. The wounded soldiers on the ship are distributed as follows:—Western Australia, 44; South Australia, 54; Victoria, 187; New South Wales, 125; Queensland, 60; Tasmania, 30.

After the local officers boarded the vessel, the Western Australians were mustered and taken ashore and marched to the railway station. With one exception they were all able to walk, although some had the assistance of crutches. The condition of the man who is unable to march is such that he is to be placed in the Albany Hospital. The remaining 43 left by special train for Perth. All the men seem to be in good heart. Lieut.-Colonel Bolton, of Ballarat, is in charge of the transport.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

It is expected that the steamer Ballarat, with a number of wounded soldiers and other medical cases aboard, will reach Melbourne on August 6 or 7. It has been arranged that the Sydney men, after being landed in Melbourne, will proceed home by the steamer.

DOMINIONS COMMISSION.

AUSTRALIA WITHDRAWS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Federal Government has decided to sever its connection with the Dominions Royal Commission by withdrawing its representative, Mr. Donald Cameron. This action has been taken because Ministers do not think that the commission has justified its existence. It is understood that the personnel does not impress Ministers, and they have decided that no good use can be obtained by the Commonwealth continuing to be represented on it. Ministers are of the opinion that the commission should have been composed of vigorous and brilliant young men of the Empire, who were prepared to travel and learn everything about the Dominions. Up to the present the commission has presented interim reports on natural resources and immigration. Seven volumes have been printed and distributed by the commission.

MURDER SUSPECTED.

AUCKLAND, Friday.

An old lady named Mumford was found dying in a burning house last night. She died immediately after rescue. Deceased had received a terrible wound on the face, circumstances indicating murder. One room in the house had been ransacked. The fire was extinguished before the house was totally destroyed.

THE NOTE ISSUE.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Particulars made available to-day by the Federal treasurer showed that the Commonwealth note issue on July 28 amounted to £34,844,020, and that the gold reserve on the same date was £11,890,677.

GERMAN MURDERS.

A PRIEST'S TESTIMONY.

BATHURST, Friday.

Rev. Father Laurent, of Belgium, who is now in Bathurst, describing the devastation of his own native village of Ethe, says:—"After the invasion a battle was fought there when the Germans came in from the Duchy of Luxemburg and the Frenchmen from the south. They clashed at my native village, and turned it from a haven of content to a scene of devastation. The French were defeated, and the Huns burned five out of six of all the houses, but it was the murder that they did after the battle had been fought and won, that was worst. They shot hundreds of my fellow countrymen against the wall of the old churchyard, and treated others likewise elsewhere. Only 120 of my people were taken away to Germany as prisoners."

PERSONAL.

VICE-REGAL.

His Excellency the Governor, attended by General Finn, private secretary, received the salute at Macquarie-street from the march of troops through the city yesterday morning, and afterwards proceeded to the Town Hall, where he witnessed the termination of the march, and called for three cheers for his Majesty the King, and three cheers for Australia Day.

His Excellency the Governor and Lady Edeline Strickland, accompanied by the Misses Strickland, and attended by Captain Pasco, R.N., A.D.C., were present at the matinee performance at Her Majesty's Theatre yesterday afternoon.

Madame Melba will leave Melbourne by the Sydney express on Tuesday to join the Makura for America.

RAILWAY COMMISSION.

The Premier stated last night that the Government had not yet appointed a Railway Commissioner in succession to the late Mr. H. Richardson. Mr. Holman added that he and Mr. Hoyle had been deputed to make certain inquiries, and there were three candidates still in the field. The matter, he thought, would be settled finally this morning.

CLANRICARDE ESTATE.

LONDON, July 30.

The long drawn out litigation over the acquirement of the Clanricarde Estate has ended by the Land Court in Dublin fixing the price at £238,211.

The case concerned the validity of certain proceedings taken by the Congested Districts Board for Ireland to acquire compulsorily seven distinct estates belonging to Lord Clanricarde in Galway, and containing more than 49,741 acres.

EASTLAND DISASTER.

RESULT OF THE INQUEST.

CHICAGO, July 29.

The inquest on the victims of the steamer Eastland, which recently capsized with a crowd of passengers attending a picnic, resulted in a verdict naming the head officials of the company owning the steamer, the captain, and engineer, and the steamboat inspector.

The cause of the disaster is believed to have been due to the Eastland resting on the river bottom, which caused her to overset when the crowd thronged aboard.

DEATHS IN BATH.

SMITH'S APPEAL DISMISSED.

LONDON, July 29.

The appeal of George Joseph Smith, who was convicted of having murdered by drowning them in a bath three of the six women with whom he had contracted marriages, has been dismissed.

FINANCIAL.

THE INVESTMENT MARKET.

The generally easier tone of the investment market all through the week has been due to a variety of causes. First, there has been our own war loan, and the absorption of floating capital on that account. The British war loan has not been without its influence. Coming war taxation by the Federal Parliament has helped the disinclination to invest, and over all has been the uneasiness felt by the mercantile and manufacturing community at the powers proposed to be taken by the Federal Parliament under the referendum.

THE MELBOURNE GAS COMPANY.

The chairman of the Metropolitan (Melbourne) Gas Company stated at the annual meeting that there had been expansion in almost all departments of the business, the sale of gas stoves alone being adversely affected to a slight extent through lessened activity in the building trade. The use of gas for industrial purposes was growing, also the use of gas for high pressure lighting. In the half-year ended June 30 a total length of nearly 27 miles of mains and 55 miles of service pipes had been laid. The chairman further stated in regard to the new issue of capital, that if the shares had been offered for sale at the time authority was given for their creation, some four weeks ago, a higher average return would have been realised than that obtained on July 23. Conditions for borrowers had not improved lately, and, considering all the circumstances, the directors regard the average price of £9/11/1½ per £5 share as satisfactory, in which opinion all interested will doubtless concur. A dividend of 6s 6d per share was declared.

GOULBURN GAS.

A profit of £401 is shown in the report of the City of Goulburn Gas Company for the half-year ended June 30, which, with £286 brought forward from the previous half-year, makes £688 available; a dividend at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum absorbs £400, and £288 is carried forward. Sales of gas amounted to £2451.

AMALGAMATED INSURANCE (AUSTRALIA) LTD.

The first annual report of the above company, which has established the Melbourne Fire Office, Ltd., Sydney Fire Office, Ltd., Brisbane Fire Office, Ltd., and Adelaide Fire Office, Ltd., gives condensed figures of the operations of these companies to May 31. An application of Melbourne Fire Office, Ltd., for members' representatives to the Victorian Underwriters' Association was refused because of an agreement with the Pharmaceutical Defence, Ltd. In Sydney the fire and general accident business of the Metropolitan Accident, Fire, and General Insurance Company, Ltd., was taken over. Re-insurance business has been arranged, but it is not deemed wise to give details. The profit and loss account shows a net loss of £798. The capital is £36,017. Shares in State fire office companies amount to £15,324; fixed deposits amount to £1026, and cash at bankers £3794. Preliminary expenses absorb £506, underwriting commission amounts to £10,000, and purchase of insurance business £3030.

FEDERAL INCOME TAX.

It is stated that the Federal Labour party has decided on the rate of income tax to be submitted to the Federal Parliament as a war measure. The rate, 3d in the £, proposed in the lower incomes is extremely moderate, though the exemption, £156, is lower than that to which we have been accustomed to in this State. On incomes of £500 over the exemption the rate rapidly rises until it amounts to 5/ in the £ on incomes of £7000 from property and investments, and £7750 from personal exertion. The commencing rate on incomes from property is 10d in the £ on sums up to £500. Presumably the exemption of £156 applies. The highest rate of the proposed Federal tax is almost double the British tax, as will be seen from the table below, and it is applied to incomes slightly lower than those to which the highest British rate applies. In Great Britain the rate of 2/7, which includes supertax of 1/4, is levied on incomes of over £8000. The Australian tax is to be levied on incomes of the 12 months ended June 30, and this will be more just than a levy on the year ended December 31 last, as the drought and the war have greatly reduced many incomes. In some cases incomes have vanished altogether. The following table enables a comparison of the proposed Federal rates to be made with the rates in New South Wales and the United Kingdom.—

	New South Wales.	Proposed Federal.	United Kingdom.
Lowest rate in £	[illegible]	3d	/9
Additional Tax in £	3d	—	—
Highest rate in £	[illegible]	5/	2/7
Exemption	£250	£156	£160

The additional rate of 3d for New South Wales was imposed only for last year's income. A New South Wales taxpayer with an income of over £7750 will this year pay income tax amounting to 6.9d in the £.

FEDERAL LOAN.

The Chamber of Commerce has adopted the following resolution:—

"The council of the chamber urges members to subscribe to such extent as they reasonably can for the Commonwealth war loan of £5,000,000, 4½ per cent., issuing at par—lists to close on August 31 next. The paramount claim is that the funds are earmarked for war purposes only. In addition, there are various advantages, of which only one or two need be mentioned:

"1. The stock will be free of Federal or State stamp duty, and the interest arising from it will be free of Federal or State income tax.

"2. The stock will be accepted at par in payment of Federal probate duties.

"3. The loan is definitely repayable in Sydney, Melbourne, Brisbane, Adelaide, Perth, and Hobart—at par—on December 15, 1925.

"4. A full half-year's interest will be paid on December 15 next."

FINANCE OF WAR.

THE RAISING OF MILLIONS.

SPHERES OF TAXATION AND CREDIT.

Now that we have commenced in earnest to raise in our own country the money to provide for the cost of the war we are helping to wage, it becomes of deep interest to consider attentively the methods by which wars may be financed, and the expedients which the principal belligerents in this war are adopting. A scrutiny of these methods will enable us to realise the better the immense financial issues involved in the conflict, which is increasing the national debts of the five principal Powers engaged—the United Kingdom, France, Russia, Germany, and Austria-Hungary—at the rate of three thousand millions sterling a year.

The three sources from which money can be raised for carrying on war are

NATIONAL INCOME, NATIONAL CAPITAL,
FOREIGN LOANS.

These three sources have been utilised by all the belligerents except Great Britain, which so far has relied on national income and national capital, not having yet pledged any of her credit with the United States, the only neutral Power sufficiently wealthy to lend abroad.

National income contributes in two ways: by taxation and by loans to the State. National capital contributes in the same two ways. Income tax is, of course, a tax on income. Most Customs duties are also a tax on income, though some are a tax on capital. In Australia the Customs duties were increased in December last for war purposes. Probate duties are a tax on capital. The Federal probate and succession duties were imposed to provide war funds. Beyond the loans with interest made to the State by the people, there is the indirect loan without interest due to the emission of a paper currency. The amount of paper emitted above the gold held, is the amount of this indirect loan. Immediately before war broke out the amount so lent to the State was £5,466,370. On June 30 the amount was £22,322,346. Thus we may put the paper money loan due to the war at £16,855,976.

LOANS FROM NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Taxation is inadequate and unsuitable as a principal means to meet the expense of a great war. It would be possible in theory for the Government to raise the whole sum in the form of current taxation, so that at the end of the war the State would have incurred no fresh debt. But in practice, as the "Round Table" points out, so huge and sudden an addition to the taxes would be intensely unpopular, and would wear the appearance of confiscation, thus damaging national credit. A modern government, therefore, is certain to provide most of its war expenses by borrowing, even though it borrows from its own subjects. The nation considered as an aggregate of individuals is lending money to itself in its collective capacity as a State. The people make the loan, and it is the people who ultimately repay it, since interest and principal of the national debt falls on the future taxes. By proceeding in this way, instead of putting the whole cost on the taxes of one or two years, the burden is spread over a long period, and it is much more easy to distribute it without causing discontent.

REALISATION OF CAPITAL.

How then are loans raised by a nation from its people? The United Kingdom since August has raised by long-dated loans—Treasury Bills, as Mr. Lloyd George says, have a habit of falling due at inconvenient times—in round figures, nine hundred million sterling. It is plain that the nation had not this amount of floating capital ready to invest in the loans. First of all Great Britain was the principal lender to the world. With the war, this was stopped. Therefore, the surplus income which would in ordinary circumstances have gone into foreign loans, was devoted to the British loans. It is estimated that the surplus of national income after paying for living expenses is four hundred millions, and that this is utilised not only in investment abroad, but also in the betterment of the national plant. Even if the national income were not reduced by the war, and if no betterment of the national plant were made, there would still be a large excess—five hundred millions—to be made up out of the national capital. A consideration of imports compared with exports has led to the conclusion that three hundred millions has been provided by the realisation of foreign securities. London has in ordinary times a great deal of money out abroad, in the form of short term loans, bills, or credits. Since the war started, the "Round Table" again points out there has been a steady pressure to call these in wherever it is possible. Above all, British investors hold a huge mass of foreign stocks, shares, and bonds. By no means all of them are saleable in war time. But among them are American securities, estimated to amount to, perhaps, one thousand million sterling in value. These, or the greater part of them, are saleable in New York, and are actually being sold all the time. America sends the purchase price over to Great Britain in the form of commodities. The remaining two hundred million of the five hundred million from capital comes out of internal as distinguished from foreign capital. It is being provided by consuming accumulated stocks and not replacing them, and by cutting down the ordinary annual expenditure on the maintenance of national plant.

THE GERMAN WAY.

Germany up to the present has raised two loans amounting altogether to £650,000,000. She has also borrowed two million sterling in America by an issue of Treasury notes. Like the British the Germans are selling their foreign investments, which are estimated at one thousand million sterling. Of United States securities it is estimated that Germany sold in the first eight months of the war more than £20,000,000, and less than £40,000,000.

Germany has adopted a very ingenious device for increasing her apparent financial power. The belief is encouraged that when a Government borrows from its own subjects there is no limit to its powers, provided that it makes the necessary arrangement with the banks. A circular sent out by the Wolff Agency, approved, if not instigated, by Dr. Helfferich, the Minister of Finance, pointed out how mistaken those investors were who thought that because they had invested their liquid resources in the first loan they could not subscribe to the second. On the contrary, the scrip of the first loan was an excellent basis for borrowing money from the ordinary banks or the loan banks, in order to buy the second. The process, it would seem, according to the German argument, could be repeated many times. But when we examine it we find it merely a scheme for obtaining loans on the security of expected future savings from income. These savings from income may not, and probably in many cases will not, be made as the war progresses, owing to the continual shrinkage in trade. What will be the result when the inevitable liquidation takes place?

A German would probably reply: "We are not thinking of the future, we are only thinking of the present. The scheme enables us to finance the war with seeming ease, so long as our people are self-supporting, supplying men for the fighting line, and men and women for production; then Germany can go on for an indefinite time. It will not be before the human power of the country to provide sufficient supplies of necessaries fails that the crash will come." So the Germans, just as we do, look upon the war as a war of attrition, and they believe that though inferior in numbers, their organisation will wear the Allies away far faster than the Allies will wear away the Austrians, Hungarians, Germans, and Turks.

WAR PROBLEMS.

ENEMY FIRMS.

The Chamber of Commerce recently telegraphed to the Federal Attorney-General, asking what firms were supposed to be included under the words "other firms which were before the proclamation enemy firms." A reply has now been received from Mr. Hughes, stating that the only list of names under the proclamation of July 7 is that published in the "Gazette" of July 22. This list was printed in the daily papers on the 23rd instant, and includes the names of eleven companies.

COMMERCIAL.

THE MARKETS.

Australia Day functions completely disorganised trade in the city markets yesterday. Many merchants neglected their businesses entirely, and threw themselves whole-heartedly into the attempt to make the day the greatest success possible. Those who were inclined to do business found that other houses had more interest in the excitement of the day than in trade.

In the hardware markets little was done. Continental cement was quoted as high as 25/ a cask, and black powder cartridges were selling at 8/3 a hundred. All other lines were unchanged.

Oils were steady, and, although practically no merchant trade was reported, a good country business was done. Prices generally were firm, and in a few cases only did the quotations show any change on late rates. Redlead was sold up to £45/10/ a ton.

The market for cornsacks continued unsettled. Season's delivery was offered in one quarter at 8/2 net to rails, but some of the largest holders refused to accept an order under 8/4 net. Spot stocks were quoted at 8/4 net. There was a small demand for woolpacks for immediate delivery at 3/ net to rails. Branbags were neglected at from 7/2 to 7/3 net.

MISSING PARCELS.

The Chamber of Commerce has received from the secretary to the Postmaster-General's Department the following letter in regard to the charge made for inquiry regarding missing parcels:—

"I am to inform you that from the large number of inquiries being made before reasonable time had elapsed after the posting of a parcel it was evident the system of free departmental inquiry was being exploited with the object of obtaining official evidence of delivery, and therefore action had to be taken to stop such. A regulation authorising a charge for inquiry was made, but it is stipulated therein that should inquiry prove the delay in the delivery of a parcel to be attributable to the department, the fee charged for inquiry would be refunded."

TARIFF DECISIONS.

PILLAGES.

G.O. 960 is cancelled, and the following substituted:—When the owner or his agent, whichever of them is present at the survey of the goods, makes a declaration, in form 49, that the goods were not landed, but were pillaged on the voyage, and there is no reason to doubt the statement, duty may be refunded.

ITALIAN BRANDY.

In regard to brandy produced in Italy, a certificate from the Italian Customs similar to that in G.O. 761 (1), may be accepted as sufficient compliance with section 10 of the Act.

At Darling Harbour yesterday 75 tons of wheat and 120 tons of flour were manifested to arrive.

Cornsacks are dull at 8/9; branbags 6/9 to 7/.

PRODUCE.

DAIRY.

CHEESE PRICES ADVANCED.

EGGS CHEAPER.

Little business was done in Sussex-street yesterday owing to the fact that Australia Day completely disorganised all arrangements. The Necessary Commodities Commission on Thursday raised the price of cheese to 11d a lb for prime grades, 10d for good and 8½d for rough. As these are the increases asked for by the agents, the latter look upon the new scale as satisfactory, but all the same strongly hold the opinion that no fresh supplies will be available till the spring brings the new season's produce. Buyers had very little chance of securing any stocks. Practically nothing was doing in bacon, due, no doubt, to the fact that the Commission's final decision has not yet been reached in regard to the prices of this commodity, and in consequence agents were inclined to hang off till this decision was known.

The butter situation showed a slight easing. Country reports were more promising, and, although the new season's butter cannot possibly be on the market before the end of August, the arrivals of local supplies and the fresh importations from America should tide over.

The egg market was sick, and prices showed a decline on those of the previous day. New-laid varieties were quoted at 1/3, and case at 1/2 a dozen. Heavy arrivals were landed from the Clarence and Richmond rivers boats, and suburban centres also sent large stocks. The demand was slacker. New-laid duck eggs were worth 1/4, and case 1/2 a dozen.

CANADIAN BUTTER IN THE MAKURA.

Owing to the fact that the butter which the Government is importing from Canada was stored low down in the hold of the ship, a start was not made in the delivery till half-past 4. However, between that time and 6 o'clock all those who presented orders—about 20 in all—were served. Mr. Purser, who is supervising the delivery, states that to-day a start will be made at 8 o'clock, and it is most desirable that all grocers and others possessing orders should present them as early as possible, as the wharf has to be cleared by 1 o'clock. The butter is well frozen, and is of much better quality than that brought by the Ventura and the Colusa from San Francisco. It is packed in good boxes of planed wood, each of which contains the same amount, 56lb net. This in itself is a distinct improvement on the previous shipments, which were packed in boxes of different sizes. The Makura is lying at No. 5 Wharf, Darling Harbour.

Quotations were:—

FORAGE AND GRAIN.

Owing to Australia Day functions, trade in the forage and grain end of Sussex-street yesterday morning was completely disorganised, merchants neglecting their businesses in order to help their wounded fellow-countrymen. Many houses were closed from 11 o'clock till 1, usually the busiest hours of the day.

Victorian onions were still offering at £9 a ton, and New Zealand from £6 to £7. Potatoes were dull, but unchanged. The maize market showed no alteration, but the general opinion in the "street" in regard to this branch of the trade was that there would be something doing on Monday, which will see the beginning of the August trade.

Few buyers attended the firewood auctions, and most of the sales were conducted privately at rates that showed an all-round fall of a shilling a ton.

EXTREME SLACKNESS.

DUE TO AUSTRALIA DAY.

In order to permit the members of the Sydney Stock Exchange to view the procession in connection with Australia Day, they decided that the first or morning call yesterday morning should be regarded as the "noon" or high 'Change, and that the next one, instead of being held at noon, should be postponed to the afternoon.

This circumstance, together with the fact that the Melbourne Stock Exchange met in the morning only, and then adjourned, and the possibility of the fall of Warsaw to the German and Austrian armies, were factors opposed to any semblance of activity in the market. Neither was there, whilst the proceedings at high call were lifeless.

Things did not improve during the afternoon, especially when a rumour was freely circulated that English press authorities had expressed an opinion that it was only a question of a short time when Warsaw would have to be abandoned by the Russians. "That, however, does not mean the end of the struggle in the East," said a member; "but it cannot be denied that the market has been buoyed up by the hope of the Russians being able to stave off the Germans from Warsaw, hence its fall must have a depressing effect upon the market."

Anyhow, the procession, the gala appearance of the streets, and the war rumours, had a most disturbing effect upon members. If they wanted to do business they were not in the mood to do it with so many appeals made to their generosity from the army of female collectors, who not only invaded the corridor and vestibule, but also the Stock Exchange itself. They did not appeal in vain for aid to the great cause of Australia Day.

MINING NOTES.

A meeting of the directors of the following companies, viz., the Petroleum Concessions, Ltd., North Petrolia Oil Territories, Ltd., Austral Concessions, Ltd., Murrabinna Oil Concessions, Ltd., and the Baku Oil Syndicate, was held yesterday at the office of Mr. H. F. Helder, Pitt-street, Mr. Cornelius Delohery being in the chair. The object of the meeting was to discuss a proposal to form an amalgamated company to inaugurate at once extensive drilling operations for oil in the Hundred of Murrabinna, near Kingston, South Australia. The proposal was accorded the hearty support of the meeting, and a committee of influential gentlemen was formed to arrange details. One director, in speaking of the financial position, said that the success of the formation of the amalgamated company was assured. This important movement has been caused by the recent most satisfactory developments in connection with the boring operations already in progress.

The manager of the Black Range gold mine (W.A.), reporting by telegram, says the No. 3 south level is in 90ft from the crosscut, but shows no material change, whilst the reef in the face of the rise, now up 50ft above the same level, is 4ft wide, with visible but fine gold. No work has been done at No. 2 south level since June 5. The reef in face on that date was 4ft, assaying 50/ per ton. The reef reported on July 24 as in No. 3 level should have been in the rise from No. 3 level.

According to the report of the manager of the White Crystal tin mine for last week, the west crosscut at No. 1 level was extended to 40ft, and showed oxidised veins coming in the face of the drive. The south drive at the intermediate level was driven to 152ft, and shows a lode formation 2ft 6in in width, carrying tin. The north stopes are 10ft in thickness and of very good quality, whilst the south stopes show 3ft of payable ore. Murphy's shaft is down 53ft, and shows a payable lode 2ft wide. The manager is forwarding an additional consignment of tin concentrates to Sydney.

For the week ended July 30 the dredge of the Araluen Redbank Gold-dredging Company, N.L., recovered 24oz 1dwt of gold for 127 hours' work.

MOUNT OXIDE MINES, LIMITED.

In our business columns appears a copy of a letter to shareholders of Mount Oxide Mines, Limited, signed by the chairman of directors, Sir A. J. Gould. This letter sets out the course of negotiations which resulted in the transfer of the company's property with certain exceptions to the Fanti Consolidated Mines, Limited, and the consideration therefor in shares in a new company, one stipulation being that a loan made to a third party of £20,000 should be repaid to the lenders by the proposed new company. It is further stated that shareholders have not been informed of the defence to a suit now being prosecuted against the directors, and the letter proceeds to point out what that defence is, and the costs involved.

HOSPITALITY COMMITTEES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—A great number of our wounded will arrive during the next few months, and I venture to suggest that such honour as we can give to brave men who have done their duty for their country should be accorded. Let every town form a hospitality committee, so that when a wounded man returns he may be properly entertained. They cannot all land at once, and all receive hospitality at the same time, but they should be well received when they do come back. Sensitive boys often feel a slight when none is intended, and I think that, while all should privately do what they can to honour the brave, a hospitality committee in each town would be of great use at this time. I am, etc., S.

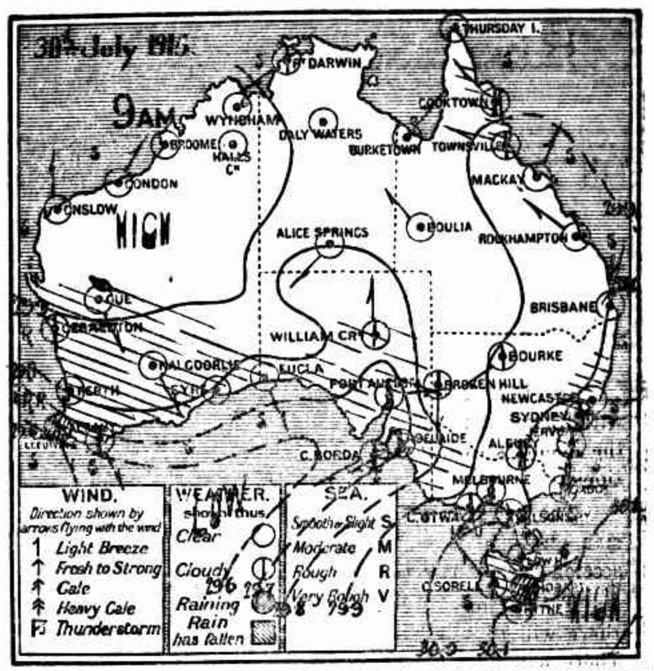
AUSTRALIAN WEATHER.

THE "HERALD" MAP.



The eastern high pressure has advanced about 500 miles during the 24 hours ended at 9 a.m. yesterday, and has lost nearly two-tenths of an inch in barometric values. The Antarctic disturbance still looks promising as regards rain: so far, it has been general in South Australia, south from William Creek. The centre of this disturbance is over the western portion of the Bight, while the northern isobar extends into the south-west districts of Queensland.

Another high pressure has entered Western Australia north from the tropic. With this distribution of pressure, rain of a more or less general character, associated with thunderstorms, may be looked for, while winds should become squally from the north, with mild temperatures.

Ocean Forecast.—Gales around the south-west coast of Western Australia, and squally and rough in the Western Straits.

REAL ESTATE.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

The real estate market this week was a market of merchandise. Real estate was almost out of the question. The whole week was one of preparation for Australia Day, and yesterday, instead of lithographs and plans being conspicuous in the rooms of the association, there was a huge collection of gifts, which had been handed to the Red Cross Association for disposal by auction at the hands of the auctioneering firms connected with the association.

Many of the city auction rooms were taken possession of yesterday by ladies who were holding sales, conducting stalls, and managing tea rooms. In fact, real estate work was entirely suspended for the day. During the week, however, several auctions were held. The sales were well attended, but practically no business resulted. Messrs. Raine and Horne submitted a fairly attractive list of suburban properties on Thursday. The bidding in one or two instances almost reached the reserves, but the properties were passed in for private treaty. Messrs. Hardie and Gorman and also Messrs. Horning and Co. held sales, with almost similar results.

During the week Messrs. Stanton and Son concluded several sales. One was a vacant block of land of 17½ acres at Strathfield, having 923ft frontage to Bates-street and 672ft to another road, for £2050; also a cottage at Croydon for £730, and another in the same suburb for £725; a cottage at Rosebery Model Suburb for £900, and a cottage at Summer Hill for £616.

Messrs. Arthur Rickard and Co. report that most of the sales effected were to people seeking home sites, the easy terms system of land purchase of this company making the extensive variety of estates controlled by them, and which are situated in picturesque suburbs, extremely attractive to all classes of the community. Bellevue Hill, Kensington, Bexley, Auburn, Thornleigh, Eastwood, Lindfield, Haberfield, Guildford, Mosman, and Manly properties were foremost in the inquiry list. Farmlets at Wentworthville continue in brisk demand, Raby Acres Estate at Bringelly (via Liverpool) being a good second on the sales lists. Merritts Wharf Estate farmlets at Woy Woy, and Plushcombe Farmlets Estate, were also satisfactory sellers. Mountain home sites at Lawson and Leura were inquired for. Waterside holiday lots at Mona Vale, Cronulla, and Woy Woy were also inquired for.

There is a strong progressive movement in the rural districts beyond Parramatta, and Messrs. Mobbs and Co., local agents, have been active of late in the disposal of properties, which means the settlement of people on small mixed farms. Their sales this week include two fairly large-sized properties. One is an orchard property at Tuggerah, £1400, and the other nine cottages in Parramatta North, £2300.

Messrs. Hugh Duff and Co. included in their sales of the week the following properties:—A cottage at Chatswood, £1350; another in the same suburb for £800, a third for £750, a cottage at Longueville for £725, and several blocks of land at Chatswood.

Mr. Percy G. Sharpe this week sold a cottage in Spencer-road, Mosman, for £1175; a cottage in Cowles-road, Mosman, £1025; a cottage in North Sydney, £675; a cottage in Rose Bay, £850; and a cottage at Roseville, £900; also four allotments in the Bronte Estate, Bronte, £1200; a cottage at Campsie, £325; and several smaller lots.

During the week Mr. C. H. Crammond sold land in Stewart-street, Paddington, for £1150. The land has a frontage of 84ft by a depth of 207ft. He also sold shop premises at Newtown for £1500, three cottages at Petersham for £1340, and an investment property at Stanmore, comprising 18 cottages. The price has not been disclosed.

AN INDUSTRIAL CENTRE.

From Lidcombe to Parramatta there are a cluster of suburbs which are purely industrial. The whole district has been taken possession of by working men, most of whom have employment at one or other of the numerous factories, which have come into existence within the last few years. As a matter of fact, this district is fast developing into a Birmingham of New South Wales. The majority of these workmen have homes of their own, the cost of which is being paid for out of their earnings.

One of the principal centres in the district under review is Auburn. This is a municipality that has made rapid progress within the last five years. Less than a decade ago Auburn was nothing more than paddocks for grazing purposes, with workmen's cottages dotted here and there. In the interval those paddocks have been subdivided into building allotments, which have been sold on easy terms, and to-day Auburn is a flourishing working man's district, whose residents mostly own their own little cottages, and find employment at the local brickworks, or meatworks, or at the Clyde Engineering and other manufactures, of which there are quite a number between Auburn and Parramatta, whose smoking stacks silhouette against the sky-line. Until war was proclaimed in Europe Auburn was building at the rate of over a house per day. Now it is averaging about four new houses per week. Six years ago the population was about 6000. To-day it is approaching 12,000. A splendid train service enables the bread-winners in a family to work in the city and travel at a small cost to and from their daily toil, so that while the head of the family or his sons find employment locally, other members can also get to and from the city in comfort, and the whole family enjoy the benefits of living in a healthy and prosperous suburb, where they have plenty of room to move about and breathe pure air. There is an agitation locally for a tramway from Auburn railway station to the Parramatta River. This would not only connect up the river trip with the railway, but it would open a fine stretch of country for sub-division purposes. Auburn people are also looking forward to shortly sharing in the benefits of a sewerage scheme, a survey of which has been made for the whole district, including Granville, Auburn, and Lidcombe. The City Council will, probably, shortly extend its supply of electricity through Auburn for giving motor power to the various works of the district, and ultimately lighting up the streets and the houses in the municipality. Water and gas supplies have been extended throughout the greater part of the district, and the council is steadily macadamising roadways and providing well-formed footpaths. Five years ago the income to the council was less than £4000 per annum, now it is between £8000 and £9000 per year.

Lidcombe, which adjoins Auburn, has also made splendid progress. Within the last five years there has been quite an increase in the population, which, with the railway extensions that are taking place on both sides of the main line at the Lidcombe Station, will, in the course of a year or two, develop into a great residential centre. This district was once known as Haslems Creek. It was while it bore that name that the great cemetery was opened. Subsequently, during the early life of the municipality, the district was known as Rookwood. But as the word Rookwood was so much associated with the cemetery it was thought desirable to look for a new name for the municipality, and after many suggestions as to a suitable title, the aldermen decided to have the name of the two Mayors interwoven to form the necessary word. The retiring Mayor and the incoming Mayor for that particular year were chosen, Alderman Lidbury was one, and Alderman Larcombe was the other. By taking the first half of Lidbury and the latter half of Larcombe, you get the present name of the district "Lidcombe," and you at the same time dissociate with the municipality the name "Rookwood Cemetery." The change has proved a good one. Land values are on the increase. The income to the council has doubled itself, and is now between £7000 and £8000. A large residential population is springing up. The district is a healthy one, and people can work in the city, and at little cost give their families the benefit of fresh air and room to have a garden and a few fowls. At Lidcombe over 400 new buildings have been erected within the last two years. A line of railway is being constructed from Lidcombe station to the new abattoirs, and on to Glebe Island. When these abattoirs are in full working order the workmen no doubt will build their homes along this branch line, and thus a fairly large-sized stretch of what is now bush land will be available for settlement purposes. On the left of the main line from Sydney at Lidcombe a railway has already been opened to Regents Park, and on to Potts Hill. Ultimately this line will join the main southern line at Canley Vale or Liverpool. It will also connect up Rookwood with the Bankstown Municipality. The extension will provide the means of opening up a very fine stretch of country for settlement purposes. Indeed, as soon as it was known that there was a certainty of the line being extended to Canley Vale or Liverpool, land values along the whole line of route immediately increased to double their previous value, and investors on the look-out for bargains bought up where possible in this direction. But, to return to Lidcombe, the railway authorities, realising the present growth of the district, have commenced to re-model the railway station. The intention is to have much larger premises, and an island platform in the centre, with three extra lines of rails. Lidcombe has also made arrangements for the introduction of the electric light and power from the City Council, and the local council is now agitating for the erection of a police station, and the supply of other requirements necessary for a progressive district.

Beyond Lidcombe and Auburn is the great industrial centre, where manufactures are to be seen in large numbers, and these employ many hands. There will be found the Clyde Engineering Company's works, several large brick and tile works, engineering firms, millers, and others also have their extensive business premises there, and beyond that again is the old historical city of Parramatta, and its immense outlying districts, which are fast developing into great rural centres, but these will be dealt with in a future article.

"UP TO GERMANY."

THE AMERICAN VIEW.

The "Morning Post" publishes a striking letter "expressive of real American sentiment on the war, and written by a distinguished American belonging to an old English family." We give the following extract from it:—

"There is no German even who could mistake the voice of the American people, speaking as it spoke the day after the President's Note had been read. I dare not let myself for one instant dream that the Allies can be defeated. Like Lord Roberts, 'I will suppose no such thing,' but our hearts are heavy for the great price paid for all that man has yet won. A Prussian victory would be so unthinkable that, as one of the Rossetti family lately wrote me—'it would mean that there is no moral law'—and we almost feel that way. All our slowly-won civilisation, the pathetic, childish structure, so rudimentary, so imperfect, so weak, yet having in it all the promise of the perfect plan mankind would one day establish—all that seems hanging by a thread. Yet it is impossible to believe it can fall. For the first time I now understand how ancient civilisations did perish—so utterly that we are only now digging out their remains and wondering at our discoveries. Some 'German,' in every case, arose and led his hordes to victory over torn treaties and mutilated lands. But surely, surely the thing cannot be done again.

"What is certain is that it will not be done without one more terrific contest, in which the whole of this hemisphere will be engaged. If England falls, she has that comfortable knowledge to take with her. We should all be all English then!

"Yet why do I say that? Not even England is fighting more gloriously than France—'twin-Republic France!' And neither can dim the lustre of Belgium. That reminds me, just to show how things are, I wrote these Belgian verses too, and nothing in America would publish them; they are not neutral, it's true. They are only useful to tell you, who are absent, how deeply we, your people, have been living this war through with you. Indeed, I do not think tensions can be much less; I know there are those to whom active warfare would seem a relief for pent emotions on this side.

"Not that we really desire war—far from it; we wish to remain at peace, if that can be peace with honour. We are not prepared—why should we be?—we never contemplate aggression ourselves. And we feel we can do more for the Allied cause by remaining out of war than by going in; nevertheless, it is 'up to Germany' now, and if she forces a war everybody in America is prepared, if nothing else is! We know the President will not rush us into war—that is sure; yet in that cautious temperament there are always possibilities of "Vera Cruz" surprises; it is always so, I believe. Whatever he ordains the nation will be back of him, all we are and have will be given—at a word. And perhaps before this letter reaches you that word may have been spoken, though we do not now either expect or foresee it.

"Rather, we think Germany will attempt to temporise, and that we—if the issue is left to us—shall resort to many other measures before declaring a rather futile war. To close our doors, retain her ships, hold up her patents, cut off her supplies, withdraw our aid wherever we are acting for her—all this would be a more effective warfare. And there again, we are, above all, a humane people—every American is thinking of the prisoners, of the pestilence-stricken Serbia, and the starving Poland, of Belgium, who looks to us for all; we should not willingly close those doors of mercy, unless something more than mercy is at stake. It may come to that—but we still pray not."

CHILD'S DEATH.

After being thrown from a sulky on to the road in Thomas-street on Thursday afternoon, Harold Elvy, the three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Elvy, 124 Percival-road, Stanmore, died at St. Vincent's Hospital the next morning. A bolting cart collided with the sulky, and, although his father was at the horse's head, the child was pitched out and mortally injured.

WARM CLOTHING.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—As our soldiers may have to spend another winter at the front, there is urgent need for haste in making provision for their requirements. Tanned sheepskins are undoubtedly very suitable, being waterproof and warm, but the supply is very restricted. As a substitute for sheepskins I would suggest the use of grey blankets, as I feel sure that very comfortable coats and waistcoats can be made from this material. The cost of blanket coats would be small, as any woman with any idea of cutting out could make them up; the material would stand a good deal of rough use, and the colour would be very suitable. Good foot-warmers could also be made from the same material.

ANOTHER MERE MAN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I notice by the press that there is a shortage of sheepskins for making vests for our troops, and I beg to suggest the use of rabbitskins to supply the deficiency. There is scarcely any need to point out that rabbitskins are cheap and plentiful here, that the tanning trade is in a bad way for lack of material to work on, and that a rabbitskin vest is better than none. I beg that you will insert this in your columns, so that it may come to the notice of the organisation which has in hand the making and supply of vests; and I would further suggest that it would be well that the export of rabbitskins be shrewdly watched, as the enemy is not likely to neglect such a cheap and valuable article.

I am, etc.,
GEORGE HENDERSON.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—My father was more than two years in the Crimean war—a heavy Dragoon. I just remember his coming back home. He told us that during the winter there the rabbit skins (I believe mother sent him 12) were very acceptable. He sewed tapes to them, and wore them on chest and back, and also lined his helmet and boots with them. He gave some to his mates, who called them Lack's skins. They are plentiful enough here, and no trouble to prepare, requiring no tanning—just peg them out square for three or four days in the shade. Trim the edges and rub, crumple, and fold them for an hour or two, until quite soft. This is all the aboriginals do with any sort of skins to make their rugs, etc. I think the Sydney children could contribute a number for Australia Day at a cost of less than a penny each, which would be very acceptable to our boys at the front next winter.

THE NEW WING OF SCOTS COLLEGE.

EDUCATION.

GREAT PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

THE SCOTS' COLLEGE.

The question of the type of education which best fits lads for their future work in life is always more or less debatable. For a time we were obsessed with the German type, which was held up as the complete ideal below which we had lamentably fallen, and up to which it must be our endeavour to rise. But, while the German system has much to teach us, it cannot be for us as a type. No doubt it emphasised strongly the scientific side of education, and therein we unquestionably came short. English education in the secondary schools was, it was objected, too much engrossed with the classics. Yet the German type was the extreme cultivation of the intellect to the neglect of other aspects of human nature, and in the total outcome the English system has much to say for itself in the production of a type of character which, in its all-roundedness, best fulfils the ideal of what a man should be. The main aim of our Great Public schools has been the development of character at least as much as the imparting of knowledge, and the development of the body—the training, in short, of the whole man.

THE UTILITARIAN SIDE.

In Australia the English system has been the basis upon which our secondary schools have gone, but with modifications to fit the different conditions of our own country and the necessity, more so than in English schools, of each man having to earn his own living. Thus the schools here give more place to the utilitarian side, but without lessening the general development of the manly type of character. New South Wales is fortunate in having such great Public schools as the old-established King's School, the Church of England Grammar School, Newington College, the Scots' College, the Armidale School, All Saints' College (Bathurst), St. Ignatius' College (Riverview), and several others, to say nothing of the school which has played so notable a part in the educational history of the State—the Sydney Grammar School. The origin of some of these schools goes back 50 or 70 years. The King's School, Parramatta, claims to be the oldest. Archdeacon (afterwards Bishop) Broughton was its founder. Like most old schools, it has had vicissitudes, and for five years in the 'Sixties was closed. The Rev. G. F. Macarthur transferred his private school at Macquarie Fields to Parramatta, thus becoming the King's School's second founder. The Sydney Grammar School in its present form was founded in 1857. But, in point of fact, its roots struck back as far as the "Sydney Free Grammar School," which was instituted in 1825, but was closed the following year. For upwards of 45 years that school was ruled by the late Mr. A. B. Weigall, who watched it grow from small beginnings to the largest school of its kind in Australia.

STATE HIGH SCHOOLS.

It has been urged sometimes that the development of high schools by the State would interfere with the prosperity of other secondary schools. This, however, is not likely to occur. There is no cause for jealousy, though there may be for rivalry, between the Great Public schools and the State High Schools. All interested in the educational advancement of the State will commend the Government for putting within reach of a larger section of our population the advantages of higher education. When one considers the nature and the scope of the great private secondary schools, it becomes obvious that without some such institutions and ideals a serious gap would be left in the education system, and it is doubtful whether any Government effort to fill it, if such were ever to be made, would be successful. The State high schools can never become substitutes for the Great Public schools, which supply a completeness of education—intellectual, physical, and moral—in a home atmosphere which the high schools, from the nature of the case, cannot supply. Without, as one example, the vigorous open-air life and encouragement of healthy rivalry in games played for their own sake, which only large playing fields can make possible, the schoolboy, and, to a lesser extent, the schoolgirl, is greatly handicapped, and this handicap unquestionably exists in the case of State schools taken as a whole.

THE SCOTS' COLLEGE.

In these days no school can, of course, maintain a front place without having both staff and material of high standard. As was reported a few days ago, the Scots' College has been largely increasing its accommodation, and in it we have an illustration of what has been said about the development of the State high schools being no hindrance to the development of the secondary schools. One may be sure that the Presbyterian Church, with its large element of cautious Scots, would not sink a considerable sum of money in new buildings unless they were confident that the future would justify such expenditure. Indeed, one is almost surprised at the extent to which the Presbyterian Church is launching forth on expenditure for educational purposes. Quite recently it made new additions to St. Andrew's College at a cost of £6000. It has now built new classrooms at the Scots' College at an expenditure of £10,000, and there is in process of erection a large new Presbyterian Ladies' College at Pymble at a cost of £50,000, the large and handsome building comprising the new classrooms at the Scots' College was officially opened last week by Lady Helen Munro Ferguson. It provides not only class accommodation for 200 scholars, but various adjuncts meeting the needs of the boys for physical culture, as well as a laboratory where a sound and practical scientific education is supplied. An armoury and a workshop, in which elementary instruction in woodwork and other crafts calculated to make handy men of them is given to the boys, have also been provided. The new building faces the playing field attached to the college, thus affording a convenient opportunity to combine muscle and intellect, while the waters of Rose Bay give them an opportunity to learn to be at home on sea as well as on land. The views from the college grounds are, by the way, not to be excelled anywhere. It will thus be seen, taking the Scots' College as an example, how the ideal of education in our midst is striving to develop every side of human nature. The patriotic spirit cultivated in all the great Public schools is illustrated in the fact that from the Scots' College, although it is comparatively a young institution, more than 80 old boys are already engaged in their country's fighting forces, while many of the present boys are preparing to enter upon military or naval careers. A boarding school as well as a day school, a large number of the Scots' boys come from country stations. The headmaster (Mr. J. Bee, M.A., M.Sc.) and the first assistant (Mr. J. C. Pope, M.A.) are both New Zealanders. Before taking his present appointment about two years ago, Mr. Bee was headmaster of the Presbyterian Ladies' College in Melbourne. The school is the property of the Presbyterian Church, and is controlled by a council which is elected by the Assembly, and of which Professor Macintyre has been chairman for the past eight years.

MURDER ON BARQUE.

CHILIAN SAILOR ACCUSED.

After conducting an inquiry yesterday into the death of Abel Huelcha, aged 30 years, a Chilian A.B. on the foreign registered barque Guaytecas, the City Coroner, Mr. H. S. Hawkins, returned a verdict of wilful murder against Antonio Nail. Nail, also a Chilian, 20 years of age, was committed for trial, bail being refused.

While the barque Guaytecas was lying at Darling Island on July 24 a noise was heard in the foc'stle about 8 o'clock in the morning. Some members of the crew entered and found deceased in a semi-conscious condition, bleeding from several wounds, with Nail standing near by, nobody else being there. The wounded seaman was conveyed by the Civil Ambulance to Sydney Hospital, where he died about 9.30 a.m. There were two cuts, and five stab wounds on his body, one of which had pierced the heart. Nail was arrested at Yarra Bay, South Randwick, on July 25, by Constable Frost, who took him to the Central Police Station and charged him with the murder of Huelcha. Here he made a statement through an interpreter. He said that after some words on the morning of July 24, the murdered man attacked him with a bottle. In the scuffle that ensued, this was broken, and Huelcha then had recourse to an iron marlin spike. With this he wounded his opponent on the left temple. After a second attempt had been made on him, Nail "stabbed him with my knife . . . which I had been using to cut my food with."

STATE WORKS.

MANAGER'S TROUBLES.

PERTH, Friday.

Replying to the statements made by Mr. Davies, late manager of the State Implement Works, the Minister for Lands, Mr. Angwin, declares that Mr. Davies's resignation was due to the fact that the materials for repairing his motor car were debited to the harvester account, and that certain accounts were not properly kept. Mr. Davies retorts that this is only a subterfuge. The real reason, he says, is that early in the year the Minister verbally instructed him to discharge three men, Briggs, White, and Anderson. Members of "our party," engaged at the works, freely stated that these men had to go because they were Liberal supporters. He did not obey the Minister, and received written instructions from him to do what had been ordered. He still refused to victimise these men, and in a letter to the Minister vigorously protested against such unfair treatment being meted out to three of the best men employed in the works. Then the Minister summoned him to his office, and told him that Cabinet had decided that the men must go. He, however, still refused to obey orders, and stood by the men.

PREFERENCE TO UNIONISTS.

This notification must be given at the earliest moment practicable, in order that the unionists notified by the secretary may have an opportunity to present themselves at the place and on the day and hour fixed. In addition to this notification to the secretary, the requirements of the department shall be notified for the information of the general public. This shall be done in any way best calculated to ensure publicity in the circumstances. In engaging labour preference of employment is to be given members of unions, other things being equal. A unionist for the above purpose is a person who is a member of a union at the time he presents himself for engagement, or makes application for employment, or registers his name. As the object of the policy of preference to unionists is to encourage the industrial community to become bona-fide members of recognised industrial organisations, employment must not be promised to persons upon the condition that they subsequently join the union. They must be members at the time they apply for employment. It is to be understood that the Government policy of preference to unionists is dependent upon the unions affording reasonable facilities for the admission of persons desirous of becoming members. Soldiers and sailors returned from active service are to be given preference.

FOR THE WOUNDED.

WENTWORTH, Friday.

The committee which has charge of the collection of public funds for providing motor ambulances from the district for presentation to the military authorities has decided to hand over three cars, fully equipped, as a start.

Mr. Ben Chaffey has offered his Avoca Homestead for use as a hospital, and the local hospital authorities are considering the practicability of a scheme suggested by Mr. Chaffey that provision should be made in the hospital for twenty or thirty wounded.

The Premier has received a communication from Mr. John Norton agreeing to give his residence, St. Helena, Torrington-road, Maroubra Bay, for the use of the wounded soldiers until six months after the conclusion of the war if necessary. The military authorities have accepted the offer.

SOLDIER HONOURED.

NOWRA, Friday.

Private Bertram, who was wounded at the Dardanelles, and returned by the Kyarra, arrived at Bomaderry Railway Station yesterday, and was met by Mr. Richard Shepherd (Mayor of Berry) and others, and formally welcomed home. He was then taken by motor car to Meroo meadow, where the Australia Day celebrations were proceeding, and there presented with an illuminated address. Pte. Bertram, as a result of wounds received in action, had to have his arm amputated below the elbow.

MILDER WEATHER.

Since 9 a.m. on Thursday the new disturbance, which has been operating over the western States, has advanced eastward to our western border districts, but so far only a little isolated rainfall has resulted in Riverina, and at 9 a.m. yesterday rain was falling at Nymagee.

The cloudy, showery conditions in central and south coastal districts were responsible for a little additional precipitation there, Raymond Terrace received 12 points, Port Stephens 10, Jervis Bay 10, Kiama 9, Parramatta 13, Sydney 8, Newcastle and Crookhaven each 5, Manning Heads, Bulahdelah, and Mt. Victoria each 4, and Katoomba 2.

In its easting, the disturbance caused rain in the various States it passed over. In Western Australia, during the 24 hours ended at 9 a.m. yesterday, light to moderate rain has fallen south of the tropic, except in the extreme south-east. In South Australia light falls generally, with some thunderstorms, were received south from William Creek, but scattered in parts; and in Victoria and Tasmania some widespread light amounts have occurred.

The present indications favour rain more or less generally in New South Wales within the next day or two, chiefly over the southern parts; mild temperatures, with northerly winds, becoming squally.

GIFT AIRSHIP.

HOBART, Friday.

The Legislative Assembly unanimously passed a resolution voting £1500 for the purchase of an airship, to be named Tasmania.

WOMEN JUSTICES.

ADELAIDE, Friday.

The first practical result of the policy adopted by the Government in the matter of women justices of the peace was witnessed at the Adelaide local court yesterday, when Mrs. Price, the wife of the late Premier, Mr. T. Price, occupied a seat on the bench with Mr. Commissioner Russell. At the conclusion of the proceedings his Honor referred to the fact that this was the first time in the history of the British Empire that a lady had occupied a position on the bench.

SPORTING.

THE TURF.

Horseracing at Warwick Farm, and pony and galloway racing at Ascot, provide outings for metropolitan racegoers this afternoon, while those who prefer to go further afield are catered for at Newcastle. Moonee Valley Racing Club is the rendezvous for Victorian sporting folk, and a race meeting; a patriotic race meeting takes place on the Victoria Park racecourse, Adelaide; Canning Park Racing Club's fixture provides an outing for Western Australian sportsmen; and the Albion Park Jockey Club hold a meeting at Brisbane.

The Rosehill Racing Club has provided 700 sovs prize-money for its August meeting on the 11th of that month, distributed over six races, the best endowed of which are the Hurdle Race, Maiden Handicap, Auburn Handicap, and Rosehill Handicap, of 125 sovs each, while each of the other events carries 100 sovs. Entries close with the secretary, Mr. Geo. W. S. Rowe, at 4 p.m. on Tuesday next.

Patrons of horseracing are promised a pleasant outing this afternoon at Warwick Farm. The track is reported to be good going, and the requirements of visitors in the catering and other departments have been given due attention by the management. The transit arrangements by rail include special trains, starting from the Central Railway Station at 11.15 (horses), 11.53 a.m., 12.6, 12.17, 12.40, 12.51, 12.56, and 1.8 p.m. The 11.53 a.m. train stops at Strathfield and Granville; the 12.6 and 12.17 p.m. at Granville, the 12.51 at Strathfield and Granville; the 12.56 at Fairfield; and the 1.8 at Strathfield and Granville. The sport commences at 2.10 p.m. with the Hurdle Race, in which the places may be occupied by Bidgee Bee, Compromise, and King Lucre; Lady Melton, Kolapore, and John O'T. may pass the post in order for the Farm Stakes; Ninfia, Best Scot, and Black Walk may get home as named in the Flying Handicap; Lady Clarence, Martinmas, and Lady Truda may divide the honours in the Juvenile Handicap; the situations in the Warwick Handicap may be filled by King Mostyn, Silver Steel, and Secrete; and Cool Air, Wynworth, and Claude Mimer may claim the attention of the judge at the finish of the Pace Welter.

In view of the coming spring meetings on each side of the Murray, the publication of "J. J. Miller's Sporting Pamphlet" comes opportunely, and the edition which is just to hand is fully up to the standard of its predecessors as regards turf information. This is the fortieth edition, and it includes the full performance of all horses engaged in the A.J.C. Metropolitan, the V.A.T.C. Caulfield Cup, and the V.R.C. Melbourne Cup, together with colour, sex, ages, and owners' names; and the work bears evidence of careful and accurate compilation. It also comprises the sales of thoroughbred yearlings, trotting and coursing records, as well as those of all branches of athletic sports. The "Sporting Pamphlet" should find a place in the library of every man who takes an interest in sport.

A pony and galloway race meeting, under the control of the Ascot Racing Club, takes place this afternoon, and, owing to the numerous entries which necessitates five of the seven races being run in divisions, the bill-of-fare is a lengthy one. The track is reported good going, and the transit arrangements include special trams to the racecourse gates, while the ordinary service to Botany will also be available. The first race is timed to start at 1.30 p.m., and the results may be anticipated as under:—Encourage Stakes: First Division, Gallipoli or Miss Joey; second division, Young Glenbrook or Sea Mistress. Nominations close with the secretary, Mr. J. Grisdale, at 8 p.m. on Monday next; and the weights for the opening day are promised on the 4th prox.

The next fixture of the Richmond Trotting Club is for the 5th prox., and the programme of six events carries prize-money amounting to 105 sovs. Entries will be received up to 8 p.m. on Tuesday next by the secretary, Mr. G. N. Kilduff, Richmond.

The Newcastle Jockey Club this afternoon holds a race meeting in connection with Australia Day, in aid of the Red Cross Fund for wounded soldiers, and the programme to be played out foreshadows highly interesting sport. Metropolitan visitors can reach the scene of action in good time by the trains leaving the Central Railway Station for the north at 6.40, 8.15, 8.35, and 9.20 a.m., and a special tram service runs between Newcastle and the racecourse. The return trip can be made by the train leaving Newcastle at 6.35 p.m.

VICTORIAN SPORTING NOTES.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The V.R.C. Committee to-day considered the appeal in the Battleship case. After Battleship had finished 5th in the Brush Steeplechase at Sandown Park on July 14, the stipendiary stewards decided to disqualify the trainer (J. M'Cullough), the rider (W. Burris), and the horse for twelve months, on the ground of dishonourable action. M'Cullough and Burris appealed against their disqualifications, and J. J. Haberfield appealed against the disqualification of his horse. The V.R.C. committee decided to uphold the three appeals.

The last registered race meeting of the season in the Melbourne district will take place to-day at Moonee Valley. During the season clubs that held meetings within a radius of 20 miles of Melbourne distributed in stakes £202,205, as against £195,677 last season. WAR PRECAUTIONS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

According to the original regulations issued under the War Precautions Act, competent naval and military authorities were authorised to require any person to furnish any information in his possession relative to any matter affecting the safety of the Commonwealth. In place of this provision, which has been repealed, a new regulation provides that, whilst similar powers may be exercised by the Minister as well as by competent authorities, they may be exercised in regard to corporations as well as persons. In addition, documents may be impounded and retained.

N'AVVIES' STRIKE.

BRISBANE, Friday.

Work has not yet been resumed by the sewerage workers employed by contractors, who went on strike on Sunday last. As a result work on the sinking of shafts and the digging of tunnels in the sewerage works throughout the city and suburbs is entirely at a standstill. About 130 employees at the Cabbage Tree Creek construction works, in the Ipswich district, recently went on strike owing to the refusal of the contractor to pay them the rates laid down by the Industrial Court.

TROUBLESOME NATIVES.

BRISBANE, Thursday.

News was brought from New Guinea to-day that natives in the territory recently acquired by Australia had been troublesome for some time past. On March 10 a white man travelling in a small schooner manned by four natives put into Cape Beechy, on the south coast of New Britain, where he and his crew were attacked by natives, all being murdered. A punitive expedition was despatched by the authorities, with the result that three of the murderers were shot. Several fights have occurred among the natives, and it has been found necessary to send punitive expeditions to quell the disturbances.

NEED FOR PRAYER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Permit me space in your valuable columns to draw the attention of the citizens of Sydney and other States, to the need for prayer, in these times of sore trial, when hundreds of our once happy homes are mourning the loss of loved ones. We are sending to the battle-front the pick of our young men of all ranks of profession, etc. We know there are many places of meeting for prayer, but how often have our business men and women of the city of Sydney met in times of drought and pleaded with God to send us the needful rain to allay the sufferings of man and beast in the drought-stricken parts of our land? Then how much more necessary is it to-day for us to plead with God for His blessing on our armies and navies, that they may be given success so that this terrible conflict now being fought may terminate in an honourable and lasting peace. I trust some steps may be taken to arrange for meetings for daily prayer to be held in the city of Sydney during lunch hours, say for half an hour.

THE GOVERNMENT AND SUGAR.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I am a suburban grocer, doing a small counter trade, because, being past the prime of my life, and in failing health, I must perform something within the compass of my physical powers to earn a crust. The Federal Government, having failed alike in trying to hobble the "sugar company" and cajole the wholesale grocers into conducting their business at a loss, have finally turned their attention to the retailers, many of whom, like myself, are either incapable of doing laborious work or are widows struggling to earn a pittance in a legitimate and honest way. The present invoice price of a bag of sugar is [illegible] 3d, plus 6d cartage. Now, Sir, any honest trader cannot weigh (in small lots) more than 69lb out of a 70lb bag. This gives at 3d per lb 17s 3d. It takes 6d to provide paper bags and string. Add to this 3 per cent. discount for cash in ten days and he may realise the princely sum of 6d net, if he does not object to let his labour and time count for nothing. But this, I take it, is regarded by Messrs. Hughes and Hall as the ethics of good government.

AUSTRALIA DAY.

THE SUBURBS.

Some of the earliest workers were in the suburbs, and not the least enthusiastic amongst the many collectors were those in the distant parts of the metropolitan area. At the waterside localities the response was magnificent and spontaneous. Ashore, from east to west, the same result was recorded—trams, motor cars, and vehicles of all descriptions were hailed with good returns. The bank staffs in the suburbs again helped the good cause by voluntarily working late, in order to arrive at finality in connection with the day's work. The Mayors of all the suburbs, aided by the aldermen and municipal staffs, the Red Cross branches, sporting bodies, and other organisations, all threw themselves readily into the work. The remotest parts were visited, and splendid results were achieved, although the workers in many cases were far removed from the stirring scenes in the city.

A feature of the celebration at Randwick was the planting of Australian trees in the Superior Public school playground by the Mayoress (Mrs. Clark), Mrs. David Storey, Mr. W. H. Kelly, M.P., Alderman Spring, the Rev. W. J. Cakebread, and Messrs. P. Hogan and E. J. Birkford, and other residents. A number of choruses were sung by the children, and the local band rendered selections. In a stirring speech Mr. Kelly, M.P., referred to Australian courage and loyalty.

The Ashfield district, which includes Summer Hill, Haberfield, and part of Croydon, was splendidly organised. The vicinity of the Ashfield Station was a series of street shops, where all sorts of goods were sold, including meat, fish, vegetables, groceries, ferns, and flowers, and patriotic souvenirs. The various stalls were decorated, golden wattle predominating. It is estimated that Ashfield contributions will reach £1500.

At Summer Hill at 1 p.m. addresses were given by the Mayor (Alderman J. H. Hammond), Mr. W. E. V. Robson, M.L.A., and Canon Vaughan.

The Mayor of Enfield (Alderman Ford) made a special appeal for Australia Day. It is expected that over £200 will be subscribed.

At Petersham Park sports, which included a costume baseball match, were carried out. The pupils of the three district Public schools gave an attractive combined display. At night at the Town Hall a successful patriotic concert materially swelled the local collections. An art union was carried out. There were 39 prizes, the chief one being a racing pony. To-night a ball will be held in the Town Hall.

At 1 p.m. the Mayor of Concord (Alderman C. Savage) presided at a gathering at the Town Hall. The King's health was honoured. It is anticipated that Concord will raise about £500.

In the main street of Burwood and at the railway station there were numerous stalls, which were very well patronised by the residents. Collectors were all over the suburbs with most satisfactory results. During the first four days of the week close on £2000 was received. It is hoped to supplement this sum with another £1000.

The populous district of Canterbury is aiming at a £700 collection. At a procession held in Campsie over £100 was taken. There are 120 collectors in the district. Sales of various kinds were conducted. A ball at the Canterbury Town Hall realised a profit of about £30. The Mayor (Alderman J. Wilson) presided over the local arrangements.

Good results are looked for from Newtown. The committee, presided over by the Mayor (Ald. Frank Bamfield) set out to raise £3000. The Newtown-road, the Town Hall, and the railway bridge were decorated with bunting. Auction sales of various gifts were successfully carried out. The street collections at 10 o'clock last night had reached the sum of £560, and the total amount received by the suburb from all sources for the fund now stands at £2358 19s.

At the Enmore Public School a bazaar was conducted. Mrs. A. H. Griffith opened it officially.

St. Peters is doing well for the fund. A Venetian Carnival held on the Cook's River resulted in £600 being collected.

The Marrickville residents started with about £800 in hand. An art union with £100 worth of prizes is going off well. To-day a procession, with tableaux, will parade the principal streets.

The various efforts of the Thornleigh and Pennant Hills district to date have realised the sum of £260 14s 2d. A flag sold by auction on Thursday night realised £22 10s.

Balmain was divided into 20 sections, for which over 200 boxes and 200 badges were requisitioned. The appeal was magnificently responded to, and the day's collections should amount to a considerable sum. At Drummoyne a vigorous collection campaign was started at an early hour, various auction sales were held, and the funds should benefit to a considerable extent. At Glebe great activity was displayed throughout the day, and a large amount was collected. At Annandale the committee worked indefatigably, the appeals for the wounded soldiers being most liberally responded to. There was an equally gratifying response at Leichhardt. The residents of Five Dock and Abbotsford worked with much enthusiasm, and a large sum was collected.

At Redfern up to a late hour last night the return showed £1200 in hand. The procession of the railway and tramway employees was of great interest. Mrs. Gorton presented some valuable articles to the committee, and the principal monetary supporters are Alderman Dearin, £100, and Mr. Maxwell Porter, £100. A feature of this district's effort is the splendid response to the call for funds by the Syrian residents of the district.

At Mascot the street collections, together with the returns from the social held at the Town Hall in the evening, are expected to reach £500. The Botany collectors will not be behind hand, and the collections and sales by auction, and revenue from other sources, should add about £500 to the grand total.

At the top of William-street Mrs. Anthony Hordern and Mrs. Arthur Dowling, with 32 young ladies to assist them, conducted a sale and tea room. Their supply of general produce was quite inadequate, but when that failed the stallholders were reinforced with fancy goods and sweets, from which a magnificent return was forthcoming. Mrs. Hordern and Miss Dowling were in control until a late hour.

North Sydney's chief effort was the fete at the Public school, which was generously supported. At Milson's Point the workers had a busy time throughout the day, and well into the night, until the prettily decorated stall on the ferry wharf was cleared of its stock of salable articles. On the pontoon and along the railway platforms flags and flowers gave a festive appearance to the surroundings.

Residents of Crow's Nest had set themselves the task of making the day a notable one in their district, and it must be said that they succeeded. Decorations were generously provided, and activity marked everything done. The local fund is expected to reach £1200. Stalls for the sale of articles provided by the workers were erected at prominent spots, and last night a large crowd gathered at the Queen's Picture Theatre, where the entertainment was in aid of the fund.

The organisation in the Willoughby municipality was of the best, everyone working enthusiastically. It was a gala day at Chatswood Public School, where a sale of novelties and useful articles was held, and a display of school work and drill given. At the Willoughby Picture Theatre the local school held a bazaar which attracted a large crowd. Last night there was a show at the Arcadia Picture Theatre. At the Town Hall a concert was given under the direction of Mr. Hugo Duff.

At Mosman the main effort had been made during the previous days, when a bazaar was held at the local Public school. So well was this supported that the proceeds were over £700. Last night the chief attraction was the entertainment at the Australia Theatre.

At the Warringa Hall, Neutral Bay, a concert was held, and during the interval a number of articles was sold by auction.

Along the railway line to Hornsby there were the same signs of enthusiasm in the course of the day.

The committee at Paddington had the assistance of 200 workers, and, as the district was worked in sections, not many of the residents escaped the appeal of the boxes. Waverley collectors had several nicely-decorated stalls, and they also worked assiduously to do their share in augmenting the fund. Vaucluse was another suburb which was well searched by a large band of collectors in the streets. House-to-house visits were also made.

ENTERTAINMENTS.

The Cafe Chantant established for the day at Richardson and Wrench's new premises in Pitt-street was exceptionally well patronised, and Mrs. Lion, the organiser, was very pleased with the takings, which were derived from the sales of goods, auctions, and raffles. Good business was done with lunches, and many intending customers could not be accommodated. Mrs. Lion was assisted by Mesdames Lichtner and Welch in attending to the fancy work stall, Miss Barnett and Miss Lichtner superintended the lunch-room, while other ladies who assisted were Mrs. C. Murnin and Mrs. Rogalsky (who controlled a very profitable spinning jenny), Mrs. L. W. Cohen, and Misses Gilbert, Nelson, Isaacs, and Harte. It is expected that the fund will benefit to the extent of £110.

Tivoli artists gave their services free on Australia Day. Early in the morning a complete stage was fitted up at the foot of the steps leading to the dress circle, in Castlereagh-street, and here was installed the full Tivoli orchestra. By 11 o'clock a huge crowd had collected, and each of the items given was enthusiastically applauded, several of the popular favourites being forced to return. The programme included Miss Dora Sawyer, Mr. Walter Weyman, Miss Nella Webb, The Excellors, Miss Estelle Rose, Mr. Gick Watson, Crouch and Welsh, and Mr. Donald Cornwallis. A similar open-air programme was presented during the afternoon, with the inclusion of Mr. Keats and Mr. Armstrong, from the National Theatre.

The members of the A.V.A. Association gave a very successful concert in the Protestant Hall last night before a large audience. This was one of four shows organised by Mr. P. Clarence, secretary of the association. Altogether about 80 artists, representative of the best Sydney talent, gave their services free.

At the Lyceum Theatre a long programme was submitted during the day, and up to 9.30 in the evening, under the direction of Mr. Frederick Ward. Those appearing included Mrs. Ross B. Simpson, Miss Frances Ross, Messrs. Claude Bantock, Edmund Sherras, Elton Black, H. R. Roberts, C. W. Throsby, Walter Baker, Roy Redgrave, Tom Dawson, Harry Leston, and Frederick Ward. The house was thronged the whole day, and a substantial amount was realised.

The proceeds at West's Glaciarium and Olympia Theatres were devoted to the fund. There were excellent houses, and here again good results were obtained.

The American Picture Palace had good audiences, and late last night it was stated that a substantial donation would be the result.

PUBLIC SERVICE CONCERT.

Under the conductorship of Mr. E. A. Mowle, the Public Service Association of New South Wales celebrated Australia Day by a concert in the Conservatorium of Music last night. For the programme only Australian composers, or composers resident in Sydney, were drawn upon. In this regard the concert may be commended as a step in the direction of recognising the work of local musicians. Commanding admiration on its merits as beautiful music the "Magnificat" of Mr. Ernest Truman was the most interesting performance. This composition is a setting of the stately Latin verse for chorus and orchestra, with solos for soprano, contralto, tenor, baritone, and bass. The bass solo, "Suscepit Israel," was artistically sung by Mr. W. Reginald Goodl. During the applause after the final chorus the composer walked from the body of the hall and, on the platform, bowed his acknowledgments of the very cordial and gratifying reception. Mr. Truman was also well represented in two movements from his "Vie Australienne" Fantasia, for pianoforte and orchestra. Miss Gertrude Palmer, as the pianist, had a full measure of success. The Fantasia is untainted by the affectations of so-called "modernism." The Trio in F sharp minor, by Mr. Frank Hutchens, in which the composer (as pianist) was associated with Miss Dorothy Curtis (violin) and Miss Florence Brown ('cello), deserved the attention it received, and the applause which followed.

Mr. Alfred Hill's new composition for chorus and orchestra, "A Song of Belgium," was quite in keeping with the sentimental spirit of the occasion—a comment which covers Mr. Christian Helleman's new setting in the classic ballad form of Mrs. Heman's verse. Accompanied by the composer, Mr. Arthur Appleby earned his recall by a fine interpretation of the ballad. Miss Agnes Caspers had three of her clever songs, "Morn," "Noon," and "Evening," charmingly sung by her sister, Miss Ella Caspers, with pianoforte and string trio accompaniments. The accomplished contralto was enthusiastically applauded. Among the other features of an over-loaded programme were the prologue and final chorus of Mr. W. Arundel Orchard's "Uller the Bowman" (the whole composition has been performed by the Royal Sydney Liedertafel); a concert overture by Mr. Joseph Bradley, the conductor of the Royal Sydney Philharmonic Society; two movements of Mr. Alfred Hill's violin and pianoforte Sonata in A minor (Mr. Frank Mowat Carter and Mr. Frank Hutchens); Mr. Arnold Mote's "Lullaby," part song; Miss Mirrie Solomon's rhapsody for pianoforte and orchestra (the composer as pianist), and songs by Mr. Rex de Cairos Rego and Mr. Alfred Shea.

The Premier (Mr. Holman) and the Minister for Public Instruction (Mr. Griffith) attended the concert, the proceeds of which are to go to the Australian Wounded Soldiers' Fund.

COMBINED THEATRICAL MATINEE.

BAZAAR SALES ABOUT £400.

Crowds were outside Her Majesty's Theatre and crowds within at the great Australia Day matinee given by the combined theatrical managements of the city, and the artists enlisted under their banner. The vestibule of the big play house, where Mrs. Hugh J. Ward headed a group of energetic ladies, which included Mmes. E. J. Tait, Geo. L. Goodman, and John Leete, in selling goods, flowers, sweets, and programmes, resembled a country fair, and early in the afternoon a black pig squealed his horrified farewells to an uproarious crowd as the auctioneer, who held it in his arms, bawled "Gone!"

This bazaar and fair was densely thronged until after 10 at night, when Mr. Rock Phillips, the theatrical property master and inventor, displayed unsuspected gifts as an auctioneer (assisted by Mr. Fred. Young) to a mob of generous folk on the tramline. One of his feats consisted in coaxing a pretty girl who happened to be near the rostrum, to sell a kiss in the cause of charity. The damsel fell at £1, and the winner paid up at once with the cry "Put 'em up again," whilst the crowd roared with delight. Thereupon another subscriber offered 10s to see her kiss a wounded trooper from Gallipoli, whose bashful acceptance of the chaste salute elicited ringing cheers. It was all a piece of honest-hearted fun; and there were more cheers for the young lady when she slipped out of sight. Rock Phillips' second feat, having sent for a drink, was to sell it in sips for 10s, 5s, 2s, and 1s, and there was still a little left for himself. As he remarked before his next sale, "No one can accuse me of having a drop too much."

The auditorium was gaily decorated with the black, red, and yellow of Belgium, with the British flags overhead, apart from which the most serious patriotic note was sounded by Mr. G. S. Titheradge (president of the Australian Actors' Association) in his splendidly declamatory and touching delivery of Gilder's poem, "Australia Day." The lines "The Empire calls! Australia hears the call," with its later words "and hearing tarries not," spoke trumpet-tongued to the audience. A copy of the poem was presented to his Excellency the Governor, Sir Gerald Strickland, by Miss Corona Gilder during the afternoon. Other appeals were made by Mr. John Ralston in the song "Dardanelles" and in the "Tipperary" march-song with chorus, both taking place at Mena camp, with the Sphinx and the pyramids and the blue sky and waving palms of Egypt as a background, and hospital nurses and men in khaki to give realism to the scene. After 6 o'clock, 4½ hours from the start, the audience still had enough strength left to cheer Miss Florence Young for the "My Hero" valse-song, and the soprano was then supported by the lads and lasses of the yacht Mariposa in "The Flag that Never Comes Down" before the National Anthem wound up affairs in loyal fashion.

The Mena Camp items brought forward those clever whirlwind dancers, the Two Macleans (originally known as the Australian Dartos), and cordial welcomes were extended to Misses Ethel Cadman and Maggie Dickenson, Messrs. Phil Smith, Chas. Boucher, and Derek Hudson. The set pieces brought in "Under Two Flags" (act III.) by Ethel Buckley and George Marlow's Adelphi Company; the second act of "Charley's Aunt," by the George Willoughby Company; the fourth act of "Sunday," by Muriel Starr, Chas. Millward, and the Criterion Company; and the laughable sketch, "Judged by Appearances," by Henry V. Ford and members of Beaumont Smith and Hoskins' "Glad Eye" Company. The Tivoli company was represented by Sydney Jarvis and Virginia Dare, and also by Nella Webb, who successfully introduced a patriotic song written for her and for the occasion, entitled, "Mother o' Men;" and the National Amphitheatre by Miss Ray de Vere. There was an excellent contribution by the Royal Strollers from the Palace Theatre; and Louise Mack held the audience for ten minutes with personal reminiscences of the siege of Antwerp. Quite a crowd of other people assisted one way and another.

Mr. Walter Bentley came before the footlights with Mrs. Hugh J. Ward for the first auction sale—a large doll, which fell to Mrs. James Stewart for £15 15s. This was towards the middle of the afternoon, and proved the highest bid of the matinee.

Mr. Lincoln Plumer, coming forward near 6 o'clock, almost exhausted his stock of electrical energy in his efforts to rouse a tired house. A magnificent Australian flag of silk held aloft by Mr. C. B. Westmacott was sold for £15. A writing-stand, the gift of Nurse Anderson, was bought by Mr. Smith for £5; a collie pup, declared the gift of Muriel Starr, was sold to Mr. Fisher for £11; the original drawing of Norman Lindsay's "Now Your Part Begins," was secured by the same purchaser for £5; Dr. Bell bid £10 straight out for the portrait of Corporal Jacka, Australia's first V.C., amidst wild cheering. The Red Cross badge worn by Louise Mack (Mrs. Creed) in Antwerp was handed by that lady to Mr. Plumer, who announced it as "the real Peruvian bark," and sold it to Mr. Arthur Rickard for £10. A picture of the wrecked Emden, taken from the deck of H.M.A.S. Sydney, fetched £2 2s. A magnificent lion's skin, with head, reserved at 100 guineas, was not bid for, nor was there any demand for national flags or a dummy life-size soldier in khaki. Mr. Forsyth bid £10 for a case of champagne, tersely referred to by the irrepressible auctioneer as "Bubbles;" and the auction sale was then stopped. The orchestra generously donated £13 10s to the fund. The use of the theatre having been granted (with much else) by J. C. Williamson, Ltd., Mr. Plumer called for "three cheers for Hugh J. Ward," which were given with enthusiasm.

The exact returns are not yet available. Messrs. E. J. Tait (general manager), George Matheson (hon. business manager), Robert Beeston (hon. treasurer), and Chas. B. Westmacott state that nearly £900 was represented by the house, and that it is known that the vestibule and other sales will exceed £400. This splendid result exceeded all expectation.

THE ALLIES' ANTHEMS.

AT ST. ANDREW'S CATHEDRAL.

Australia Day was celebrated in a specially appropriate manner at St. Andrew's Cathedral. An intercession service, held at 1 o'clock, was largely attended. The Rev. E. C. Claydon, of Concord, in the course of an address, said people were too apt, like Gideon of old, to ask, "If God be for us, why, then, is all this befallen us?" But in His own time God would send relief. Our leaders in the old country were men upon whom the gravest responsibility rested, and their names were sufficient guarantee that all would be well. Referring to the coming recruiting campaign, the Rev. Mr. Claydon said he was sure that when it was all over it would be found that the call had been so fully answered as to dissipate all thoughts of making service compulsory.

After the intercessory service the choir assembled in the Cathedral grounds fronting George-street and sang "Advance, Australia Fair," and the Allies' Anthems under the direction of the Precentor, the Rev. E. N. Wilton, with Mr. J. Massey at the piano. A large gathering assembled to listen to the singing. The proceedings concluded with the National Anthem, and the waving of flags.

AT NEWCASTLE.

NEWCASTLE, Friday.

The call to raise funds for the returned wounded Australians has been taken up enthusiastically in this city. An eight-days' campaign ends to-night. The response throughout the week has been good, but the crowning effort was made to-day, and met with liberal giving from all sides.

The main attractions were a procession through the city. At midday between 400 and 500 school children assembled at the corner of Bolton and Hunter streets, and sang patriotic songs, while collectors were busy among the audience. The Operatic Society sang in various parts of the city. Sports were held in the suburbs, and all were well patronised. During the day several auction sales took place in the city. At one sale £50 was given for a bale of wool, and £25 for other articles.

Up to 10.45 o'clock to-night the Newcastle Fund amounted to £10,000, and there is at least another £10,000 in sight.

Captain Phillips, of the R.M.S. Makura, states that the following sums were subscribed for the Australia Day Fund by passengers on the voyage from Auckland to Sydney:—Net proceeds of "Calcutta sweep," £48 5s; amount donated by owners of tickets sold, £16 15s; proceeds of raffle, £16 15s; donation by winner of sweep, Mr. E. E. Clarke, £28 5s; proceeds of auction sale and private donations, £94 0s 6d. Total, £204 0s 6d.

Mrs. C. G. Heydon deposited £100 for the fund as an instalment on proceeds derived from the sale of her book of poems.

Mr. O. W. Brain, Electrical Engineer for New South Wales Government Railways and Tramways, delivered an address to the members of his staff at Ultimo Power-house on the occasion of the unfurling of the Australian flag at 1 p.m. The power-house staff forwarded £100 to the Australia Day committee.

An auction of goods at an Australian Day function held by the Manly Bowling Club on Thursday night resulted in £76 6s being raised.

Eastwood and Dundas districts are making a special effort to-day on behalf of the "Australia Day" funds. A strong and influential committee of ladies and gentlemen has been working assiduously, and hopes to add considerably to the amount now in hand. A procession has been arranged in which the militia and rifle club will take part. Sports and other celebrations will be held in the park during the day, and a patriotic concert at the School of Arts in the evening.

At a meeting of members of the Granville Electorate Cottage Hospital, Auburn, it was decided, on the motion of Mr. J. Thurston, seconded by Mr. T. Simpson, to offer to the defence authorities the hospital for the use of the Australian wounded soldiers.

A pen-painted table centre and water-colour painting, both painted and given by Mrs. Laurence, of Eumalga, May-street, Marrickville, were raffled, and realised £7.

A carnival is to be held at Rushcutter Bay Oval this afternoon and evening, in aid of the funds. An interesting programme has been arranged.

At an auction sale held by the Sussex-street committee yesterday, over £100 was received, bringing the total contribution up to £1000.

A juvenile matinee ball is to be held at the Paddington Town Hall on August 7 in aid of the wounded soldiers.

IN THE COUNTRY.

The Australia Day celebrations were as enthusiastic in the country as in the city. Every town and every district is strongly represented at the front, and so the movement to provide for the wounded men appealed strongly to country people and they responded to the call in a remarkable manner.

For weeks past they have been preparing for the day. Every town was thoroughly organised, and large amounts of money were raised by preliminary gatherings. With very few exceptions, Australia Day was celebrated in the country towns by processions, which appealed strongly to the military enthusiasm of the people, and depicted in a telling manner the gallant deeds of the Australian troops at the front. These processions were followed by patriotic demonstrations, street collections, sports meetings, bazaars, concerts, and any other means by which the funds could be augmented. In some cases the celebrations have been spread over two and three days, and large sums have been secured in all centres. In a few instances it was found impossible to celebrate the day in unison with the other parts of the State. In those cases the people are continuing to work enthusiastically, and the remarkable results achieved yesterday will lead them to redouble their efforts. The results to hand so far are appended:—

BARRABA.—Australia Day was celebrated yesterday with a monster procession. The total proceeds will amount to over £3000.

BINGARA.—A rough estimate of the collections to date is £1500.

BLACKHEATH.—Favoured with fine weather Australia Day was celebrated successfully here. During the morning a well-arranged procession passed through the principal streets, collecting boxes being well in evidence. So far a good sum has been realised.

BOMBALA.—The Australia Day Fund to noon on Friday totalled £632. It is expected that over £700 will be raised before the day is over.

BROKEN HILL.—The various public schools in Broken Hill held displays, fairs, concerts, etc., yesterday in connection with Australia Day, but rain fell at intervals and partially spoiled the arrangements. The city's big demonstration will take place to-day.

BOWRAL.—Collections are expected to reach £600.

BUNGENDORE.—The committee expects to realise £1000 with donations.

BUNDANOON.—Up to the present £250 has been collected for Australia Day.

CAMPBELLTOWN.—Australia Day collections have reached £525.

COBARGO.—Yesterday's subscriptions were £175. The total is expected to reach over £400.

COOMA.—Friday was a public holiday in Cooma. The day was celebrated by a procession. A bazaar was held in the School of Arts. To date £1260 are in hand. It is expected that £1500 will be secured.

COOTAMUNDRA.—Australia Day yesterday was celebrated with great enthusiasm. There is over £1000 already in hand in cash. The net result is expected to be well over £1500.

COWRA.—Australia Day was celebrated by a procession and sports meeting. It is expected that £5000 will be realised.

DUBBO.—Australia Day will not be held till August 25, but already there is nearly £3000 in hand, and over £5000 is assured.

GERRINGONG.—Australia Day collections realised over £300.

GOSFORD.—The sales and collections reached £500.

GOULBURN.—Friday's procession was the finest yet witnessed here. It is anticipated that £4000 will be reached.

GRENFELL.—Australia Day was specially well organised. There was a demonstration and procession on Friday. The collections amounted to over £3000.

TO-DAY'S DISPLAY.

BY THE CHILDREN.

Over ten thousand boys and girls will assemble at the Sydney Cricket Ground this afternoon to form a living Red Cross on a White Australia. The entries have so far exceeded the anticipation of the Public Schools' Amateur Athletic Association that it was found not practicable to carry out the programme originally arranged in view of the large number of pupils taking part. It has been decided, therefore, to begin the pageant at 1.30 o'clock, and this will have the added advantage of allowing football enthusiasts to see the children's demonstration before going to the match on the adjoining Sports Ground. The Governor and Lady Edeline Strickland will be present.

THE MESSIAH.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—At this period when all hearts are being turned towards our wounded heroes, and help for defenders of hearth and home is sought for, I would like to see a movement made to approach the Royal Sydney Philharmonic Society to render that immortal work of Handel, "The Messiah." Surely the text of such a work would induce an immense audience to hear the oratorio.

Besides the result of such an appeal, I feel confident that the time is a most opportune one; and both results and effects engendered by this most popular and loved work would bring the hearers into one united and sympathetic body. Thanking you kindly for publicity.

A GERMAN BASE IN JAVA.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In your issue of to-day there is a paragraph relating to information received from America that the Germans are arranging to establish a secret base in Java, from which attacks may be made on British, and therefore Australian, ships in the Malayan seas.

I do not think there is any ground for such a report, as the Netherlands India has quite enough naval power to prevent it, whilst the Germans would hesitate to enter on such hostile action against Holland, whose neutrality it is anxious to preserve.

In 1902, and probably at previous times, there was an existing danger of the establishment of such a naval station in those seas. In that year it came to my knowledge that Germany was endeavouring to obtain either by purchase or otherwise the eastern end of the island of Timor, a possession of the Portuguese, which has never during their first possession early in the 16th century, been of much, if any, value to them.

I accordingly wrote to his Excellency Sir Harry Rawson, then Governor of New South Wales, pointing out the importance to the Empire, and especially to Australia, that this territory should not pass out of the possession of the Portuguese except to Great Britain. At "Delly," the capital, ships could lie safely at anchor during the South-east monsoon from the latter end of March to the beginning of November, without any large expenditure for harbour works. A considerable outlay would make it equally safe during the north-west monsoon prevailing during the rest of the year.

This anchorage is less than 400 miles from Port Darwin, and it commands Australian trade routes to Japan, China, and Singapore, and would, if the Germans had held it, have enabled them to promptly destroy the cables to Europe via Java. The German cruisers did succeed in destroying the cable stations at Fanning Island and the Cocos Islands.

Thursday Island would have been easily attacked, and the trade from Australia to the north and east rendered difficult, if not impossible.

Sir H. Rawson considered my communication so important that he asked for several copies, to enable him to send originals to the Admiralty, the Foreign Office, and the Colonial Office, in addition to that he forwarded officially to the Governor-General. Lord Tennyson, who then held that post, asked for another copy, that he might place it among his private papers, as he had forwarded the original sent to him officially to the imperial Government.

This correspondence was published in the Sydney newspapers on January 11, 1905, attention having then been called to the subject by the report of Mr. Fitzpatrick, M.L.A., relating to rumours he had heard when in Malaya as to German aspirations in this direction.

The correspondence appears to have had good effect, as I was informed by Mr. Chamberlain, then Secretary of State for the Colonies, in a letter dated April 6, 1903, "That the Portuguese would not part with this territory."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—If Archdeacon Boyce had more carefully studied the position regarding the alleged increase in the New South Wales drink bill for 1914 he might have saved himself the distress he speaks of in your issue of the 17th instant, wherein he discusses the probable retrogression of the ethical conditions of the community through the increasing use of alcoholic beverages. The figures quoted by Archdeacon Boyce, showing that the amount paid by the people, per head per annum, for alcoholic liquors in 1914 exceeded that paid in 1913 by 3s 9d per head, is not a true index of the position. It is well known that in expectation of an increase in the Customs and excise duties on spirits large clearances were made from bond between July and November last year. This is obvious by the fact that from January to June (inclusive) the quantity of whisky cleared was 446,908 gallons; while that from July to December was 636,702 gallons, an increase during the last six months of the year of 189,794 gallons. Of brandy, there was an increase in clearances of 24,542 gallons, and of rum 20,884 gallons. It is absurd to suppose that the people suddenly decided to drink more alcoholic liquor when the war broke out. There were many reasons why merchants and hotelkeepers should make special efforts to increase their stocks. The expected increase in customs and excise duties and the uncertainty of obtaining subsequent supplies owing to the disorganisation of shipping through the war were, of course, primary causes. There was certainly not time for these extra quantities of liquor to be consumed before the end of the year. No doubt a large proportion of the extra spirits so acquired has not yet gone into consumption. It is quite possible that when Archdeacon Boyce makes up his drink bill for 1915 he will find that there has been a falling off in the quantity consumed by the people this year compared with that of 1914; but in those circumstances no sane person would argue that the people had become more temperate.

Archdeacon Boyce draws a comparison in the amounts expended per head of the population in the United Kingdom and Australia. In Victoria he says the drink bill last year was £4 4s 4d per head, showing an increase of 8s 2d per head, "as though war meant drink." This is equally irrelevant with his previous statements. The apparent increase in Victoria is due to the same causes which governed the position in New South Wales, and has no bearing on the temperate habits of the people. In the United Kingdom (continues the Archdeacon) the drink bill per head is £3 10s 10d. As a matter of fact, in 1913 it was £3 12s 5d. Here, again, the reverend Archdeacon is guilty of fallacious reasoning. Beer is the main alcoholic beverage consumed in Great Britain, being 27.30 gallons per head per annum in 1913. In New South Wales, according to the figures given by Archdeacon Boyce, the consumption is 13 gallons, a little less than one-half. But in the United Kingdom the price of beer for the purpose of calculating the drink bill, is reckoned at 1s 8d per gallon; while the Archdeacon bases his figures on 2s 2d per gallon.

As regards spirits, Archdeacon Boyce puts the cost down in our drink bill at 37s per gallon. In the United Kingdom it is calculated at 31s 6d proof gallon. It is thus seen that if the people of Great Britain had to pay the same price for alcoholic beverages that we pay in New South Wales, they, with the heavier consumption, would have a drink bill in excess of ours by about 10s per head. The correct method to adopt in comparing the consumption of liquor in various countries is to take the actual quantities consumed, and not the value, which varies in different places.

The Archdeacon says that the United States usually shows a far lower consumption than the United Kingdom. This is a question. They certainly drink less beer, but, on the other hand, far more spirits per capita. There is no doubt, however, that the consumption of liquor in the United States is considerably greater than in New South Wales.

The Archdeacon said "that the revenue from drink went to the Commonwealth, and left the State to bear the burden consequent on the ravages of drink." When it is considered that the Customs and Excise duties on alcoholic liquor amount to about 20s per head of the population, and that the Commonwealth returns only 25s per capita to the State, it would be interesting to know what would take place were the liquor business abolished.

There is one outstanding fact—that New South Wales, with regard to the consumption of alcoholic liquor, compares most favourably with other countries from which statistics are obtainable.

THE FEDERAL REFERENDUMS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—After reading your timely article in to-day's issue about the cost of the Referendums, and the information that the Federal Government propose to spend many thousands of pounds in printing and posting pamphlets to every individual elector, I think it behoves every person in the Commonwealth to return the pamphlets unopened to the Prime Minister, as a firm and dignified protest against the callousness of the Federal Labour party in bringing forward party measures at such a time of national peril. Local committees, including electors of all shades of political belief, could readily be formed throughout the country to assist in carrying out this suggestion. The return of the pamphlets in millions would prepare the Federal Government for the inevitable third defeat of their proposals.

I am, etc.,
Goulburn. BRITISHER.

RECRUITING.

ONLY ONE HUNDRED.

POOR MUSTER FOR AUSTRALIA DAY.

Only 100 recruits went to Victoria Barracks to offer their services yesterday.

In view of the fact that all-day recruiting has been in vogue for some time, the response by recruits on Australia Day was disappointing.

The conclusion of Australia Day makes this a fitting moment for a final appeal for recruits throughout the country. We are approaching the anniversary of the outbreak of war. The struggle is at its height. The Empire needs more men in the fighting line. Australians are nobly answering the call. But the Empire's appeal is still for "men, and more men."

Let that appeal be heard from one end of the State to the other during the coming week, and a record response shown. Enlist! and strengthen the arm of your comrades already in the trenches at Gallipoli.

Reports from country associations received by the Premier up to noon yesterday showed that a further 159 men had been enlisted. This brings the total enlistments by the associations to date to 2325. The reports also contain the names of 235 additional men, who undertake to enlist at an early date. These names increase the total of prospective recruits to 8462.

The new names are supplied by the following centres, thus:—Mullumbimby 40, Armidale 9, Cudgeon 14, Bingara 6, Millthorpe 9, Murwillumbah 5, Woodburn 31, Casino 3, Grafton 19, Katoomba 53, Wilcannia 5, Merrylands 6, Burrinjuck 30, Tarcutta 1, Stuart Town 4. Total, 235.

The Premier is advised that, as the result of the recent demonstration made by the group of centres comprising Hornsby, Thornleigh, Pennant Hills, and Beecroft, 25 recruits are to be despatched to camp on August 12.

The platform campaign to stimulate recruiting in New South Wales will open in the Exhibition-building to-night. The State Governor will preside, and each speaker will occupy only 10 minutes. The Governor will open the meeting, and will be followed by the Chief Justice, the Archbishops of Sydney, Senator Gardiner (Assistant Minister for Defence), the Premier, Mr. Wade, Mr. Joseph Cook, Sir Joseph Carruthers, Mr. A. B. Piddington (Chief Interstate Commissioner), Colonel E. T. Wallack, C.B., and Professor Irvine.

It has been arranged that the Premier and Mr. Wade will first of all address the gathering at the Stadium at 8 o'clock. They will then proceed to the Exhibition-building. Mr. J. Ralston, of the J. C. Williamson Company, will sing "Heroes of the Dardanelles." The other speakers will then follow, and finally will come the great appeal for recruits.

Meetings will be held simultaneously at Balmain, Leichhardt, Newtown Bridge, Paddington, North Sydney, Alexandria, and Parramatta. These are to be followed by numerous meetings throughout the metropolis next week. The arrangements for the metropolitan meetings next week are in the hands of Mr. Percy Hunter.

Australia Day was commemorated by the staff of Ernest Bosch, Martin-place, on the occasion of two of their members—Messrs. G. Smith and F. Rugg—leaving for the front. Their fellow employees presented each with a wristlet watch. Captain Bosch congratulated them on their patriotism, and informed them that their positions would be awaiting them when they returned from active service.

Messrs. Frank, Keith, and Broughton Luscombe, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Luscombe, of Brinton, Petersham-road, Marrickville, have joined the colours. Two are under age. Mr. and Mrs. Luscombe have four sons, the remaining one being a child.

The Mayor of Balmain, at the request of the Premier (Mr. Holman), has convened a recruiting meeting at the local Town Hall for this evening.

Mr. C. C. Miller, accountant at the Dunedoo Branch of the N.S.W. Bank, was presented with a smoker's outfit on the eve of his departure for Liverpool camp.

At a meeting of the Alstonville Recruiting Association very strong comments were passed on the Government's scheme of allowing the police 10s per head for all recruits secured. All the district police have indignantly refused to accept this bonus, which is seriously affecting recruiting in this district.

Messrs. P. Baker, A. Brown, J. Shears, and S. Peisley, who have volunteered for the front, were each presented with a wristless watch by the residents of Pambula.

The friends of Corporal Alan H. Reid, who is with the Australian Div. Ammunition Park in France, were entertained in honour of his birthday at his home, Rothiemay, Warrawee, on Saturday. This took the form of a gift afternoon of socks and handkerchiefs for the soldiers of the Div. Ammunition Park under Colonel Tunbridge. Altogether 58 pairs of socks and 109 handkerchiefs were collected.

Mr. A. R. Sheath, who was tendered a farewell by his employer and fellow employees, prior to going into camp, was for eight years connected with the firm of John McLean, Leichhardt, as ledgerkeeper. Mr. John McLean presented Mr. Sheath with a wristlet watch set with radium dial, on behalf of himself and fellow employees, also with a wallet from Mrs. J. McLean, and a cigar-case from Mr. and Mrs. D. McLean. Mr. John McLean also presented Mr. Sheath with a cheque, and promised to keep his position open for him. The firm has decided to make up the difference between civil and military pay of all employees who enlist.

Mr. Norman Stokes, who is leaving for the front, was on Thursday night presented with a wristlet watch by his fellow-employees of the American Shoe Company.

At the offices of Toohey's, Ltd., Standard Brewery, a presentation was made to Private H. E. Nicholson by his colleagues of the office staff of a silver wristlet watch and silver pencil case. The presentation was made by Mr. G. G. Rae, accountant, in the absence of the general manager.

A presentation was recently made to Mr. J. Gribble, who has enlisted, of a wristlet watch by the employees of the chemical department of Mauri Bros. and Thomson.

Messrs. Orme, Keigwin, and Co., Ltd., have been informed that their late director, Mr. Walter S. Keigwin, has obtained a commission with the 12th Welsh Regiment. Their director, Mr. Chas. H. S. Keigwin, is in England, and is offering his services to the British Aviation Corps. Mr. Russell S. Keigwin (secretary of Orme, Keigwin, and Co., Ltd.) has also obtained a commission in the British Army.

The actual enlistment of those who come forward will take place at the Victoria Barracks the following day (Sunday).

Sykes (younger brother), Walter William Sykes (elder brother), Arthur Leonard Covil, Alfred Bartlett, and Thomas Bartlett. The gatehouse is only a small residence, and it is doubtful if any other place of abode in the State can shew a better record.

THE NAVY.

Ex R.N. and R.A.N. petty officers, leading seamen, stoker petty officers, and leading stokers are invited by advertisement to volunteer for general service, and for shore establishments in the Royal Australian Navy during the period of the war. They will receive the Royal Australian Navy rates of pay of their rating, also for good conduct badges and good conduct medal held, together with marriage allowance, according to regulations at present in force. Volunteers should apply to the captain-in-charge, Garden Island. Applicants should state whether they are desirous of general service or for shore establishments only. In either capacity their services would be of value, as the latter render active service ratings available for sea service.

CASINO, Friday.

Mr. W. Lynn, of Casino, motor-mail contractor for the Glen Innes, Tenterfield, and Lismore mails, has offered to give free transit by his cars to bona fide recruits travelling to the railway and returning home on final leave. He also will convey men returning from the front free on his cars, and if notified will meet wounded soldiers at any train and afford them every facility and comfort.

FARMERS' SONS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

It has been brought under the notice of the Minister for Defence that many young men in rural districts feel that they should be afforded an opportunity of fitting themselves for active service, for which they intend to enlist after harvesting operations. It is essential that many of these young men should remain to cope with the immense task of gathering the bountiful harvest which is confidently expected. In the meantime, the Minister suggests that these men should join their local rifle club, and practise musketry and drill as far as available facilities afford. By doing so their efficiency as soldiers will be very much increased, and their subsequent period of training in camp considerably shortened.

DUBBO.—As a result of the canvass of the Dubbo Recruiting Association upwards of 154 young men have signified their willingness to go to the front, and many have already enlisted. Since the commencement of hostilities over 500 Dubbo and district residents have answered the call.

KEMPSEY.—At a meeting of the Kempsey Recruiting Association yesterday, arrangements were made to secure recruits, and also to make provision for a big meeting when the speakers arrive from Sydney.

The Federal Public Works Committee continued its examination to-day of Mr. W. B. Griffin, Federal Capital Director, as to the location of the proposed small-arms factory at Canberra. Mr. Griffin emphasised the advantages possessed by the northern site over the southern site, which has been recommended by the departmental officers. The committee left to-night for the Federal capital site for the purpose of examining the different points mentioned by Mr. Griffin in his evidence.

AMUSEMENTS.

HER MAJESTY'S—"THE ARCADIANS."

"The Arcadians," revived to-night for one week at Her Majesty's, will include Phil Smith as Simplicitas, Maggie Moore as Mrs. Smith, and Ethel Cadman in her New York character as Sombra, in association with the following:—Peter Doody, Robert Whyte, jun.; Jack Meadows, Leslie Holland; Bobby, Maggie Dickinson; Sir George Paddock, Derek Hudson; Father Time, Harry Burgess; Astrophel, Jack Ralston; and Eileen Cavanagh, Thelma Raye.

"AFTER THE GIRL."

The Royal Comic Opera Company will be seen in Paul Ruben's new revusical comedy, "After the Girl," at Her Majesty's Theatre next Saturday. The chase after the Cincinatti school-girl, Doris Pitt, takes the audience to the Paris Bois, the Belgian Frontier, Amsterdam, Venice, and Petrograd, with correspondingly beautiful scenery. This gay piece will be thus cast:—Freddy Charlston, Leslie Holland; Mr. Pitt (a Cincinatti manufacturer), Harry Burgess; Mr. Clayton (a sporting character), Derek Hudson; Bill Dabeley, Phil Smith; Count Cheeves, Jack Ralston; Doris, Thelma Raye; Emma (maid), Maggie Dickinson; Mrs. Pitt, Maggie Moore; Betty (a Dutch girl), Addie Lennard. The piece will be produced by Harry B. Burcher.

CRITERION THEATRE.

Miss Muriel Starr will make her final appearance to-night in the Colorado mining drama, "Sunday," and on Monday this favourite actress, with Chas. A. Millward and other artists of the combination, will be seen once more in the strong police-drama "Within the Law," the season closing with a farewell representation on Thursday next.

"INSIDE THE LINES."

This new American war-drama, by Der Biggers, which is to open a new dramatic season at the Criterion next Saturday, deals in exciting fashion with the attempt of Captain Woodhouse, a spy employed by German conspirators to destroy the British fleet, the scene being laid at Gibraltar. There will be a cast of 17 characters, introducing a new English actor from America, Ian Maclaren, as Woodhouse, and Charlotte Ives, a Boston actress whose career is quoted in our Music and Drama column, as the heroine, Jane Gersen. The cast will also include J. H. Atholwood, F. Cambourne, G. Chalmers, H. Cavanaugh, Roy Redgrave, Gerald Kay Souper, Eardley Turner, Celia Ghiloni, Marion Marcus Clarke, Gwen Burroughs, Florence Heston, Alma Phillips.

THEATRE ROYAL.

On Friday next the "Glad Eye" comedians will finish their run of "Who's the Lady?" at the Theatre Royal, and on Saturday will produce a musical play in two acts, by A. Riddik, entitled "Stop Your Nonsense." The story deals with a knut, who, refusing to marry a lady of his bankrupt father's choice, wanders into the Highty Flighty Theatre, run by David Burlesko, who is struggling with a very bad company to produce a very bad play. Tom Shelford will play the Knut. There will be two new appearances in Dorothy Hastings and June Addell, and the balance of the cast will be as follows: David Burlesko, Henry Ford; Dolly Gibbs, June Adnel; Mrs. Obadia Gibbs, Sinna St. Clair; Ike Makem, Edward Landor; C.N. Shitter, Harry Sweeney; Absalom Moss, Claud Vernon; Bella Trott, Clarice Hardwicke; Paul Peerless, Dorothy Hastings; Pinero Jones, Reginald Kenneth; Theophilus Budge, Percy Walsh; Julius Lee Gitt, Fred Twitchen; Lord Arrandale, Frank Bradley; E. C. Terms, Fred. Hughes. The ballet will be in charge of Miss Bertha Busch.

"Seven Little Australians" will be staged at 2.15 to-day as usual.

THE LITTLE THEATRE.

"Charley's Aunt," "the three-act scream" at the Little Theatre, where the curtain rises at 8.15 nightly, is well sustaining its reputation as one of the most popular pieces ever written. Mr. George Willoughby explains this by the fact that, whilst fun is the main object of the play, there is a very genuine love interest which the audience follow with tender approval. Mr. Tom Cannam is the new Lord Fancourt Babberley, and he is most humorously ladylike, never stepping out of the picture, yet getting all the laughs of this good modern comedy.

PALACE THEATRE.

The Royal Strollers continue to draw large audiences at the Palace Theatre under the J. and N. Tait direction. They all had a busy day yesterday rattling round with song and merry gibe to swell the war funds, but proved none the less in great form on the stage in the evening. They announce matinees to-day at 2.30, and again on Monday, when, and at night, Mr. Sydney James will vary his clever ventriloquial act; and in song and eccentric dance Madeline Rossiter, G. W. Desmond, Mena Brae, Gwen Lewis, Frank Halton, Cyril Northcote, and Arthur Frost (conductor) will assist.

ADELPHI THEATRE.

"My Mates," Edmund Duggan's humorous Australian drama of life and adventure in the bush, will continue to hold its own at the Adelphi Theatre throughout the coming week, with Walter Bunt and Frederick Nielson as the young settlers, and Ethel Buckley as Bunny, the mirthful aboriginal. Next Saturday Mr. George Marlow will revive "Under Two Flags," a favourite romantic military play founded upon Ouida's novel. In this piece, which will be staged with picturesque Algerian scenes, Ethel Buckley will resume once more one of her best characters as Cigarette.

TIVOLI THEATRE.

Important changes at the Tivoli Theatre will form the new programme for the coming week, and will be introduced this afternoon and evening. Mr. Hugh D. MacIntosh has secured a novel act in Roches's Monkeys, who represent "The Monkey's Music Hall" so as to delight the children and convulse regular playgoers. There will also be the first appearance (from America) of May Erne and "He," entertainers, Crouch and Welch, another lively pair, Walter Weems, Excellas, juggling racquet players, Mlle. Clere, Eileen Watson and her Tivoli Girls, and other artists.

LAST NIGHT OF THE WAR LECTURES.

Louise Mack will this evening make her last appearance at the Repertory Theatre, "Midst Shot, Shell, and Shrapnel," and those who take an intelligent interest in the war should not miss this opportunity of hearing the lady journalist's bright account of what she saw and heard in Brussels, Ostend, and during the siege of Antwerp. The character of the German soldiery, the qualities which make them dangerous enemies, and the heroism of the cheerful Belgian regiments, are all searchingly dwelt upon, with many humorous touches. A vividly illustrative series of "movies" heighten the interest.

ANTHONY HORDERNS' WAR CONCERT.

A concert in aid of the Australia Day Fund has been arranged for this evening in the Town Hall, when a particularly strong programme will be presented. Bentley), and the Palace Emporium Glee Party. Over 1500 seats were reserved within a week of the plan being opened, so that a substantial amount should be realised. The concert is promoted by the Associated Employee's Club of Anthony Hordern and Sons.

GLACIARIUM BAND'S WAR CONCERT.

At the Glaciarium to-morrow night the programme arranged by the combined forces of the Vice-Regal Concert Band and the National Rifle Reserve Band, numbering in all about 140 performers, will include the National Hymns of the Allies, "La Giaconda," Grieg's Suite, "Peer Gynt," and the 1812 Overture. Miss Dulcie Huxtable and Mr. Jack Ralston will be the vocalists, and Messrs. L. de Groen, G. Slapoffski, and Alfred O'Brien will be the conductors.

As the gross proceeds are to go to the Australia Day Fund the Chief Secretary has granted permission on this occasion to make a charge for admission. The plan is at Nicholson's.

CREMORNE RED CROSS.

The committee meeting in connection with the matinee at the Adelphi Theatre on August 14 was held at the Sydney Town Hall on Monday last, there being about a hundred ladies present, including Mrs. B. R. S. McKinnon, who was elected president. Already over 800 tickets have been applied for, and these will be supplied as fast as they can be distributed. The programme will comprise Darnley's three-act farce, "Facing the Music," by the North Sydney District Comedy Club; and a concert by leading artists of Sydney. Bruce E. R. Hutton is the hon. organiser.

SYDNEY MADRIGAL SOCIETY.

The Sydney Madrigal and Chamber Music Society will give their next concert at the Conservatorium Hall, on Thursday evening next. Mr. W. Arundel Orchard will then conduct this body of well-trained voices in part music by Balfour Gardiner, Elgar, John E. West, and some of the old composers, headed by Orlando Gibbons. Miss Vera Tasma, soprano, will make her debut. The Cyril Monk Quartet will assist. Mr. Frank Hutchens will be the pianist. Plan arrangements as advertised.

THE SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

The Sydney Symphony Orchestra at their next concert in the Conservatorium on the afternoon of August 28, will pay a tribute to the late A. J. Delaney, giving a performance of his grand ceremonial march "Triduum." The programme will also include Overture, "Merry Wives of Windsor;" Pathetic Symphony (Tschaikowski); Tone Poem "Orpheus" (Liszt); Air for "G" string (Bach); and "Albion" (Beaten). Students are now allowed to attend rehearsals on payment of a small fee, and thus follow from the score.

AUSTRAL STRING QUARTET.

The final concert of the Austral String Quartet's 1915 season will be given at St. James's Hall on Tuesday next, at 8 p.m., when a feature of interest will be the first performance in Australia of a new French work by Armedee Reuchel. The assisting artists will be Miss Muriel Barton and Mr. John Carlton Fay. The plan is at Nicholson's.

MISS ROSS'S WAR CONCERT.

On Wednesday evening next Miss Eleanor Ross will recite at a concert entertainment, which leading artists are assisting her to give at the Repertory Theatre in aid of the Red Cross movement. Mme. Gaubert will sing "Softly Awakes My Heart," and the Prelude to Ronand's "Cycle of Life." Miss Mollie David will contribute Greek dances, and Mr. F. Mowat Carter and Mr. Frank Hutchens will assist. The plan, at popular prices, is at Paling's.

ANCELON-CHAPMAN RECITALS.

The next Ancelon-Chapman recital will take place on Thursday evening next in St. James's Hall. The programme will comprise scenes, short plays, sketches, and recitations. The plan is at Paling's.

Over 30 of the Ancelon school students assisted at various halls in city and suburbs for Australia Day.

MISS NANCE EAGAR'S PLAY.

On Thursday next Miss Nance Eagar will produce, in aid of Australia Day, at the Repertory Theatre, her new play, "The Kids from Kangaroo Land." The children playing principal parts lately held a bazaar in aid of the movement, which realised £15.

THE WELSH CONCERT.

Captain Griffiths announced at the recent meeting of the Cymrodorion Society, held in the School of Arts, that the concert to be held by the Welsh choir in aid of "Australia Day" had been definitely fixed for Saturday, next, at the Repertory Theatre. All communications should be addressed to the secretary, as notified.

METROPOLITAN BAND MATINEE.

Under the direction of Mr. John Balmer, the Metropolitan Band will, at the Town Hall, on Sunday, August 8, hold the fourth of their series of matinee concerts. Besides selections by the band, there will be vocal and instrumental solos by Mr. Sid. Macdonald, Miss Varra Latcham, Miss Tessie Marshall, Mr. T. Quinn, Miss Belle McElhone, and Mr. Chas. Philip.

NALL-FRENCH SOLDIERS' RECITAL.

At St. James's Hall on Tuesday, August 10, a vocal and elocutionary entertainment will be given by Miss Dorothy Nall and Mr. Percy French. The assisting artists will be Misses Alice L. Harker, Ula Morrow, Gertrude Williams, P. Brady, Messrs. John Carlton Fay, E. James-Davidson, and A. J. Thistlewaite. The plan is at Palings.

THE DANDIES.

Mr. Edward Branscombe's versatile entertainers, the "Green and Pink Dandies," are still showing to good houses nightly at North Sydney and Bondi Junction. The programmes are changed every Friday.

GLENQUARRY WAR CONCERT.

A concert in aid of "Mothers' Thirty Thousand" was recently organised by Mr. W. A. Coulson, and held in the Public school, Glenquarry; the net return being nearly £9. It is hoped that "Australia Day" will result in a return of £25 or more.

CREMORNE RED CROSS MATINEE.

Bruce R. Hutton has arranged a matinee at the Adelphi Theatre for Saturday, August 14, that house having been given gratuitously by Mr. George Marlow. The North Sydney District Comedy Club will stage the popular farcical comedy "Facing the Music," and an attractive musical programme will be furnished by the leading concert artists of Sydney. The whole performance is under the auspices of the Cremorne Red Cross Association. The plan will open next Thursday at Paling's.

An unusually interesting feature will be offered to patrons of the Crystal Palace Theatre on Monday in the form of a film version of Henrik Ibsen's famous play "Ghosts," which will star a well-known film actor Henry B. "O'Garry of the Royal Mounted," a Vitagraph feature drama, is being starred at the Colonial Theatre. An instalment of the Pathe production "The Perils of Pauline" will be shown at the Empress Theatre.

The programme includes the Charles Chaplin film "The Tramp." On Monday there will be a complete change, introducing "The Pearl of the Ganges." This film is from the Gloria Company, and entirely reproduces life in India.

DEATH OF MR. C. S. GUEST.

OLD-TIME RACING SECRETARY AND MILITARY OFFICER.

General regret was expressed in sporting circles yesterday when it became known that Mr. Charles Septimus Guest, of Richmond, was dead. For over forty years Mr. Guest was secretary to the Hawkesbury Race Club, having guided its destinies in the prosperous days of the 'seventies and 'eighties, and carefully steered the old institution through the troubled financial waters of the early 'nineties, until, at the present, it is one of the soundest clubs in this State. He was also secretary to the Hawkesbury Agricultural Association, and that he also managed with characteristic zeal and efficiency. He also took a great interest in military matters, and was connected with the local militia forces, in which he gained the rank of Colonel in command of the 3rd Australian Infantry Regiment, retiring after 41 years' service. He was a champion rifle shot, having won many prizes in that branch of the game. In his younger days he was engaged in the saddlery business in Richmond, but for many years past he carried on the business of auctioneer and land and estate agent. A couple of years ago he had an attack of ill-health, from which he apparently had recovered, and his death yesterday morning was quite unexpected. He had attained the age of 66 years, and leaves a wife and daughter. By the death of Mr. Guest the town of Richmond loses a sterling and useful citizen, and the public bodies with which he was so long associated an energetic, efficient, and trustworthy secretary.

HAND GRENADES.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Minister for Defence (Senator Pearce) said yesterday that the Defence Department desired to impress upon inventors of hand grenades that it is quite unnecessary and dangerous to charge them when submitting the invention. All that is required is a small drawing and a description, or a small model without any explosive fillings. Full official experiments would be made, and modifications, if necessary, suggested to any invention that showed promise of being effective. An inventor had recently submitted three charged bombs, weighing over 4lb each, to the Defence Department. As they were encased in a composition, which prevented any internal inspection, they were destroyed without delay. This inventor had taken notes in the manufacture and conveyance of these bombs, which in the interests of public safety, said the Minister, should be discouraged.

CABLES TO SOLDIERS.

Further information with regard to cables to soldiers and sailors of his Majesty's forces, whether well, wounded, or sick, has been officially supplied. The quarter rate (9d a word) for week-end cables, includes Gibraltar, Malta, France, Belgium, and England, but the week-end rate to Egypt will be 10½d a word. As against this slight extra charge, a person in Australia or New Zealand can, by adding "Reply R.T.P." (which will be reckoned as one word), enable the soldier or sailor in Egypt to reply in 12 words, the money for the reply being collected from the recipient at this end.

According to the amended regulations of the Pacific Cable Board, July, 1915, prepaid replies must be paid for at the full rates. The addressee will be able to use the amount prepaid to pay for either a full rate or a deferred (half-rate) telegram, or a week-end cable letter.

THE WOMEN.

ORGANISING FOR NATIONAL SERVICE.

At a meeting of the executive of the National Council of Women it was decided to set on foot a movement for the voluntary organisation of women for national service. A sub-committee was appointed to gather information and formulate a scheme. A meeting of the council, to which all women interested will be invited, will be held next Thursday afternoon at the Royal Society's room.

MUNITION MAKING.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—As many difficulties at present impede the making in Australia of shrapnel or high explosive shells for big guns, I would suggest that something be done in other directions. Our troops are engaged in trench fighting, in which the evidence goes to show that bombs are more effective than bayonets. We read of hand-grenades being made by the engineers at the front in France; surely, then, we could do as well or better in our workshops here. Nor need there be any delay waiting for samples or drawings, for could we not develop our own type of bomb. Can there be any doubt as to the value of thousands of bombs each week for the use of our troops at Gallipoli.

Perhaps also some form of magnesium or other type of flare light could be made here. Again, our engineers might devote attention to the production of some form of heavy bomb thrower for trench work, and to the construction of a plant for breaking down wire entanglements. Let us keep in mind the actual present necessities of the Australian forces, and endeavour to give them useful machines for the work that is immediately before them, viz., holding of trenches and capture of further not very distant trenches. Perhaps some form of light shield would be useful, and smoke or stink bombs. Let us get good Australian brains at work, and make and send along the goods without worrying the people at the other end for advice and instructions when their hands are so full with their own affairs.

I am, etc.,

A. J. H.

The charter granted to the borough of Fowey—("Troy Town")—in 1690 has been discovered in a bookshop, where it lay for 30 years, and has been presented to the town. Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch is presenting to the Town Council an impression in plaster of Paris of the old borough seal of 1702.

THE Anniversary of the Declaration of War brings with it many calls, but none so strong as the call to Prayer. The loss of so many splendid young lives, the sufferings of the wounded, and the growing drain on our resources come to us like the great cry, "Return unto the Lord and He will have mercy." The message of the day truly is "Do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with thy God." Wednesday, Aug. 4th, 1915, should, above all else, be a world-wide Day of Prayer.

ADVERTISEMENT WRITERS AND MANAGERS WANTED.

During the last few weeks a considerable number of first-class posts in the Advertising Profession have been advertised in the "Situations Vacant" columns of this and other papers, and in several instances these advertisements have appeared again and again, showing obviously the difficulty the Firms advertising had in obtaining qualified applicants. If YOU had taken our Special Correspondence Course in Advertising, the Course written by practical men for Students, both men and women, who wish to learn in their spare time, YOU could have filled one of the posts advertised. However, the old motto, "Better late than never," applies in this case as in others, so write TO-DAY for full and free particulars of our Course. Remember, we are Advertising Specialists—we teach nothing else but Advertising, the best-paid Profession for men and women.

WHY WILL YOU NOT COME AND SEE ME?

Instead of staying at home thinking over what you will do to rid yourself of those disfiguring

SUPERFLUOUS HAIRS.

Remember, I am here to cure you, so just come and have a chat.

I WILL CONVINCE YOU THAT this process, which has been recognised BY MEDICAL SCIENCE for the past forty-five years, and with which I have worked for the past fifteen years, and cured thousands much worse than yourself,

IS PERMANENT.

I have removed from one lady THIRTEEN THOUSAND HAIRS without scar and very little pain, for I can do it PAINLESS, so the most nervous can be treated; but the process, being a delicate one, MUST BE DONE by an experienced operator.

I AM

and have no hesitation in claiming to be such, having been established IN SYDNEY ALONE working from day to day, year after year, FOR FIFTEEN YEARS.

Come and convince yourself by having a FREE TRIAL TREATMENT. This is given with pleasure, and the hairs will be magnified to show the root. TIME AND WORK MUST CONVINCE.

A WRITTEN GUARANTEE

FOR PERMANENT REMOVAL.

And I will remove a certain number for a moderate fee, so do not think the treatment will be expensive.

I PERSONALLY TREAT AND SUPERVISE ALL MY WORK.

Chatswood, April 11.

Dear Madam,—I thank you sincerely for your treatment, which I much enjoyed, and am certain my skin will greatly benefit, and hope to continue occasional treatments. With many thanks,
Yours sincerely, E.L.

If you are troubled by a Dried Skin, Wrinkles, or Blackheads,

COME AT ONCE.

You will be made happy and will not have to remain at home because you have a bad skin.

"NETTOYER" CREAM

SUNBURN AND FRECKLES

CAN BE CURED BY "NETTOYER" FRECKLE CREAM, 5/6, including postage. Be sure and state which you require when posting.
